SUSPECTS HELD IN BABY MURDER IN ARGENTINA

Itinerant Peon Who Disappeared Day Child Was Kidnaped and Five Others Detained.

ARMED POLICE GUARD JAIL

Abductor Apparently Strangled Infant in Pigpen on Its Father's Estate Thursday.

By the Associated Press.

LA PLATA, Argentina, Feb. 27.—Several suspects were arrested after two-year-old Eugenio Peyrera Iraola, kidnaped member of a wealthy Argentine family, was found strangled to death today. The body, bearing a scalp wound and a cut on one leg, was discovered in a pigpen a mile and a half from the family home on La Sorpresa, his parents' great estate. The arms were crossed over the chest.

A police communique tonight announced the baby's death was due to strangulation. There were no other marks of violence except scratches, probably caused by wire through which the kidnaper dragged the child between the house and the scene of the killing.

Police said the child's clothing was found in perfect condition in a cornfield about half a mile from the spot where the body was discovered. Apparently the child was murdered Thursday, the day after the kidnaping.

The child's brother, Miguel, who saw the kidnaping has been under a doctor's care. He said he saw "a strange, bearded man" pick up the baby Wednesday afternoon.

Police Guard Jail.

Jose Gancedo, an itinerant peon, who disappeared Wednesday from the estate of the boy's parents, was arrested as a suspect.

He was taken to view the body and the place where it was found but showed no emotion. The authorities said he was subnormal mentally. He recently shaved off his beard.

Policemen, armed with rifles, guarded the jail where Gancedo was imprisoned, when a crowd gathered about the building.

Another itinerant also was taken into custody when found hiding under a harvesting machine near the pigpen.

Others in Custody.

Mar del Plata police also held Jose and Daniel Silva, Jose's wife, Teresa, and their daughter. Daniel Silva had, a short time ago, been discharged as administrator of the 6600-acre estate of the Peyrera Iraola family.

The child's father, Simon Peyrera Iraola, a wealthy horsebreeder who had been directing the search from Mar del Plata, returned to La Sorpresa, on learning of the finding of the body, but the baby's mother remained in the resort city, overcome with grief. The child's grandfather, Senator Antonio Santa Marina, drove from Mar del Plata to La Sorpresa.

POPE WANTS TO PAY VISIT TO ST. PETER'S ON EASTER

Hopes to Be Well Enough to Bless Crowd Gathering Before Cathedral.

By the Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 27.—Pope Pius hopes to be well enough by Easter to make a public appearance at St. Peter's, the Vatican announced tonight. He has expressed a desire to give his blessing from a balcony to the crowd which usually gathers in the square before the cathedral.

He revived the old custom of Easter appearances after the Lateran treaty was signed in 1929, establishing the independent sovereignty of the Vatican.

The Pope received a communication today from the British Government requesting him to appoint an official representative to the coronation of King George VI in London next May.

SIT-DOWN STRIKE IN THEATER

Two Children Refuse to Leave Until More Movies Are Shown.

By the Associated Press.

MEXIA, Tex., Feb. 27. — Seven hundred children at a matinee staged a sit-down strike at a theater here today in protest against shortening of a movie program and against the quality of the short subjects shown. Adults unable to obtain seats remained in the foyer.

The manager finally refunded the adult admissions and acceded to the children's demand for more entertainment. The 45-minute demonstration began when an announcement was made that an advertised picture could not be shown because of delay in transit.

Strike at '5 and 10' Store, 100 Girls in Possession

Quit Work at Rush Hour in Detroit — Leader Picks Police Squad After Several Sneak Out to Keep 'Dates.'

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Feb. 27.—More than 100 girls—most of them 18 to 20 years old—started the first "five and ten" sit-down strike here today, had lunch "on the house" and started to worry about their economic and social problems.

One was their demand for a general 10-cent hourly pay increase, but there were others, as they gathered in groups behind locked store doors.

"Gosh, I've got a date with my boy friend," one girl said. 'He's going to think I'm standing him up."

"Forget it," her neighbor told her, looking at a crowd of curious peering in the doors. "I guess half the people in town have heard about us already."

Veta Terrall, 24-year-old strike committee chairman, took cognizance of the problem, after half a dozen strikers deserted with the connivance of stock room boys who used service keys to open a basement door through which the girls left to keep their "dates."

Miss Terrall immediately assigned three girls to prevent further desertions.

The girls then decided to spend the night in the store.

Strike Called in Crowded Store.

The store, a unit of the F. W. Woolworth Co., chain, was crowded with shoppers at 11 a. m. when F. A. Loew, organizer for the waiters and waitresses' association, an American Federation of Labor union, walked down the center aisle.

"Strike, girls—strike," he called.

A floorwalker hastily summoned William F. Mayor, store manager who promised to "do everything possible" for the girls on Monday if they would return to work. They greeted this with a chorus of "No!"

Louis Koenig, union business agent, presented to A. J. Dahlquist, district Woolworth superintendent, the strikers' demands for a 10-cent hourly wage increase, elimination of overtime, with a 48-hour work week for girl employes and a 54-hour week for men in the bakery and kitchen.

Lunch on the House.

At 1 p. m., the manager appeared to make an announcement.

"Go downstairs and have lunch," he told the girls. "It's on the house."

Dahlquist communicated the union demands to the company's regional headquarters at Cleveland. Strike leaders said the girls would not leave until a settlement is reached.

The manager said a wage increase of $1 weekly for all employes on full time was effective today, providing a $14 minimum for counter girls. The girls said half the employes were working less than full time, with many earning $10.44 weekly.

During the afternoon there were songs at the music counter, and long lines of girls waited their chance at three pay-station telephones to tell families and friends to "expect me when you see me."

FIVE "DODGERS" OF PUBLICITY CHOSEN BY CORRESPONDENTS

At Party Roosevelt Attends, News Men Furnish Him With Ideas for White House Staff.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Newspaper men satirically selected tonight the men "with a passion for anonymity" whom President Roosevelt recently said he wanted for a White House staff.

In its annual burlesque of national affairs—attended by the President—the White House Correspondents' Association nominated these:

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Father Charles E. Coughlin, the Detroit radio priest.

Representative Hamilton Fish (Rep.), New York, who was designated as "the other hermit of the Hudson Valley" (Roosevelt's home).

Former Gov. James M. Curley of Massachusetts.

Dr. Stanley (All-Time) High of the Good Neighbor League, who campaigned for the President last fall.

At the news men's dinner with the President were three of his sons, John, Franklin and James.

BROKER SURRENDERS ON ARSON CHARGE

Pleads Not Guilty of Setting Afire $200,000 Home at Tuxedo Park.

By the Associated Press.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Feb. 27. — Col. Frank B. Keech, a Wall Street broker, surrendered at the Courthouse here late today to answer arson charges in connection with the destruction, in 1932, of his Tuxedo Park home, valued at $200,000.

The wealthy broker, sought since Thursday, was arraigned immediately, pleaded not guilty before Supreme Court Justice Graham Witschief and was released on $50,000 bail.

The pleading was to indictments charging second and third degree arson and conspiracy to defraud insurance companies of $177,000. The indictments were returned Thursday.

John E. Mack, Keech's attorney, was allowed 15 days in which to make a motion to enter a demurrer to the indictments. Mack announced prior to his client's surrender that Keech had no knowledge of the origin of the fire.

District Attorney Henry Hirschberg announced after Keech had entered his plea that the case would be moved to County Court, and that the date for the trial would probably be set within 15 days.

Keech was indicted following the arrest in North Carolina of Charles F. Smith, formerly his chauffeur, who is held in jail here under an indictment charging second degree arson.

JANUARY INDUSTRIAL SLUMP REPORTED BY RESERVE BOARD

Steel Production Below Seasonal Gain; Auto Output Curtailed by Strikes.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The Federal Reserve Board said today that industrial activity slumped in January after a steady climb since October. The board's seasonally-adjusted index of industrial production which usually swings upward in January, was 115 per cent of the 1923-25 average, compared with 121 in December and 114 in November.

Steel production showed some increase, but the gain was less than the usual seasonal upturn. The board observed that automobile output was curtailed by strikes in January and the first half of February and added that since these have been settled production has risen sharply.

Substantial decreases were listed in January production of lumber mills, plate glass factories, textile mills and meat packing establishments. There was a substantial rise in the value of construction contracts.

Siren Causes "Seasickness."

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 27.—A Swedish engineer has invented a siren which he says will awaken anyone asleep with a radius of a mile. Persons within 50 yards will be so affected by the sound as to exhibit symptoms of seasickness, he declares.

GERMAN CHURCHES ARE TOLD TO GIVE LAND TO PEOPLE

Nazis Ask for Voluntary Action to Avoid "Necessity of Compulsory Measures" by Government.

2,470,000 ACRES IN CLERICAL HANDS

Monasteries, Convents and Protestant Organizations Hold Large Tracts in Country.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb 27.—The Government called on German churches tonight to share part of their lands with the landless and spoke of the "necessity of compulsory measures" if they failed to do so voluntarily.

Hans Kerrl, minister for church affairs, appealed to the Evangelical churches and German bishops to co-operate wholeheartedly in the Government's task of finding land for small settlers.

The order came after the propaganda ministry announced delegates to the general synod of the Protestant church would be elected April 4 in conformance with Reichsfuehrer Hitler's order putting control of Protestant church affairs back in the hands of church members.

For the churches to act with the same enthusiasm with which the Government has given land to settlers, Kerrl said, would be in keeping with their mission. A citizen's "spiritual welfare" unquestionably would be furthered if he were helped to find a home, he said.

Churches Have 2,470,000 Acres.

Religious organizations own approximately 2,470,000 acres of Germany's agricultural and forest lands. Monasteries, convents and Protestant churches are among the principal owners.

Nazi party headquarters a few months ago issued statistics showing that 27 per cent of all German land is in the hands of the churches and a few large landholders, and the remaining 73 per cent is divided among 3,900,000 farmers and settlers.

The announcement of the General Synod election brought no immediate comment from three important church groups, the Confessional Synod, the Lutheran State church of Bavaria, Wurttemberg and Hanover and the non-Nazi Church committees, which had threatened to boycott the election.

Those groups had demanded, among other things, that the election be indirect, but the propaganda ministry's statement said the church members themselves would directly choose the synod delegates, probably 60 in number.

The three opposing bodies had insisted the voters merely select parish elders, who would name delegates to district synods. The delegates would choose members of state synods and they would select the general synod's personnel.

Hitler Says Committee Failed.

Hitler ordered the election Feb. 15 on the ground the officially-appointed church committee had "not succeeded in bringing about unity in the German Evangelical Church."

Coincident with the propaganda ministry's announcement of the election date came the disclosure that Doctor Weissler, chief of the Administrative Bureau of the Confessional Synod's provisional church government, had committed suicide by hanging with a handkerchief in a concentration camp cell at Oranienburg a few days ago.

Arrested in October with a young vicar, Weissler, a baptized Jew, was transferred to the concentration camp early in February. His father, a noted professor of criminal law at Halle University, committed suicide over grief at Germany's signing of the Versailles Treaty.

GOVERNMENT SURVEY BEGUN TO MAKE CLOTHES FIT

Standard Sizes for Children to Be Determined by Measuring 100,000 Youngsters.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27. — The Government has decided to do something about clothes that do not fit the buyer.

Home economics experts will equip hundreds of college boys and girls with tape measures and explicit directions in an effort to learn just what dimensions, for example, a size 12 dress or suit should be.

Students on the payrolls of the National Youth Administration will take 40 different measurements of 100,000 children between 1 and 14 years of age. The data will become the basis of standards for garment and pattern manufacturers. Later the clothing experts hope to do the same thing for adults.

EACH SIDE GAINS ONE RECRUIT ON COURT PROPOSAL

Donahey, Ohio, Declares Against, Smathers, New Jersey, for Roosevelt Plan—Both Democrats.

SENATOR POPE, ON RADIO FAVORS IDEA

Tomorrow, First Decision Day by Supreme Bench in Two Weeks, May Dispose of New Deal Cases.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27. — Supporters and opponents of the Roosevelt retirement proposal for reorganizing the judiciary gained a Senate recruit apiece today.

Senator Smathers (Dem.), New Jersey, declared for the White House program, asserting that "all the people of the nation will be best served by adding new and younger members to the Supreme Court, men with liberal and progressive approach to the nation's social and economic problems."

Senator Donahey (Dem.), Ohio, aligned himself with the opposition and said: "This entire controversy vitally affects the judiciary, a coordinate branch of the Government, and should be referred to the people—the source of all political power."

The decisions of Smathers to back and Donahey to oppose the President's bill, brought the number of declared supporters of the measure in the Senate to 26 and the avowed opponents to about 30. However, the opposition is claiming a minimum of 42 votes today.

Retirement Bill Awaits Signing.

Meanwhile the Supreme Court retirement act, which has been before Congress two sessions, awaited President Roosevelt's certain signature. (This bill provides that Supreme Court Justices may retire with full pay after reaching 70 years of age. President Roosevelt's proposal, yet to be acted on, provides that for every judge past 70 who fails to retire a new judge shall be appointed.)

Senator Pope (Dem.), Idaho, in a radio speech tonight urged the enactment of the Roosevelt legislation, asserting that a major portion of a legislative program approved by the people in the last election is "at the mercy of the reactionary judges packed into the court by former Presidents."

Decision Day Tomorrow.

The court itself, meanwhile, prepared for its first decision day in two weeks, next Monday. The Tribunal has had under consideration three rulings which might have a direct bearing on the controversy and President Roosevelt's appeal for "enlightened interpretation" of the Constitution.

Two of the cases involve the constitutionality of the Wagner Labor Relations Act and of a Washington State law imposing minimum wage standards. In addition, the court had yet to grant or refuse a rehearing on the New York Unemployment Insurance law, on which it split four-to-four early in the present session.

Changing With the Times.

Smathers, who has yet to take the oath of office as Senator, said: "I will take my seat in the United States Senate in time to support the President's Federal judiciary proposal to the limit of my energy and ability. . . . With all due respect to the Supreme Court and the integrity of its members, I believe that the infusion of some members possessing youth—men who have been able to change with the changing times, men who possess the faculty of thinking and acting in terms of today and tomorrow, men who are conscious of the social and economic evils and whirlpools of today, men who have seen the horrors of the coal pits, the sweat shops, the slums, the sweltering dust storm fields and the flooded valleys—will not only benefit the court by giving it a proper balance, but will save the country from social and economic chaos and disaster."

Victor over W. Warren Barbour, Republican incumbent, in the November election, Smathers has delayed going to Washington in order to hold his seat in the New Jersey State Senate. He said he would take the oath as United States Senator March 9, the day before Senate committee hearings on the court proposal are to begin.

Donahey and Pope.

"The constitution is the foundation of our government," said Donahey. "The fathers builded the community temple and placed it in our hands for safe keeping, then passed on. It is our solemn duty to place it in the hands of those who

AMERICAN ARRESTED FOR BERLIN KILLING

Admits Shooting 82-Year-Old German He Encountered on Street.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 27.—German police held John Joseph Hughes, 26-year-old New Yorker, in custody tonight on accusation of shooting to death Oskar Hoffmann, a German.

Authorities disclosed the shooting took place on a street last night, but said they were unable to advance a motive for the attack on Hoffmann, an 82-year-old retired business man.

Ernest Dahlmann, well-known German criminal lawyer retained as defense counsel by United States consular officials, declared an examination of Hughes' mental condition might be made before further legal steps were taken. He said charges against Hughes, if they are made, would "presumably be manslaughter."

Hughes, registered at the Esplanade Hotel as an insurance broker, told police that Hoffmann gave him "the impression" he was about to attack him.

Hughes drew a pistol and fired three shots, police said Hughes admitted. The first shot, which struck Hoffmann in the mouth, was fatal.

Passersby summoned police, who took Hughes into custody at a nearby house.

"Whatever may have been Hughes' motive," declared Raymond H. Geist, United States Consul who visited the prisoner, "we are convinced there is no political or racial angle to it."

Hoffmann was an Aryan but was not a member of the Nazi party.

The victim's daughter, Frau Engel, declared Hoffmann was blind in one eye and had only partial sight from the other, which caused him to walk peculiarly and might have led him to bump into Hughes. She said her father left home only one evening a week to play cards with cronies.

Hughes had been living in Germany three months, authorities said, and had attracted the attention of hotel employes recently when he asked to use a hotel room for target practice. His request was refused and members of the hotel staff said he frequently asked incoherent questions and acted peculiarly.

At the time of his arrest, Hughes had only four marks (about $1.60) in his possession, but said he was expecting money from the United States soon.

DETECTIVE ROESLER ALSO SAW SULLIVAN'S BROTHER KILLED

John, Working for a Show, Was on Top of Snow-Laden Tent When It Collapsed.

Detective Raymond Roesler, who was with Detective-Sergeant Thomas J. Sullivan when Sullivan was fatally wounded in a pistol fight with two escaped convicts Thursday, also saw Sullivan's brother, John, killed, Roesler disclosed yesterday.

When they were boys, Roesler was a close friend of John Sullivan, and also was friendly with Thomas Sullivan, although the latter was seven years older than Roesler. One day in December, 1912, when Roesler was 13 years old, he watched John Sullivan, who worked for a tent show at Lee and Turner avenues, climb up to the top of the tent to brush off a heavy snow that was causing the tent to sag.

With the added weight, the tent collapsed. John fell on his head and was killed.

BAD WEATHER FLIGHTS CURTAILED IN WEST

Airlines Serving Los Angeles Delay or 'Truck' 156 Schedules in Month.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 27.—Major airlines with terminals at Burbank airport have either delayed or "trucked" 156 schedules in the last four weeks in accordance with their policies of curtailing flights during bad weather.

"Trucking" company spokesmen explained, indicates the practice of grounding planes approaching treacherous mountain areas during bad weather and transporting the passengers by bus.

Western Air Express had a total of 336 outbound and inbound schedules during the four-week period, of which 68 were either canceled or trucked.

United Air Lines booked 450 trips, of which 79 were either canceled or trucked.

Transcontinental & Western Air spokesmen said they operated on full schedule basis during the last four weeks with the exception of three outbound planes, which were delayed to await favorable weather, and six inbound planes which discharged passengers at Palmdale, Cal., to be taken by automobile through the mountain passes near which two airliners have crashed recently.

30 HURT BY GAS BOMBS IN NEW YORK MOVIE HOUSES

All Attacks Were on Houses Owned by One Chain; Nobody Seriously Injured.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Thirty or more persons were injured tonight when stench and tear gas bombs were exploded simultaneously in several upper Broadway motion picture theaters.

None of the injured was seriously hurt. Most of those treated were cut by glass or suffered inflammation of the eyes.

Most of the bombs were placed near the rear of the theaters on the main floor and police thought they were exploded by a time device. A watch was found in one of the theaters.

All of the theaters, where the bombs were exploded, were owned by a chain, which operates about 35 motion picture houses in the city.

In the Carlton Theater, the bomb was exploded in the eighth row from the rear. The house engineer heard it explode and opened all the exits. Fragments of the glass container and a cheap watch were found. Eight persons were injured in this theater. There were 1100 persons in the Stoddard Theater, which was cleared for almost half an hour while the fumes were blown out. One patron of the theater, James Fleming, 26, received lacerations of the left leg and was taken to a hospital. Five other patrons of the Stoddard received medical treatment for lacerations.

LOUISVILLE BAR 4 TO 1 AGAINST ROOSEVELT PLAN

202 of 250 Members Take Part in Poll Resulting 164 to 38.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 27.—Louisville lawyers stand 4 to 1 against President Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganization proposal, Gilbert Burnett, president of the Louisville Bar Association, announces today.

He said 202 of the 250 members voted. The count was 38 for and 164 against the plan.

FORTIFIED PRISON TAKEN BY LOYALISTS AT OVIEDO

Many Insurgents and Great Quantities of Munitions Are Seized in Capture of One of Main Barriers to the City.

TANKS PRESS REBELS BACK NEAR MADRID

Relieve Pressure at Point on Valencia Road; Big Shells Scatter Crowds in Center of Capital; Business Buildings Hit.

By the Associated Press.

BAYONNE, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Feb. 27.—Spanish Government militiamen captured the Oviedo prison today and drove steadily along the streets leading to the center of the long-besieged city, Government reports reaching here tonight said.

The prison, the accounts said, was one of the insurgents' last remaining heavily-fortified positions in the war-scarred capital of Asturias.

Many insurgents and great quantities of munitions were seized in the old building, the reports said. Then the advance stalled in a rain storm, which also prevented planes from taking off, and both sides took the opportunity to recuperate from the hand-to-hand fighting of the past seven days.

The insurgents have held Oviedo for months. The Government push into the city's outskirts has sent the defenders behind ramparts and even underground, but the insurgents still hold out as did their comrades in the Alcazar at Toledo.

Conflicting Loss Reports.

A statement from insurgent headquarters at Salamanca, Spain, declared the Government's second big offensive at Oviedo had been resisted successfully. Insurgent commanders within the beleaguered city asserted the attacks had cost the Government forces 12,000 men and that their own losses were "minor."

Refugees arriving in Bayonne by warships from Santander declared, however, casualties had been high in both Government and insurgent ranks at Oviedo. Three train-loads of wounded from the Oviedo front were brought to Santander Thursday, they said.

Authorities of the Basque Government at Bilboa, which is under the supervision of the Madrid-Valencia regime, said an examination of mines placed at the port of La Sarenas showed they were of German manufacture.

Shells Hit Business Buildings in Downtown Madrid.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, Feb. 27.—Crash of insurgent shells broke a five weeks' respite for Central Madrid today.

The shelling, beginning at 3:45 p. m., lasted an hour. Eight shells were counted in mid-city.

Authorities said there were "some" casualties. Two persons are known to have been hurt by the first shell, which sent a shower of masonry to the sidewalk when it burst against a business building in an area crowded by citizens no longer heeding danger zones.

The second shell passed through a nearby building and exploded in Hortaleza street. Another burst in the Plaza Espana, near the statue of Don Quixote and Sancho Panza.

Three shells struck one building, adding three more holes to the 39 it bore from previous bombardments.

Behavior of People.

Madrilenos, going about their business in cold, cloudy weather, screamed when the first shell hit. Children scattered for shelter. Passersby dragged a wounded man into a cellar. In Madrid's long food queues women, knitting on camp chairs, jumped to their feet. Some clung to each other. Mothers rushed to children playing nearby.

Street cars continued to run, the passengers' startled faces peering from the windows. Excited refugees clustered in basements, asking about their friends.

Crowds stood in cafes along the Gran Via, main business street, to watch the hits. Some watchers sipped their coffee calmly, watching through plate glass windows.

Hawkers Cry Their Wares.

An hour after the bombardment crowds were on the streets again, gaping at the shell holes and crying: "Look where that fellow hit!" All were six-inch shells. Sidewalk

NEUTRALITY BILL DEBATE IN SENATE OPENS TOMORROW

Pittman Measure Up—House Plan Similar but Gives President More Discretionary Power.

AIM TO STRENGTHEN THE EXPIRING LAW

Absolute Authority Conferred on Executive to Define and Restrict Materials for Shipment.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Overshadowed by President Roosevelt's court reform program during the last two weeks, the administration's neutrality proposals will come up for debate Monday when the Senate starts consideration of the Pittman bill which has received a favorable report from the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. A similar bill, but giving more discretionary power to the President, has been favorably reported by the House Foreign Affairs Committee and it may be considered later in the week. Its sponsor is McReynolds of Tennessee, chairman of the House committee.

Both resolutions undertake to rewrite and strengthen the neutrality law of August, 1935, which expires May 1.

Changes in Pending Bills.

The principal changes proposed in the new drafts are as follows:

The President of the United States is authorized to enumerate materials in addition to arms, ammunition and implements of war, on the shipment of which to belligerent countries restrictions may be placed. Such articles would include copper, steel, iron and possibly foodstuffs.

The existing embargo on arms and munitions of war for international combatants is extended to cases of civil strife in foreign countries, when such armed conflict, in the judgment of the President, is of such magnitude, or is conducted under such conditions, that the export of arms to either faction would endanger the peace of the United States.

It shall be unlawful, under penalty of a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than five years, or both, for citizens of the United States to travel on any vessel or aircraft of a belligerent nation. The law now in force merely proclaims that citizens traveling on such vessels do so at their own risk.

Bar on Trans-Shipment.

In the case both of international conflict and of foreign civil war, it is made unlawful for United States citizens to dispatch any article or materials whatsoever to any combatant, or to any neutral port for trans-shipment to such combatants, unless "all right, title and interest therein shall have been transferred to some foreign Government, agency, institution, association, partnership, corporation or national."

Americans who fail to observe the conditions of the provision just cited automatically forfeit all property rights in such shipments. The United States Government will refuse to put forward any claim rising from the loss of such articles and materials, or based on insurance policies issued on them.

The license fee of manufacturers of munitions doing an annual business of less than $50,000 is reduced from $500 to $100 for a five-year term.

The authority of the President to restrict the entrance and departure of belligerent submarines in American territorial waters is extended to include armed merchant vessels.

All American vessels engaged in commerce with a belligerent country or with a country at civil war are forbidden to arm themselves, beyond such small arms and ammunition as the officers may require for maintaining discipline.

Absolute Power for President.

With unimportant changes of phraseology, the leading provision of the neutrality law is retained, as follows: "Whenever the President shall find that there exists a state of war between, or among, two or more foreign states, the President shall proclaim such fact, and it shall thereafter be unlawful to export arms, ammunition or implements of war from any place in the United States, or possessions of the United States, to any such belligerent state, or to any neutral state for trans-shipment to, or for the use of a belligerent state."

Under the new form of both the Senate and House proposals, absolute power is conferred on the President not only to define but to govern the restriction of articles and materials outside materials of war. The language of the provision, virtually identical in both drafts, is as follows:

"Whenever the President shall have issued a proclamation or proclamations as provided in Section 1 of this act and he shall thereafter find that the placing of restrictions on the shipment of certain articles or materials in addition to arms, ammunition and implements of war from the United States to said belligerents named in the proclamation issued under said Section 1, or to a country in which civil strife has been proclaimed to exist, is deemed necessary to promote the security or preserve the peace or neutrality of the United States or to protect the lives and commerce of nationals of the United States, he shall so proclaim, and it shall thereafter be unlawful for any American vessel or aircraft to carry such articles or materials to any belligerent country, or any country wherein civil strife exists, named in such proclamation or proclamations issued under Section 1 of this act, or to any other country for trans-shipment to, or for the use of, such belligerent countries or within such country, where civil strife exists.

"The President shall by proclamation from time to time definitely enumerate said articles and materials which it shall be unlawful for American vessels or aircraft to transport."

Safeguard in House Measure.

It is obvious that a President with such powers would be able, if so minded, to go far toward determining the defeat of one or another combatant, by withholding from it vital supplies of metals, cotton or foodstuffs. Therefore the House resolution adds a safeguard not contained in the Senate bill, as follows:

"Any proclamation issued by the President under this section shall apply to all belligerents."

The constitutionality of one provision of the law now in force has not yet been decided. "In the case of the forfeiture of any arms, ammunition or implements of war by reason of a violation of this act, no public or private sale shall be required; but such arms, ammunition or implements of war shall be delivered to the Secretary of War for such use or disposal thereof as shall be approved by the President of the United States." In the view of some legalists, this clause provides for confiscation of property in violation of the fifth amendment to the Constitution, which holds ". . . nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation."

New Controversial Section.

Not only is the debatable section retained in both the Pittman and McReynolds bills, but a new provision quite as controversial has been added to each draft. Its preamble contains the language quoted above, to the effect that the shipment of all materials whatsoever, to belligerents in interstate or civil war, is unlawful unless ownership has first been transferred to some foreign government or agency. The section continues: "The shipper of such article shall be required to file with the collector of the port from which the articles or materials are to be exported a declaration under oath that there exists in American citizens no right, title or interest in such articles or materials . . . any such declaration so filed shall be an exclusive estoppel against any claim of any American citizen of right, title or interest in such articles or materials. Insurance written by American underwriters on such articles or materials . . . shall not be deemed an American interest therein, and no insurance policy issued on such articles and materials and no loss incurred thereunder shall be made a basis of any claim put forward against the Government of the United States."

It was this section which, during the sessions of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, provoked from Senator Borah of Idaho the significant inquiry:

"Does this act undertake to say that a person may not assert any right, title or interest in any commodity which he has heretofore owned because of his undertaking to ship it?"

"I think that is it," replied Chairman Pittman. The Senator from Nevada went on to explain that the act does not prohibit the writing of insurance, or attempt to declare any insurance unlawful and void.

It does provide, however, that the United States Government will refuse to recognize such policies as an American interest, and will decline to make them the basis of any claim for reparation made against the government.

Likely Procedure on Bills.

It is expected that the Senate will take prompt action on the Pittman bill, but that the House will probably defer its measure until the Senate has voted, and seek to iron out the differences in conference. The Pittman measure renders mandatory on the President certain procedures which in the House bill are left to his discretion. The Pittman resolution, for instance, would make it immediately and automatically unlawful, as soon as the President proclaims a state of war or civil strife, for American citizens to travel on ships of belligerent registry. Under the McReynolds bill, the President would be permitted to make a second finding that such travel would endanger the peace or security of the United States, or the lives and commerce of its nationals.

The House bill is nearer the wish of the State Department and the administration. But Judge R. Walton Moore, assistant Secretary of State, is quoted in Chairman Pittman's report as saying: "Being a practical man and understanding that in all human probability Congress is going to retain the mandatory feature, I say that the Pittman joint resolution would, as I understand it, be fairly satisfactory."

A Revolution of Policy.

This neutrality legislation, both that already in effect and that proposed, embodies a profound revolution of policy. Its underlying philosophy is not that of turning the other cheek, but of removing every temptation, moral and material, for placing that cheek within reach of any possible smack. American citizens will be forbidden to travel on belligerent ships. No American-owned commodities, destined for combatant ports or to neutral countries for transshipment to belligerent states, will be permitted to sail the seas. American merchant vessels will be unarmed. No loans or credits may be extended to belligerent countries; and they are forbidden to sell bonds or securities in this country.

Foreign countries will be able to obtain munitions in the United States only if they pay on delivery, and transport the supplies in non-American bottoms. This is known as the "cash and carry" feature. It is available, obviously, only to countries with cash assets in the United States and with command of the high seas. Under the present conditions, the resources of American manufacture and agriculture would be available, in case of a world war, only to Great Britain and her allies. Should England be defeated at sea, the privilege would pass at once, say, to the Fascist powers.

Age-Old Theories Abandoned.

The traditional American doctrine of freedom of the seas is jettisoned without apology or scruple. Abandoned are age-old theories of international law as to the rights of neutrals. In its desperation to avoid belligerent entanglements, the legislation flings overboard even the question of right and wrong. No distinction is made in these laws between aggressor and non-aggressor, invader and invaded, guilty or innocent. It appears certain that, if such statutes had been in effect in 1914, the United States would have had no motive for entering the World War, and that consequently victory or at least stalemate would have fallen to the central powers.

Critics of the policy express fear that it may tend to promote rather than discourage war. Robber states are notified in advance, it is alleged, that their predatory enterprises, outside the American hemisphere, may be prosecuted with assurance that there will be no interference from the United States. If similar laws were adopted by Great Britain, the opposition continues, the immediate result would be an attack of the Fascist powers on the democratic peoples of Europe.

hawkers cried their wares—campaign hats, cigarettes, combs and soap.

The shelling came after a quiet morning during which the only shots heard were occasional bursts from West Park and University City, western and northwestern Madrid battlegrounds.

Until the shells fell, Madrilenos had shrugged and said: "It's only El Abuela"—"the grandfather"—as they call the large Government cannon.

Rebels Are Pressed Back.

Government troops in the Morata de Tajuna sector, southeast of Madrid, forced insurgents to retreat more than 500 yards toward the Jarama River and away from the Madrid - Valencia highway. The troops opened their attack at dawn. After hours of fighting, tanks succeeded in breaking through to the insurgent trenches and forcing a retreat. Gen. Jose Miaja, from behind the Government trenches, addresses the insurgents through loudspeakers, urging them to join his forces against "foreign invaders." His voice carried well despite the firing with which the insurgents greeted the address.

Reports from the South said Government troops were pressing an advance on Orgiva, east of the Granada-Motril highway.

Four soldiers have been executed following their conviction by a People's Court of taking the law into their own hands and committing diverse crimes in the town of Alia, Caceras province.

The Madrid Defense Junta has ordered evacuation of all persons over 45 detained for political or other offenses and subsequently freed. Those under 45 will be assigned to some useful work, the Junta announced.

Another order has placed under control of the army all sections of Madrid considered part of the war zone. The rest of the city is left under police supervision.

For United, Decisive Action.

Gen. Miaja, newly named to supreme comand of all the Central Spanish Government troops, has agreed with Valencia and Barcelona leaders that decisive and united action is needed to combat the insurgent armies, especially with the imminence of a Europe-wide plan to block off Spain from outside help.

Enlargement of Gen. Miaja's command was one step in this direction. In the East, a rapprochement of Anarchists and Communist-Socialist element supporting the Government is reported sought.

Police have arrested a man and his sister whose home yielded maps of the territory occupied by insurgents and photographs of groups of insurgent generals. An Almeria dispatch indicates the arrest of many "suspicious characters" there.

Earthquake at Terni, Italy.

TERNI, Italy, Feb. 27.—An earthquake shock lasting several seconds frightened residents here today. No damage was reported.

THREE HURT WHEN SIT-DOWNS OUST NON-UNION GROUP

Union Strikers, One a Woman, Felled by Lead Missiles in Clash at Stamping Plant in Detroit.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Feb. 27.—Three strikers, one a woman, were felled by flying lead missiles today, in the first violence of the unrelated labor disputes which have spread in Detroit industrial plants since the General Motors strikes were settled.

Union workers, holding two buildings of the Ferro Stamping Company in a sit-down strike of several days, ousted about 20 non-union employes from the administration building in a brief attack.

Wayne Marlett, strike chairman, said Anna Gouci, 23 years old, Alex Laslo, 21, and Peter Kuhn, 23, were struck when the non-union men hurled lead pieces three inches in diameter at the strikers. Burwell E. Allen, assistant treasurer of the company, said, however, "there was no lead thrown to my knowledge," and added he believed one non-striker was injured.

1000 Foundry Workers Idle.

The largest strike in the city today affected 1000 foundry workers at the Michigan Malleable Iron Company, where 100 stay-in strikers held the factory. J. J. Kennedy, assistant organizational director of the United Automobile Workers of America, said the strikers demanded reinstatement of four union members discharged last week and wage increases of 10 cents an hour.

Harry Spencer, U. A. W. A. organizer at Grand Rapids, Mich., said the organization planned no immediate strike in the Eagle-Ottawa Leather Co.'s Grand Haven plant, where 300 nonunion workers are engaged in a friendly stay-in against what they say is the threats of a sit-down by other employes. The plant produces upholstery for automobiles.

Second Strike in a Week.

The second sit-down strike in a little more than a week affected 600 workers at Thompson Products, Inc., here, after hour and wage negotiations between the management and the U. A. W. A. collapsed.

C. A. Just, vice-president of the Mazer-Cressman Cigar Co., notified Police Commissioner Heinrich A. Pickert by letter that, if property damage or personal injury resulted from a sit-down strike at the plant, "We will consider that liability resulting therefrom will rest upon you and the City of Detroit and the public authorities and upon the strikers—and not upon us."

Two packing plants, six cigar factories and more than a dozen other manufacturing units were closed by labor disputes.

Demands on Chrysler.

Richard T. Frankensteen, organizational director of the United Automobile Workers of America, announced tonight the demands that will be made on the Chrysler Corp. in conferences scheduled to open Wednesday. Heading the list is recognition of the unon as sole bargaining agency in Chrysler plants. Frankensteen's announcement said "there will be no compromise on this point."

The program, to be submitted for ratification by members of Chrysler plant locals at meetings tomorrow and Tuesday, includes these demands: Blanket wage increase of 10 cents an hour; seniority on a departmental basis and according to work classifications; a 30-hour week before any worker is laid off; no employe to be dismissed without first obtaining a hearing before a joint committee of union shop stewards and management representatives; in all decreases and increases of the number of employes seniority lists to be observed; shop stewards and members of the union local executive committee to head the seniority list.

The U. A. W. A. representatives in the Chrysler negotiations will be Homer Martin, president; John Brophy, director of the C. I. O., and Frankensteen. Frankensteen said a board of strategy chosen from the executive committees of Chrysler locals would sit in an adjoining room. The Chrysler conferees will include Lester L. Colbert, general attorney for the corporation in Detroit, and Herman L. Weckler, vice-president of the De Soto Division.

Union headquarters announced that its plant committee at the Hudson Motor Car Company would meet Monday with company executives.

TESTIMONY A FEW KREUGER BONDS WERE PAID IN FULL

Witness Tells SEC Counsel Most of Debenture Holders Got Only $243 on the $1000.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Counsel for the Securities and Exchange Commission attempted to build a case of contrast today in the hearing on the Kreuger & Toll failure, between treatment accorded to a small group of bondholders who recovered 100 per cent on the dollar and the bulk of holders who received only part of their claims.

Edwin de T. Bechtler, attorney for the Lee Higginson & Co., principal American banker for Kreuger & Toll, had testified the firm purchased 24 bonds of $1000 each at their face value from a group of claimants following the collapse of the firm and the suicide of Ivar Kreuger, its head, and that these were the only bonds so purchased.

Disclosure of this fact in a registration statement with SEC stated the present investigation of a committee, headed by former Secretary of State Bainbridge Colby, for 5 per cent Kreuger & Toll debentures.

Today commission counsel, Prof. A. Foras of Yale Law School questioned Sigfried Hartman, formerly connected with the Colby committee, in an effort to show all holders of the debentures had not fared as well as those paid at face value.

It was brought out that Kreuger Toll Realization Co., corporate vehicle for various committees in liquidating the bankrupt estate of Kreuger & Toll, had realized for debenture holders $193.89 on the $1000 face value of claims. Previously there had been two payments to holders of the debentures of about $25 a $1000, it was testified.

Eugene Untermyer, counsel for the Colby Committee for a time, was asked whether there had been any agreement between the committee and Hartman, who had resigned from the Colby group to become counsel for the trustees for the debentures, the Marine Midland Trust Co., that the payment of certain claims at face value should not be disclosed.

Untermyer told Foras there was no such agreement. His testimony concluded the New York phase of the hearings.

COURT PLAN DEFENDED BY GOV. LA FOLLETTE

He Says Voiding of AAA Was Amendment by Judicial Decree.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27. — Gov. Philip La Follette, of Wisconsin, accused the Supreme Court tonight of invalidating the Agricultural Adjustment Act "in the face of clear language in the Constitution giving Congress the express power to enact such legislation."

In a radio speech defending President Roosevelt's court reorganization plan, La Follette said the Court in this decision "has taken a final step which, if unchecked and uncorrected, means the end of American democracy."

The Governor said there was nothing new or spectacular" in compulsory retirement of judges. President Roosevelt proposed appointment of up to six new Supreme Court justices to augment those who do not retire at 70.) Most other nations and many states and municipalities have fixed an age limit for retiring not only judges but other officers and employes, La Follette said.

Quoting from the dissenting opinion of Justice Stone in the AAA decision, La Follette said the "clear and unmistakable meaning" of the Justice's words, is that five members of the Court themselves amended the Constitution by a judicial decree.

Opposition to the President's proposal, he said, "comes mainly from those who are bitterly opposed to and from a few who fail to keep their eyes fixed on the essence of democratic government."

Advocates of amending the constitution, La Follette said, "know it cannot be done without years of delay."

The spectacle of five men blocking the progress of 130,000,000 people by twisting and distorting the plain terms of the constitution in accord with out-worn prejudices is a situation that needs correction," he said.

La Follette said he would favor Roosevelt's proposal regardless of who might be President, because "I would be sure that on average the new judges coming fresh from the problems of today would be more likely to reach sound conclusions than who have been long removed from active participation and whose ideas were formed during a past generation.

DICKMANN STANDS ON RECORD, FILES FOR RENOMINATION

Declares He Has Cut Cost of Government and Expects to Continue Policy He Has Pursued.

PAVING, RELIEF AND SAFETY WORK

No Opposition to His Return as Candidate for Mayor on Democratic Ticket Expected.

Pledging continued adherence to the principles he has been following, Bernard F. Dickmann, the city's first Democratic Mayor in a quarter of a century, filed notice of his candidacy for the party nomination for a second four-year term at headquarters of the Democratic City Committee in Hotel Jefferson yesterday.

He declared he was unhampered now, as he had been in his first campaign, by promises to any individuals. The people, he said, were more interested in performance than in promises, and he announced that reports would be published shortly showing how he had drastically reduced the cost of municipal government.

The Mayor has no opponent for the nomination and Democratic leaders do not anticipate that any will appear tomorrow, which is the last day for filing. Republican politicians have entertained no real hope of winning the election. The Republican contestants for Mayor are Oliver T. Remmers, who has been chairman of the Election Board, president of the Police Board and chairman of the Republican City Committee, and Henry P. Schroeder, a member of the Board of Education.

The primary will be held March 12 and the election April 6.

Lists Supporters.

In a statement issued as he filed, Mayor Dickmann said he had received petitions urging him to seek re-election from the following: Democratic City Committee, unanimously; Board of Aldermen, unanimously; a nonpartisan group of 128 business and professional men, headed by Sidney Maestre, president of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co.; the Real Estate Exchange, of which the Mayor formerly was president, and 109 members of the Merchants' Exchange.

The Mayor's salary is $10,000 a year, and he has a contingent fund, which has been $12,500 a year, to be used, under the charter, as he sees fit, with an accounting only in general terms to the Board of Aldermen at the end of his term. In addition, the city furnishes the Mayor with a limousine and a chauffeur.

It has been known for months that Mayor Dickmann would run for re-election, but he made no announcement until yesterday. Earlier in his term he was opposed by unfriendly majorities in the Board of Aldermen and Democratic City Committee.

Mayor's Statement.

Mayor Dickmann's statement on his candidacy follows:

"In obedience to requests made of me by citizens in all walks of our municipal life, regardless of political faith, who have, by their petitions, expressed their approval of my administration of the city affairs, I have today filed my declaration of candidacy for renomination and re-election as Mayor of the city of St. Louis.

"The four years for which I was elected in April, 1933, are now soon to expire, and I am willing to submit my candidacy to the voters of the city, based upon the record I have made as their city's chief executive officer. I take it that the people are not so much interested in promises as they are in performances, and, therefore, I deem it neither necessary nor desirable, in launching my candidacy, that I should make any appeal based on promises other than the promise that, if I am renominated and re-elected, I shall carry into my next administration the same principles by which I have been guided in the one now about to close.

Says He Cut Government Cost.

"When I was a candidate four years ago I promised to reduce drastically the cost of city government. This I have done in a manner and to an extent that will be shown in detail in reports and statements which will be made in the near future. Economies have been effected in many directions, although in others the practice of sound economy required the expenditure of more money than might otherwise have been necessary, if previous administrations had applied to the city's physical properties the same policies with respect to maintenance that would be applied by the private citizen or business concern to his or its property in order that it may afford the maximum of service and efficiency.

"At that time I expressed the belief that the method of purchasing supplies and equipment for the city must be severely overhauled and the cost of these supplies and equipment greatly reduced.

"Pursuing this belief, many reforms have been instituted in the department of the Supply Commissioner, with the result that all of the city's requirements have been supplied with better merchandise at a greatly reduced cost. The city has received a full dollar's worth for every dollar expended, through the application of business methods and common honesty to the transaction of the city's business.

Points to Paving Record.

"Neither political preferment nor political considerations have had any place in the expenditures of any of the city's funds during the last four years. On the contrary, I have proceeded upon the theory that the best politics in the world for any administrative official to play, is to give to the citizens a Government strictly in accordance with the spirit and intent of their charter.

"The practice of favoring high-priced, patented materials for use on public work, which I stated four years ago was open to criticism, has in the past four years been abandoned, and no public contracts have been let except upon the basis of free, open and competitive bidding; whereas, under previous administrations, the costs of street improvements were increased by the use of such materials without securing a better and more lasting grade of work, resulting not only in waste, but in imposition upon the property owners who pay for such improvements. Many miles of the city's streets in the past four years have been resurfaced, in a manner and with the use of materials that present a smooth and lasting surface, at no cost whatever to the property owner.

Relief Work.

"I stated four years ago that I was deeply interested in the relief situation in St. Louis. None of that interest has ever waned nor will it ever wane so long as there are citizens of St. Louis in need of the necessities of life, which they are unable to obtain through lack of employment.

"I believed then and I believe now that every effort should be made to foster and encourage local industries, and in pursuit of that belief I have steadfastly set myself against any policy, either of legislative or administration, that would permit one industry to profit at the expense of others or to the detriment of the whole people, and while it is true that in the cases of some industries drastic regulations have been imposed, I think I can say without fear of successful contradiction that they have been imposed for the benefit of the industries themselves and in order to stimulate in the minds of the citizens a greater confidence in and desire for the commodities and things those industries offer.

Assessment Changes.

"Prior to my assuming the office of Mayor, there were gross inequalities existing in the assessment of real estate for taxation in the city of St. Louis, with the result that many owners were paying taxes on assessed value much less than the actual value of their properties and some on an assessed value much greater, and I expressed myself as being in favor of a revaluation of all of our real estate. My determination in that regard has been given very substantial realization by the recent completion of a scientific system of assessing real estate for taxation purposes, which I believe will afford absolute accuracy, rather than pure guesswork, in the solution of this very vexing and important problem.

"I stated four years ago that the health of 98,000 citizens of any community is of importance to the administrative head of that community, and I enlarge upon that statement at this time by saying that it is of importance to the community itself, for the health of so large a percentage of its population cannot be long neglected without the effect of that neglect being reflected in the health and welfare of the community at large. I pledged myself at that time to do all within my power to complete without delay the new hospital for Negroes. Since then I have felt that I would fall short of doing everything within my power if I did not actually see to the completion of that institution.

New Hospital for Negroes.

"Its completion and dedication is a matter of public knowledge. Not only will it afford better facilities for conserving the health, the minds and the bodies of our Negro citizens, but its management and operation, being turned over to the doctors and nurses of the Negro race, will afford to such of their number as have a desire to advance their station in life an opportunity to pursue the professions of nursing and medicine.

"During the four years that I have served the people of St. Louis as Mayor I have, in addition to paying attention to their health, devoted myself earnestly to the promotion and protection as well of their safety. The result of my efforts in this direction, with the co-operation of the proper enforcement authorities, have been reflected in the substantial reduction in motor vehicle accidents and fatalities. I pledge myself to continue with these efforts, with the view that within the next four years, if I am renominated and re-elected, St. Louis may become the safest city in the United States.

"Four years ago I came into office unfettered and unhampered by pledges or promises to any one. If renominated and re-elected this year, I will come into office with the same freedom and will make no promises other than the promise imposed upon me by the solemn obligations of my oath of office."

MISTRIAL; ONE JUROR AGREED 'TO GET OUT'

He Makes Explanation When Jury Is Polled in East Side Murder Case.

A mistrial was declared by City Judge William F. Borders of East St. Louis yesterday when a juror, who signed a verdict of guilty in a Negro murder case, told the Court he had held out for 16 hours for acquittal and only signed the verdict "to get out of here."

The juror, Joseph F. Donovan, 2121 Lynch avenue, made his statement when the jury was polled at the request of Ray Hendricks, attorney for Rayfield Jackson, the defendant. The verdict carried a sentence of 14 years' imprisonment, the minimum punishment.

Judge Borders, who on Friday, denounced Hendricks for seeking a change of venue for his client, remarked on the necessity of curbing crime, but told Juror Donovan that it was his privilege and duty to vote for acquittal if, as he stated to the Court, he believed the killing was in self defense. The Court then announced a mistrial.

Members of the jury, who began their deliberations after returning from supper Friday night, debated all night in the jury room, and complained that the heat was turned off during the night and that they were not taken to breakfast. Judge Borders explained that the apparent neglect of the jurors' comfort resulted from their repeated announcements that a verdict was imminent. The verdict was returned at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Jackson shot and killed another Negro, Joseph Moore, in a dice game last March. He said that he believed Moore was about to draw a revolver.

UNION PREPARES TO PICKET PLANT IN NORTH CHICAGO

At Secret Meeting Decides on Patrol at Fansteel Where Gas Drove Out Strikers.

By the Associated Press.

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Feb. 27. — A mass meeting of strikers formulated plans today for systematic picketing at the Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation.

Paul Glaser of Gary, Ind., attorney of the Committee for Industrial Organization, announced conferees in the closed session had been informed of their legal rights and had elected to start picketing in force at the company's North Chicago property tomorrow morning.

Simultaneously, the office of Sheriff L. A. Doolittle reported outside men had been imported to aid the strikers.

Deputies, who drove 61 sit-down strikers from two Fansteel buildings Friday in a gas attack, guarded the plants today but only a few strikers gathered near the seven-foot wire fence encircling the yard.

Other officers sought six leaders of the C. I. O. and the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers on warrants charging them with conspiring to obstruct a court order to evict the strikers.

Among them were two C. I. O. organizers—Meyer Adelman, chief spokesman for the strikers during the 10-day sitting siege—and Leo Krzycki. Glaser said Adelman had planned to surrender but demurred when he learned officials had refused to reduce his bond from $10,000 to $1000.

Deputy Charles Rouse went to a hotel here to serve the warrant on Krzycki but reported he had checked out.

Two more C. I. O aids, J. R. Weber and W. F. Pitzele, arrested yesterday on the same charges, were released after their bail had been cut from $10,000 to $1000.

Hearing of a company petition for an injunction against "mass picketing and coercion and intimidation of our employes" was continued until Monday by Circuit Judge Ralph Dady after Union Attorney Joseph Jacobs said such a move might prove "provocative."

The 125 deputies and policemen who attempted to carry out Judge Dady's order to clear the plants eight days ago were repulsed by the strikers. Fifty picked officers routed the sit down strikers Friday.

HAT CHECK GIRL IN HOUSE OF DETENTION AWAITING BAIL

Bond of $2500 Fixed on Bigamy Charge; Bronx Cafe Hires Her for Show.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27. — Peggy Garcia whose $500,000 breach of promise suit against the violinist, Dave Rubinoff was thrown out of Court Wednesday, spent the afternoon fretting in the House of Detention, waiting for someone to furnish $2500 bail on a bigamy charge.

She was arrested Thursday night with Michael Larocca, a tombstone salesman. The State contends she already had a husband when she married Larocca last September, and that Larocca had a wife and three children. "But I wasn't a married woman," she said today.

She also denied a suggestion by District Attorney William C. Dodge that a blackmail ring might have been behind her suit against Rubinoff. "Why, the idea of such a thing," she said. "It was my own idea. My very own." Visitors asked what she planned to do when released. "I'm going to start rehearsals of my sketch," she said. A Bronx cafe has signed her to appear in a "musical version" of her life.

MOSLEMS TO GIVE $150,000 GOLD BAR TO THE AGA KHAN

After Ceremony Tomorrow, He Is Expected to Return Gift for Social Work.

By the Associated Press.

NAIROBI, Kenya Colony, Feb. 27.—The Moslem followers of the Aga Khan will give him a $150,000 gold bar here Monday, but he probably will give it back.

The occasion will be the crowning event of the Prince's golden jubilee visit as spiritual head of the Ismailia sect of Moslems, who number at least 10 millions.

The gold bar is supposed to weigh the same as the Aga Khan does. He will get on the scales to make sure. Then, after addresses, he is expected to turn the gift back to be used in social improvement.

He matched his weight against another such bar of gold last year, during jubilee celebrations at Bombay. Then he weighed 220 pounds. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall.

G. R. PIRRUNG TURNS IN HIS SPECIAL POLICE BADGE

Passenger in Brad. Shinkle Jr. Auto Said to Have Displayed It in Fatal Crash.

Rather than embarass the Clayton city administration, Gilbert R. Pirrung, 816 South Hanley road, turned in his Clayton special police badge Friday following testimony at an inquest that he displayed the badge early Thursday morning at the scene of a fatal automobile collision at Lindell boulevard and Boyle avenue, territory in which his special commission did not apply.

Special police badges were issued several years ago to Pirrung and his chauffeur, Mayor Charles A. Shaw of Clayton related, after it became known that he had inherited $450,000 from the estate of his father and had received threats. Mayor Shaw, who said that about 35 similar special commissions were issued to reputable Clayton residents, stated that Pirrung had never abused the privilege and had surrendered the badge voluntarily with a note giving his reasons.

Pirrung was a passenger in an automobile driven by Bradford Shinkle Jr., 35 Portland place, which struck a city-owned automobile, killing Emmett J. O'Brien, an employe of the Board of Public Service, and injuring another city employe. A witness to the accident testified at the inquest that a man in the Shinkle party "showed me a badge and told me to get out of there." Pirrung, on the stand, denied talking to the witness, explaining that he had shown the badge while assisting city police in keeping spectators back.

PROSPECT NEGRO MAY GET LINDBERGH KIDNAPING REWARD

Finder of Child's Body Says Governor Has Promised Him 'Break' on the $25,000

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 27.—The prospect that at last New Jersey may pay the posted $25,000 Lindbergh kidnaping reward has caused William Allen to hope for "an even break" for finding the body of the baby—stolen from his crib five years ago next Monday night. The reward was offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the kidnaper.

Allen, a Negro laborer, said he had been promised a "break" by Gov. Harold G. Hoffman about six months ago.

Gov. Hoffman, who said he would approve any legislative appropriation of the reward, is empowered to pay it "at his discretion to such person or persons as he shall deem entitled thereto."

GETS 5 MONTHS FOR TRYING TO FIX KANSAS CITY CASE

Edson M. Walker, Already Sentenced for Vote Frauds, Penalized for Perjury Attempt.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 27.—A sentence of five months in jail and a fine of $500 was imposed today on Edson M. Walker, a Democratic judge at the last national election, by United States District Judge Merrill E. Otis for attempting to induce a witness to alter testimony against him in his trial for vote fraud conspiracy.

Already under sentence of two years in the penitentiary for his part in the vote fraud conspiracy in the thirteenth precinct of the Twelfth Ward, Walker must first serve his jail sentence in the Platte County jail. Judge Otis denied an appeal bond on the sentence for attempted subornation of perjury but announced he would withhold committment papers for a week in order to permit an appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Walker and six others were convicted of vote fraud in the residential precinct largely because of the testimony of Mrs. Chloe G. Albright, a Republican judge, who pleaded no defense and was given a year's probation. She disclosed he had asked her to change the story she gave an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Twenty-five additional defendants in vote fraud cases were to have been arraigned today, but two, Marie Ogden, a Republican judge, and Don Depasco, a Democratic worker, both of the twenty-eighth precinct of the Twelfth Ward, failed to appear. United States Marshal Henry L. Dillingham said they had not been found.

The other 23 defendants from four precincts pleaded not guilty and were admitted to bond of $2000 for men and $1500 for women. Their trials were set for April 5, as were those of 14 others who entered not guilty pleas yesterday.

A total of 75 persons has been indicted by the grand jury which will resume its investigation Monday after a week's recess. The next vote fraud cases are scheduled for trial a week from Monday before United States District Judge Albert L. Reeves.

$58 TAKEN IN HOLDUP OF GROCER BY TWO MEN

Proprietor and Wife Threatened With Pistols and Forced to Go to Rear of Store.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Buescher, who operate a grocery and meat market at 5400 Plover avenue, reported to police last night they were robbed of $58 by two men, one armed with two revolvers, the other with a single pistol, at 9 o'clock.

One of the robbers ordered a package of cigarettes and when Buescher turned from the counter to hand it to him, both men drew their revolvers. They ordered Mr. and Mrs. Buescher to walk to the rear of the store, then took the money from the cash register.

Two clerks at the Deed-Marshall Liquor Co., a package liquor store, 4947 Delmar boulevard, reported a robber armed with a revolver entered at 9:30 o'clock last night, ordered them into a rear room and then took about $45 from the cash register. The clerks were Marshall Collins and H. M. Vahey.

SHOT BY YOUTH

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.
MISS MARJORIE RINGENBACH.

GIRL, 17, SHOT BY YOUTH WHO TRIES TO END HIS LIFE

Neither Seriously Wounded; "I Had too Much to Drink," His Explanation.

Miss Marjorie Ringenbach, 4133 Fillmore street, 17-year-old senior at Hadley Vocational School, was shot in the left hip last night by Frank Steffen, 21, 5035 Leona street, who told reporters, "She wouldn't go steady with me. I had too much to drink, and felt like shooting up the whole town. I'm sorry I shot her."

Steffen turned his revolver on himself after wounding Miss Ringenbach, and tried to take his own life, he said, but the bullet struck a rib in the left side of his chest, and glanced off, resulting in a flesh wound. Both were taken to City Hospital, where physicians said their wounds were not serious.

The shooting occurred at the rear of a tavern at 5922 Morganford road, operated by George H. Monika, whose daughter, Jane, Miss Ringenbach had gone to visit. Steffen approached her in the tavern, Miss Ringenbach said, and asked her to go only with him. She said she refused to talk to him and left the tavern by a rear door to rejoin her mother, shopping in a nearby grocery. As she walked across the back yard, she said, Steffen stepped through the tavern door and fired three shots, one striking her. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Ringenbach. Steffen, a shipping clerk, was held by police.

W. A. KELLY QUITS ALDERMANIC RACE

Democratic Committeeman Says Group of City Employes Made Request.

Walter A. Kelly's candidacy for the Board of Aldermen lasted just two days. The blind attorney and Democratic committeeman of the Eleventh Ward yesterday announced his withdrawal as a candidate for the Democratic aldermanic nomination for the ward.

A group of city employes asked him to withdraw shortly after he filed last Thursday, Kelly said. They had been "so nice to him in helping to elect him committeeman" that he thought he ought to heed their request, he said.

But he will retain a sort of family interest in the race. His brother-in-law, Deputy Sheriff Emil J. Rachota, residing at the same address as Kelly, 3405 Osage street, has filed for Alderman in Kelly's place. Mayor Dickmann's administration forces were expected to support Rachota. Kelly's wife formerly was Democratic committeewoman of the ward.

If the Election Board follows past rulings, Kelly's name will remain on the ballot, however, as it has been held that there was no way for formal withdrawal of candidacies in a municipal election.

Kelly, who was elected to the committee last August with Mayor Dickmann's support, was indicted with "Dinty" Colbeck, former Egan gang leader, and others in connection with the $267,000 robbery of a mail truck here in 1923. The charge against Kelly of assisting in disposing of the loot was struck from the docket with leave to reinstate in 1926. The status of the charge has remained unchanged since then.

At the time the charge was removed from the docket, Kelly wrote a letter to the Court requesting his name be stricken from the rolls of those qualified to practice in Federal Court here. That was done, and Kelly has not since appeared in this court as a lawyer. However, he has practiced in State courts from time to time.

Others seeking the aldermanic nomination for the Eleventh Ward are Ellert F. Gummels, insurance broker, now Alderman, and Charles Sparwasser, typewriter salesman. William Tanner has filed for the Republican nomination for the ward.

ACTRESS DIES JUST BEFORE 'TOBACCO ROAD' CURTAIN RISES

Maude Odell Had Played Part of "Sister Bessie" for Four Years in New York.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27. — Maude Odell "Sister Bessie" in "Tobacco Road" since the show opened on Broadway four years ago, was found dead in her dressing room tonight, a few minutes before she was to have gone on the stage. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

The show went on. James Barton, the star, who plays Jeeter Lester, and the audience were not informed of the death of the 65-year-old character actress from Charleston, S. C. They were told that Miss Odell had been taken ill, when it became necessary to read the lines from the wings.

Miss Odell made her stage debut with the late E. H. Sothern in "The Prisoner of Zenda."

29 DEMOCRATS, 13 REPUBLICANS IN PRIMARY RACES

Dickmann for Mayor and Nolte for Comptroller Unopposed for Party Nominations.

PERIOD FOR FILING CLOSES TOMORROW

A Few Spirited Contests Among Democrats for Aldermen From Odd-Numbered Wards.

With filing time for candidates for municipal offices expiring tomorrow, only 29 Democrats and 13 Republicans have declared their candidacies for the 16 nominations in each party so far.

Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann, Democrat, who filed for a second four-year term yesterday, and Comptroller Louis Nolte, Republican, who has held his office for the last 20 years, are unopposed for renomination. Nolte now is the only Republican elective city official.

Republican aspirants for Mayor are Oliver T. Remmers, lawyer, and Henry P. Schroeder, a member of the Board of Education. Remmers has been chairman of the Election Board, president of the Police Board and chairman of the Republican City Committee.

Boogher in Comptroller's Race.

Democratic contenders for Comptroller are Lawrence Boogher, assistant vice-president of Boatmen's National Bank, who is supported by Mayor Dickmann's administration forces, and State Representative Will L. Lindhorst.

Party nominees also will be chosen for the 14 places as Aldermen from the odd-numbered wards. There are a few spirited contests for these positions among the Democrats, but no Republican contests. No Democratic candidate has filed yet in one ward, the Twenty-first, and the Republicans so far are without candidates in four wards, the Seventh, Ninth, Thirteenth and Fifteenth.

Thirteen Democratic incumbents are seeking renomination as Aldermen. There has been a vacancy from the Twenty-first Ward since the first of the year, due to the election of former Alderman Michael J. Scott as Circuit Judge. The ward organization of Robert E. Hannegan, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, has not announced selection of a candidate for the place.

The following six Democratic incumbents so far are without opposition for renomination: Otto L. Lietchen, Third Ward; Harry L. Israel, Fifth; Hubert A. Hoeflinger, Seventeenth; Allan E. Petersen, Twenty-third; Whitelaw T. Terry, Twenty-fifth, and Emmett Golden, Twenty-seventh.

The other Democratic incumbents running and the number of opponents of each are: John A. Gentleman, First Ward, one opponent; John R. Slay, Seventh, five opponents; Samuel Brown, Ninth, one opponent; Eilert F. Gummels, Eleventh, three opponents; Phelim O'Toole, Thirteenth, one opponent; Joseph J. Hastey, Fifteenth, one opponent, and John P. Collins, Nineteenth, one opponent.

Mayor Dickmann's forces are expected to oppose Slay, Gummels, Hastey, Collins and probably Brown, all of whom have been at odds with the Mayor in the past. Those favored instead by the administration are: Deputy Constable William B. Walsh, Seventh Ward; Deputy Sheriff Emil J. Rachota, whose brother-in-law, Committeeman Walter A. Kelly, withdrew in his favor yesterday, Eleventh; Edward F. Judge, secretary of the Scullin Steel Co., Fifteenth, and John Pierce Cullinane, brother of Committeeman William Cullinane and nephew of City Register Michael J. Cullinane, Nineteenth. If the Mayor opposes Brown he will back Philip Bouckaert, a butcher, in the Ninth.

Alderman Israel has been indicted on charges of willful failure to file lists of residents of his Laclede and La Salle hotels with the Election Board, in connection with investigation of frauds in the registration of voters last June. The cases have been set for trial March 15, three days after the primary.

The Election Board office will be open until 9 p. m. tomorrow to receive declarations of candidates Offices of the Democratic and Republican City Committees, where application must first be made and filing fees paid, will be open to 8:30 p. m.

Candidates who have filed for Aldermen so far, besides the 13 Democratic incumbents, are:

Nineteenth—John Pierce Cullinane, 1710 North Grand boulevard, Democrat; Harold H. Frevert, 3213A Greer avenue, Republican.

Twenty-first—Walter H. Voss, 4127A Sacramento avenue, Republican.

Twenty-third—William Alex Zander, 4049 Olive street, Republican.

Twenty-fifth—Sherman Landau, 605 Clara avenue, Republican.

Twenty-seventh—Charles Kratzil, 6011 Harney avenue, Republican.

No Socialist Ticket in Primary.

There will be no Socialist ticket in the primary, but the Socialist City Committee will certify a slate of nominees for inclusion on the April election ballot. It will be headed by George E. Duemler, lawyer, who was Socialist nominee for Governor last year, for Mayor, and George A. Kovaka, a structural engineer, for Comptroller.

Five members of the Board of Education will be chosen at the April election. Time for filing nominating petitions for candidates for the board will expire March 22. Two Democrats and two Republicans will be elected to full terms and a Democrat for an unexpired term. Mayor Dickmann has announced his support of Mrs. Haymer Lowenhaupt and Thomas F. Quinn, Democrats, for full terms. He appointed them recently to fill vacancies on the board.

THREE MINERS ARE BURNED IN EXPLOSION OF POWDER

Two Badly Hurt in Unexplained Blast in Pit On Outskirts of Belleville.

Three miners were burned, two seriously, when a box of powder exploded yesterday in the main east entry of the mine of the Patterson-Harding Coal Co. on Mascoutah road on the outskirts of Belleville.

Kenneth Wall, mine manager, and John W. Brown, both of Belleville, suffered serious burns. Their companion, John Kaiser, was burned slightly. All were taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

The explosion occurred as the miners were preparing shots for future firing and Wall was on a tour of inspection. It occurred 65 feet below the surface and 1500 feet from the shaft. Miners in an adjoining room brought the three to the surface. Twenty-four men were in the mine. The cause of the explosion was not determined.

An investigation was begun by State Mine Inspector David T. Stuart and St. Clair County Mine Inspector Fred Lippert.

MAYOR BANGS LEAVES JAIL TO DEFEND MUNICIPAL SUIT

Receivership Action Against Huntington (Ind.) Power Plant Being Heard.

By the Associated Press.

HUNTINGTON, Ind., Feb. 27.—Mayor Clare W. H. Bangs had a brief respite from jail today to permit his appearance in court where a receivership suit is pending against the municipal light plant he established in Huntington.

The Mayor has been in jail since last July, refusing to comply with a court order directing him to discontinue service to patrons of the municipal plant. The order was obtained by the Northern Indiana Power Co., which contends its franchise allows it to serve all power users in Huntington.

The Mayor conducted the defense against the receivership suit, aided by his attorney, Arthur D. Saylor. The suit was instituted by two Fort Wayne firms that supplied equipment for the municipal plant.

COAST GUARD CAN'T TRACE MYSTERIOUS SOS CALL

Boston Force Tries to Check on Message Received by Amateur Radio Operator.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—An amateur radio operator reported receiving a message "taking water fast, Fisher." Neither coastguardsmen nor the amateur met success in repeated efforts to make contact with the sender again.

Coastguard vessels, meanwhile, aided three disabled ships on the New England coast. The cutter Chelan towed the disabled trawler Gosoon to Simm's Ledge, off Boston. The Gloucester schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud was in tow of the patrol boat Faunce.

Gloucester schooner Babe Sears was in tow of the patrol boat Icarus for New York. The Isaac McFarland, missing New Harbor, Me., fishing boat is in tow of another fishing boat for Matinicus Island.

BOOGHER IN TRAFFIC COURT

Lawrence Boogher, an assistant vice-president of the Boatmen's National Bank, selected by the Democratic City Committee as the candidate to oppose Comptroller Louis Nolte in the coming election, was discharged Friday in Police Court on a charge of failing to observe an electric traffic signal on Feb. 15.

Judge James Nangle said it was Boogher's first offense and that he had explained that the signal changed as he was driving through the intersection of West Pine boulevard and Vandeventer avenue. Boogher entered a formal plea of not guilty to the charge.

THINKS CO-OPERATIVES MAY INSURE CROPS

Witness Tells Senators Farm Groups May Take Over Federal Plan Eventually.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—A suggestion that farmers' co-operatives eventually might take over the administration's proposed crop insurance was made in testimony today before a sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Agriculture.

Chester Gray, Washington representative of the Farm Bureau Federation, testified that co-operatives had made a monumental success of tornado insurance and similar enterprises. If Government experts demonstrated that crop insurance was feasible, he said, farm groups might eventually take complete charge of it.

He recommended the insurance be started conservatively, dealing with wheat alone in the first year, as the administration has proposed. He urged also that co-operatives have some part in the administration of crop insurance from the beginning.

The administration's bill would set up a $100,000,000 Federal corporation to collect premiums and build up a warehouse reserve of between 25,000,000 and 100,000,000 bushels of wheat. When an insured farmer's crop failed, he would be paid enough in grain to bring his total yield up to 50 to 75 per cent of average.

Edward A. O'Neal, of Chicago, president of the federation, told the committee it would be fair for the Government to pay administration and warehouse expenses, because the whole public would benefit from greater price stability.

Testimony that one-crop farmers, especially those of raising wheat and cotton, needed insurance most was given by Frederic Brenckman, Washington representative of the National Grange.

SQUIRREL TRAPPING SEASON IN WEBSTER GROVES CLOSED

Police Halt Activities for Two Months; Begun When Nests Were Made in Homes.

A two-month closed season on squirrel trapping in Webster Groves has been announced by Chief of Police Andrew McDonnell, who devised traps and distributed them to residents upon receiving numerout complaints that the squirrels were becoming so numerous they were gnawing nests in homes.

The cessation of trapping is designed to eliminate the possibility of capturing female squirrels and separating them from their young during the breeding period. After that, the wire mesh traps, baited with walnuts, will be set again.

More than 150 squirrels were caught in a few trips shortly after they were distributed in December. Then McDonnell decided to paint them as to protection against the weather. The squirrels sniffed the paint and refused to enter. So the paint was boiled off. Some of the captured squirrels were released in a nearby woods, and some were shipped to new homes in other cities.

The works of the novelist Ralph Bates, said by the insurgents to have sent a telegram of sympathy to the Madrid government, also were barred.

ALASKA MINERS JOIN NEW GOLD RUSH BY AIR

Discoveries of Yellow Metal and Platinum Near Kuskokwin River Reported.

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Feb. 27.—Miners in increasing numbers took planes today to the mouth of the Kuskokwim River, scene of Alaska's newest gold and platinum strikes.

Activity centered on the Eek River on the south side of Kuskokwim Bay, where rich finds of placer gold were reported. Lesser rushes were taking place at Goodnews Bay, south of the Eek, where platinum was uncovered along a narrow strip of beach between the Bering Sea and the mountains.

Airplanes covered in a few hours distances which required weeks of dog team travel in Klondyke days. At Bethel, on the Kuskokwim north of the Eek, nine planes were based at one time.

Charles Johnston, treasurer of the Goodnews Bay Mining Co., arriving by airplane from the district, said the Eek River strikes were thought to be excellent, though their extent and richness was not definitely known. Platinum deposits found near tidewater at Goodnews Bay, he said, were exceedingly good, but most claims were staked in the narrow stretch of beach where the first digging was done.

WILDLIFE GROUPS TO OPEN MEETINGS HERE TOMORROW

About 1500 Sportsmen to Attend—Secretary Wallace to Speak at Afternoon Session.

Conservation of wild animals, birds and fish will occupy the attention of 1500 sportsmen and other interested persons at the four-day North American Wildlife Conference, sponsored by the American Wildlife Institute, opening tomorrow at Hotel Jefferson. Among the speakers will be Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and 20 other government officials who are in departments which deal with conservation. Secretary Wallace will talk at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow on the general topic of wildlife conservation.

The Wildlife Institute is chiefly concerned with research work, while the General Wildlife Federation, which it sponsors, is most interested in legislation to protect game and fish, Carl D. Shoemaker of Washington, secretary of the Federation, explained to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday.

Recent passage of the amendment to the Missouri Constitution to protect and conserve wildlife is a "classic example," he said, of the work organized groups can do. The Missouri Wildlife Federation, like those in 39 other States, attempts to translate into legislation the findings of research workers engaged in the Institute, he added.

Darling to Preside.

Wednesday has been set aside for the formation of a permanent Wildlife Federation. A temporary organization was set up last February in Washington with Jay N. (Ding) Darling, cartoonist and former head of the United States Bureau of Biological Survey, as chairman. He will preside at Wednesday's meeting.

The Federation's purpose, as stated in its preamble, is as follows: "Believing that the natural resources of this continent are economic, social, recreational and esthetic assets which should be restored and perpetuated for our posterity, and realizing that this can be achieved only through an aroused and enlightened opinion among the people of this nation, we dedicate this Federaton to these ends."

The Federation now has 3,000,000 members in the 40 state organizations, Shoemaker, who is secretary of the Senate Wildlife Committee, said. Members are drawn from women's clubs, farm organizations, civic groups, sports organizations, youth movements and other types of organizations interested in the outdoors and recreation.

The Bureau of Biological Survey, the Forest Service, Soil Conservation Service, Bureau of Fisheries and the National Park Service will have exhibits on the mezzanine floor.

Accompanying the principal conference will be several meetings of related organizations, among them the Outdoor Writers' Association, the Committee on Pollution and the Committee on Wildlife Legislation. Delegates to the second annual conference will speak before six luncheon clubs and will deliver 14 radio addresses to focus attention further on conserving natural resources.

Former United States Senator Frederic C. Walcott of Connecticut, president of the Wildlife Institute, will be chairman at a banquet Wednesday evening. Scheduled speakers are Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, vice-chairman of the Senate Committee on Wildlife; Dr. Paul B. Sears of the University of Oklahoma, author of "Deserts on the March," and John C. Hall, president of the St. Louis Federal Savings & Loan Association. Wildlife motion pictures with sound effects will be shown by Dr. Arthur A. Allen.

One session will be presided over by Aldo Leopold, professor of game management at the University of Wisconsin and chairman of the technical committee of the Wildlife Institute. About 70 papers will be read on such subjects as food and environment of fish, birds and mammals, flood control, soil erosion, and mosquito control. Frank C. Ashbrook, chief of the fur resources division of the Bureau of Biological Survey, will discuss the nation's fur resources at a special session Tuesday.

Study of Wild Life Trends.

Instructors, graduate students and agricultural extension agents at nine colleges and universities are studying the factors which make for an increase or decrease in the bobwhite quail, mourning dove, wild turkey, bear, water fowl, water-fowl food plants, wild-life parasites, moose, cottontail rabbit, grouse, muskrat, coot, pheasant, woodcock, elk, deer, beaver, fox, raccoon and all regional birds. They will make reports at special meetings.

A prospectus issued for the conference states: "One hundred million acres of lakes and marshes, original wild-life breeding grounds, have been drained and other old water levels lowered, greatly aggravating recurrent disasters from drouths, dust storms and floods.

"An alarming proportion of our lakes and streams have been polluted by industrial and municipal wastes. This has resulted in an annual cost to the public of about $1,000,000,000 to secure pure water supplies, and entails today an inestimable loss in property values and recreation facilities, as well as the wholesale destruction of fish life."

Early Arrivals for Wild Life Parley

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

ERNEST G. HOLT and PROF. ALDO LEOPOLD, WHO arrived yesterday to attend the second North American Wildlife Conference at Hotel Jefferson. Holt is head of wild life management for the Soil Conservation Service in Washington, and Leopold is professor of game management at the University of Wisconsin and chairman of the technical committee of the American Wildlife Institute.

PILGRIMAGE TO ROCKNE SHRINE

William Allen White to Read Eulogy at Monument March 4.

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 27.—Dr. D. M. Nigro of Kansas City, founder and president of the Rockne Club, today announced plans for a pilgrimage March 4 of club members, Notre Dame alumni and other admirers of the famed Notre Dame coach to the Knute Rockne Shrine near Bazaar, Kan.

March 4 is the birth anniversary of Rockne, who was killed in an airplane crash near Bazaar.

Nigro will head a group making the pilgrimage from Kansas City. William Allen White, Emporia publisher, will lead the caravan from Cottonwood Falls, Kan., and will read the eulogy and place a wreath on the monument.

SUIT TO CONSTRUE WILL OF MRS. M'MILLAN

Heirs File Action to Get Lapsed Annuities of $2,000,000 Trust Estate.

Another suit in which heirs of Mrs. Eliza McMillan, who died 22 years ago, seek to obtain lapsed annuities in her $2,000,000 trust estate was filed in Circuit Court yesterday. A similar suit, filed by the same group of plaintiffs seven years ago, was later dismissed by them.

In the present action the court is asked to interpret Mrs. McMillan's will and construe its provisions so that the St. Louis Union Trust Co. as trustee may pay the benefits in question to the plaintiffs now instead of waiting until expiration of the trust. Mrs. McMillan had provided that payments were to be made to 54 different individuals as long as they lived. Upon the death of any of the beneficiaries their shares would accumulate as part of the trust fund, the whole of which was not to be distributed among residuary legatees until the death of the surviving annuitant.

The suit points out that 26 of these beneficiaries have died and their rights have terminated. Hugo Monnig of the law firm of Taylor, Chasnoff & Willson, counsel for petitioners, estimated that the lapsed annuities were accumulating at the rate of about $18,000 a year and that the amount of such shares exceeds $125,000.

The plaintiffs are William Kingston, Florence Northrup McLeod, Eula Mabee, Grace Ashbaugh, Norah K. Lawrence, Lynne Cavers and James V. Frank as administrator of the estate of Mary E. Kingston. The trustee is named as defendant with 28 co-defendants who are heirs under the will. The plaintiffs are among the residuary legatees. They allege that the section of the trust requiring the trustee to hold the lapsed income until final distribution is void, that it creates a "dry trust" and is, therefore, inactive.

Mrs. McMillan was the widow of William McMillan, former president of the American Car & Foundry Co. The annuities provided by her ranged from $25 to $500 a month. One of the contentions of plaintiffs is that it was not made clear whether the lapsed benefits were to be distributed immediately or after the expiration of the trust.

NEW JAPANESE BUDGET GIVES ARMY AND NAVY OVER HALF

Vice-Admiral Tells of Policy to Destroy Enemy Air Bases Before Planes Reach Mainland.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Feb. 27.—"The policy of the navy is to destroy enemy air bases before enemy planes can reach the Japanese mainland," Vice-Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai, Minister of the Navy, informed the Diet today.

He said the plan had been contrived in "agreement" with the Army. The Empire's principal cities, the Minister said, thus would be safe from attack by air and the Navy "is fully prepared" to keep enemy aircraft from the homeland.

General Gen Sugiyama, however, argued for the nation's record-breaking defense budget on the need for increased protection from air raids. He declared the dual defenses provided by the budget would correct any weakness.

The revised budget was expected to be adopted, giving the Army and Navy ¥427,500,000, or more than half the ¥788,300,000 total.

Although the new budget cuts 223,200,000 yen ($62,500,000) off the Hirota schedule, the only revision of Army and Navy appropriations was postponement of 46,000,000 yen expenditures by them until a future date.

DISCUSSION ON PUTTING U.S. IN STEEL BUSINESS

House Bloc to Consider Legislation as Result of Navy Tieup.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Leaders of a House bloc recently organized to seek nationalization of essential parts of the munitions industry today called a meeting of the bloc for Tuesday to consider legislation authorizing the Government to buy or build a steel plant.

This step followed failure of steel companies to bid on a large part of recent Navy orders. Navy officials have declared that the failure to bid was due to a provision of the Walsh-Healey Act requiring holders of Government contracts to observe a 40-hour week. The United States Steel Corporation has indicated that in certain steel manufacturing operations a 40-hour week is not feasible.

Representative Scott (Dem.), California, who with Representative Maverick (Dem.), Texas, heads the House bloc meeting Tuesday, said, "Why should the United States Government be at the mercy of a couple of steel companies? If it's our policy to maintain a Navy purely for national defense and not to keep these steel and shipbuilding companies in business, then the Government could make its own steel and build its own ships."

The Labor Department announced it hoped to break the steel deadlock by getting one concern to submit bids without demanding any exemptions from the Walsh-Healey Act.

In this connection, Scott emphatically opposed exemptions as a solution.

"There are too many exemptions to the law now," he said.

He and some other members of the House Naval Affairs Committee favored an investigation to determine what effect operation of the Walsh-Healey law had on national defense.

In support of a nationalized munitions industry, Scott said the proposed Government munitions plants and Navy yards should not be permitted to sell their products to any foreign nations.

"Then if we did become involved in a war," he contended, "we would not have to face an enemy armed with our own weapons."

UNION HEAD ON OUSTER OF SIT-DOWN STRIKERS

Homer Martin Says Fansteel and Douglas Workers Were Unprepared.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers' Union, said today that public officials who "refuse to deal with labor questions from the point of view of human welfare may just as well kiss the political arena good-by."

Martin, who stopped off in New York on his way to Detroit after opening an organizational campaign in New Jersey at a Newark mass meeting last night, called by the Committee for Industrial Organization, said he meant this particularly at this time for Gov. Harold Hoffman of New Jersey and Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City.

"The trend of thought," Martin said, "is toward intelligent, enlightened views on labor questions and people throughout the country expect such a viewpoint from their public officials. Unless Hague and Hoffman change their attitudes toward labor problems it's just a question of when they're through politically."

Discusses Fansteel Incident.

Discussing the ousting of sit-down strikers in the Fansteel plant in North Chicago, Ill., and the Douglas Aircraft factory in Santa Monica, Cal., Martin said: "The sit-down strike is still effective and employers will meet many difficulties in ousting a well-organized, well-disciplined sit-down strike, engaged in by a democratic majority of workers in a plant."

With particular reference to the Douglas Aircraft situation, Martin said "there might well be enemies of America who seek to prevent the building of airplanes in this country and would use sabotage to this end."

"In such a situation as Santa Monica the union would act as a police force in the factory. The use of force on the part of a company, and the maintainance of an anti-labor policy is certainly not conducive to building good, safe airplanes. If Douglas expects people to ride in his airplanes with a feeling of security he should have good will in his plant."

Lack of Strategy in Waukegan.

Commenting on the strategy of the employers and authorities in North Chicago, Martin said "such a strategy would never have worked in Flint in the General Motors strike, and it was more of a case in North Chicago of lack of preparation and lack of strategy on the part of the workers in the plant." Martin said furthermore that neither he nor his union would defend the right of a small minority to hold up production with a strike.

"I have read frequently since Santa Monica and North Chicago that the threat of a sit-down strike has been definitely removed from industry," he said. "In the first place there is no threat if employers will deal with labor. The moment they do this and recognize the rights of labor, the threat of a strike is removed. A sit-down strike will always be an effective protest against bad conditions."

Cites Steel Companies' Sit-Down.

Martin said he wondered what public officials who opposed the sit-down strike "think of the steel companies who are on a sit-down strike against the Government in refusing to bid on Government construction."

"There is another sit-down strike, too," Martin said. "The sit-down strike of the Supreme Court which is responsible for the labor unrest in this country. And if the Supreme Court permitted the legislation of Congress to go into effect, most of the evils in industry would have been eliminated. If labor had waited on the courts to help them, they'd still be in slavery."

Martin said he expected that the negotiations with the Chrysler company would be completed peacefully and that an agreement would be reached without resort to a strike. "The Chrysler company has evinced an intelligent attitude, and has found this attitude profitable because a spirit of good will prevails now in the Chrysler factories that never obtained before," he said.

Although the resignation was requested a month ago, it has not yet been submitted, and Rodgers has requested an extension until March 15, Wayman said. The request was denied. TO QUIZ FINANCIERS ON VAN SWERINGENS

Senators to Ask T. W. Lamont and Others About Depression Loans to Brothers.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Senate Investigators today summoned five financiers to testify next week regarding a series of loans made to the Van Sweringen transportation network in the depths of the depression.

Senator Wheeler (Dem)., Montana, chairman of the Senate Railway Investigating Committee, said their testimony would begin Tuesday, when the committee resumes its inquiry. Those summoned are: Thomas W. Lamont, a partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., and Harold S. Stanley of Morgan-Stanley, Inc., the banking firm's security issuing department; Charles R. Gay, president of the New York Stock Exchange; J. M. B. Hoxey, exchange stock listing expert, and Joseph R. Swann, former president of the Guaranty Co., New York investment firm.

Wheeler said he would ask the witnesses about a $30,000,000 real estate note issue made for the late Van Sweringen brothers by Guaranty Co., on which he contended the investing public lost $15,758,004.

Swann told the committee recently that his firm "made a mistake" in deciding to underwrite the notes.

Wheeler indicated he also would seek details of a $39,500,000 bank loan to the Van Sweringens by a Morgan banking syndicate.

PETS GIVEN IN ZOO'S LOTTERY

Moscow Institution Gets Rid of Its Surplus Stock.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Feb. 27.—The Moscow Zoo, one of the largest in the world, has solved the problem of its excess animal and bird population by distributing young pets to children on a lottery basis.

The scheme has proved embarrassing to parents of many children who drew young bears, wild pigs, large birds and other pets which they could not accommodate in cramped living quarters. So many protests came in that the Zoo had to agree to exchange such pets for smaller animals and birds. Some 7500 animals and birds were distributed.

PROPOSES 6 POINTS FOR FOREIGN POLICY

Prof. Jessup of Columbia U. Includes Trade Reciprocity and Neutrality Statement.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Philip C. Jessup, professor of international law at Columbia University, outlined today a six-point basis for American foreign policy built around this nation's leadership in reviving international trade and adjusting currencies.

Addressing the Foreign Policy Association, at a forum on "Paramount Issues of American Foreign Policy," Jessup made these proposals:

"1. Continuance of the reciprocal trade treaty policy as part of a general effort to revive international trade.

"2. A simultaneous effort to further the adjustment of international exchange.

"3. Building up of friendly relations with Japan particularly by repealing the immigration exclusion law and putting Japan on a quota basis.

"4. Readiness to co-operate in any new steps for international adjustment as, for example, by disarmament or through a consultative agreement which would keep us informed but uncommitted; we should join the World Court and participate fully in all non-political international activities such as the international labor organization.

"5. A rigid neutrality policy which will apply in every case when we do not decide to get into the struggle. It should be made difficult to decide to get in, and while we are out we should stay all the way out. This is not inconsistent with a policy of inter-neutral co-operation which is most desirable. The present bill should be adopted as a temporary measure and should provide for full study and report on the economic, political and legal factors involved.

"6. A refusal to line up in advance with any existing group of Powers, no matter what slogan leads us on, never forgetting the difficulty of a correct decision as to which party has right on its side. Agreements to consult make it easier for us to reach an informed decision."

Jessup said there might be some situations in which the United States would feel its interests required it to participate, such as aiding the British Empire in the event of a conflict with Germany.

Stephen Raushenbush, secretary of the Senate Munitions Investigating Committee, told the forum that the United States "should stay out of the next war unless it finds some cause more worthy than the preservation of the status quo, or more possible of success than the saving of democracy at a time when every nation is forced to lay aside democracy to wage war."

LIFE SENTENCE FOR MAN CORONER'S JURY LET GO FREE

Robert Smith Sentenced by Judge Borders for Killing Another Negro in Quarrel.

Robert Smith, 35 years old, a Negro, who last November was freed by a Coroner's jury after killing an unarmed Negro with a shotgun, was sentenced to life imprisonment by City Judge William F. Borders at East St. Louis yesterday.

When Smith pleaded guilty of murder last Wednesday, Judge Borders remarked: "This simply shows the ridiculousness of Coroner's jury proceedings."

Smith, known as "Sonny Boy," shot Willie Smith, not related to him, in a house at 708 Division avenue, East St. Louis. He said he fired because he believed the other man was about to draw a revolver to settle a quarrel, although he was found to have been unarmed. Before passing sentence yesterday, Judge Borders heard witnesses who testified that a woman left Willie Smith for Robert Smith, who later accused Willie Smith of cutting the tires on his automobile.

DYNAMITE MURDER SUSPECT CAUGHT IN OKLAHOMA

Agrees to Waive Extradition to South Dakota; Traced Through Money Order.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Feb. 27.—William Nesbeth, one of two fugitives sought in a New Year's eve dynamite murder near Sioux Falls, S. D., was held for questioning by police here today. He agreed to waive extradition. The 37-year-old suspect was arrested by city detectives at a hotel.

One man was killed by dynamite, said to have been set off by members of a five-man gang after a $38,000 jewelry robbery at Sioux City, Ia., in December.

Officers said they learned that Nesbeth was here by tracing a money order.

AIR MANEUVERS IN CARIBBEAN

Planes Arrive for Most Extensive Tactics in Region.

By the Associated Press.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Feb. 27. United States naval planes from the base at Coco Solo, Canal Zone, began arriving at Caribbean ports today to start the most extensive air maneuvers ever scheduled in this region.

Operating under orders from Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, at St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, about 50 planes started eastward from the United States naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba, to which they had flown from Coco Solo. They were split into groups bound for Mayagues and Ponce, Puerto Rico, Culebra Island, and St. Thomas. Most of the planes carried six-man crews.

LEIPZIG FAIR FOSTERS NAZI COLONIAL DREAM

Public Interest Directed to Campaign to Regain Lost German Lands.

By the Associated Press.

LEIPZIG, Germany, Feb. 27.—Germany's aspirations for return of colonies and for a bigger place in the economic sun held chief interest tonight on the eve of the annual Leipzig spring fair.

The fair, which dates back to the middle ages, is being relied on this year to give powerful impetus to the colonial ambition and to the import-export trade.

Germany, intent on stimulating foriegn markets, is eager to import those essential raw materials for which no home-made substitutes have been discovered. Dr. Hjalmar Schacht has emphasized that both go hand-in-hand, that increased exports are vital to provide funds to pay for necessary imports.

Claims to colonies lost in the World War are being reinforced by articles and broadcasts by Gen. Franz von Epp, Governor of Bavaria, and other chiefs of the Nazi "colonial office." All stress the "justice" of returning foreign possessions in view of Germany's technical and scientific achievements.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler has declared the Third Reich's policy is to encourage and promote trade intercourse abroad. That is held to be the basis of the four-year self-sufficiency plan and an important weapon to "break the Jewish boycott."

The importance of the United States as a customer for German wares was emphasized by Dr. Raymond Koehler, president of the fair, who said the shrinkage of German-American trade has gone far beyond the bounds imposed by consideration of either nation's domestic interests.

FREEZING AND THAWING MAY INJURE SOME CROPS IN STATE

Soil Buckles and Lifts Plants From Ground, Explains U. of Missouri Professor.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Feb. 27.—A new menace to winter grain and legume crops has arisen in Missouri in recent weeks, described by experts as "pumping" plants out of the ground, the result of alternate periods of freezing and thawing.

Although widespread damage has not yet been reported, Prof. M. F. Miller, assistant dean of the Missouri College of Agriculture faculty, today said that extensive damage would result if temperatures should continue to vary sharply and frequently pass the freezing point. Prof. Miller explained that over a wide area ice crystals have been forming in the top soil and expanding, causing the soil to buckle and lift plants.

"This action breaks tender, fibrous roots, sometimes as far down as six inches. The crown of the plant is moved above the surface and a section of the root is pulled up and left unprotected. With rising temperatures the ice crystals melt, forming puddles in 'soupy' fields. Repitition of the cycle soon exposes a large area of the stem and disjoints thread-like roots necessary for growth. Actual damage to plants will be apparent in a few weeks when injured fields show loss of color and fail to respond to continued warm spring weather."

A public hearing on the administration anti-smoke bill, pending in the Board of Aldermen, will be held before the Public Safety Committee at 1:30 o'clock next Tuesday afternoon at Room 308 in the City Hall. Alderman Hubert Hoeflinger is chairman.

A delegation of Southern Illinois coal mine operators called on Mayor Dickmann yesterday and asked for removal of the section of the proposed ordinance requiring washing of coal with more than 12 per cent ash or 2 per cent sulphur content. Mayor Dickmann told them that he could not approve removal of the section as it was an essential provision.

DIPLOMATS SEEK TWO KEY MEN FOR SPANISH BLOCKADE

One Would Supervise Sea Patrol, the Other Land Guards to Keep War Inside Country.

DETAILS MAY DELAY ENFORCING OF PLAN

Real Test to Come When Conflict Takes Decisive Turn—Fall of Malaga Cited as Case in Point.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—International diplomats called for two key men tonight to direct a cordon of foreign warships and military observers around warring Spain. Their jobs would be to hold the civil war inside the country and keep both men and munitions from crossing the frontiers from the outside. One would supervise the sea patrol, the other the land guards along the French and Portuguese boundaries.

The danger of the conflict spreading into other parts of Europe has been lessened, it is thought, by a 27-power agreement in the International Non-intervention Committee to bar foreign volunteers in Spain—effective a week ago—and begin a supervised control plan by next Saturday midnight.

Actually, so many details of the plan remained to be completed that it appeared most unlikely the machinery for barricading Spain's borders and seaports would start operating as scheduled.

Several Men Suggested.

Sir Robert Hodgson, British diplomat who has served in Russia, France and Albania, was at first considered for the job of directing the entire plan from London. Later information discounted the idea he would be selected. Both France and Germany want a Hollander to supervise the committee's land agents on the French-Spanish frontier.

Major-General Jan Joseph Godfried Van Voorst Tot Voorst, commander of the Netherlands contingent of the international force which watched over the Saar Plebiscite in 1935, has been mentioned.

Dr. A. C. D. De Graff, former Netherlands minister to the United States who declined an offer to become League of Nations Commissioner for the free city of Danzig, has been under consideration for director of the sea control.

The real test of the non-intervention agreement, diplomatic sources said, will depend on developments in the war between the Spanish Government and the insurgents.

Rebels Winning at Time.

Germany and Italy, they pointed out, agreed to ban volunteers and accept international control of shipments of war materials at the time when the fall of Malaga seemed to presage a quick defeat for the Government.

Now the Government's counter-offensive on the Jarama front southeast of Madrid has apparently relieved the pressure on Almeria, the southeastern seaport toward which the insurgent conquerors of Malaga were advancing.

Some unconfirmed reports say 48,000 volunteers from Italy alone still were fighting for the insurgents. France now wants all foreign volunteers barred from Spain. Frenchmen, Russians and persons from various other nations are fighting with the Spanish Government; Italians and Germans with the insurgents.

Plan for Navy Control.

The navy control plan calls for German and Italian ships to be stationed off Government-held territory, British and French vessels will watch insurgent ports.

Russia and Portugal withdrew from the naval patrol plan, apparently by agreement.

The four fleets were assigned these zones:

Britain—The northern coast, from the French frontier to the northwest corner of Spain; the southern coast, from the Portuguese border east past Almeria to Cape De Gata; also the Canary Islands in the Atlantic and Spain's North African possessions.

France—The northwestern corner of Spain, to the Portuguese border (overlapping with the British fleet); the insurgent-controlled islands of Majorca and Ibiza in the Mediterranean Balearic Islands.

Italy and Germany—The Mediterranean coast from Cape de Gata to the French border. Italy also will patrol the Government-held Balearic Island of Minorca.

The German battleship Admiral Graf Spee will sail from Kiel, Germany, Monday, to begin patrol duty with the destroyers Nurnberg and Leipzig, both of which already are on the way to Spanish waters.

RIDGEFIELD, Conn., Feb. 27.—Geraldine Farrar, the famous soprano, said tonight on the eve of her fifty-fifth birthday she was "quite content" to be silent and enjoy the songs of others. Her singing voice, she said, would play no part in her birthday celebration. She has sung little since her retirement from the concert stage in 1932.

"Fifty-five is a good age to enjoy others," she commented. "I have my regular seat at the opera on Saturdays, and that is enough." Miss Farrar will be honor guest at a birthday party tomorrow, arranged by her friends, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Gilmour of Sanford, Conn.

CANADA TO DEBATE PRIVY COUNCIL RULING

Government to Frame Policy After Parliament Discusses Invalid Laws.

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, Feb. 27.—Canada, checked in its national move toward social-economic reform, sought today to enact some of them through provincial legislation.

The Privy Council in London sent into the discard most of the broadest social and economic program ever attempted by the Dominion, holding the laws invalid in a ruling which closely parallels the "States' rights" issue in the United States.

This high court of appeal declared unconstitutional the legislation for unemployment insurance, minimum wages, limitation of working hours and regulation of marketing.

The Council held the Dominion Government had no right to adopt such laws—that such power was reserved to the Provinces.

The Dominion Government now is asking co-operation from the Provincial Legislatures to make the legislation effective in the individual Provinces. Some provincial leaders are receptive.

Parliament Debate Expected.

The Privy Council's ruling is expected to be debated at the present session of the Dominion Parliament, and the Canadian Government probably then will make clear its future program.

Actually, only two of the laws had been put into effect—that to help farm debtors, which was ruled valid, and that permitting farmers to combine to regulate production and marketing of their products, which was declared unconstitutional.

The invalidated legislation was adopted by the Ottawa Parliament during the administration of Conservative former Prime Minister Bennett. Later it was referred to the Supreme Court of Canada by the present Liberal Government.

Neither the Privy Council nor the Supreme Court can pass on whether a law is just. They can decide on whether legislation is inside Dominion or Provincial jurisdiction.

Canada's Supreme Court held two of the laws invalid, split on three, and ruled two and part of another were valid.

Appeal to Privy Council.

Then the Government asked the Privy Council, the final appeal group, to rule on the legislation. It upheld measures to regulate trade practices and to assist indebted farmers, but scrapped the rest as being beyond the Federal Government's authority.

The Constitution empowered the Dominion Parliament to make and carry out provisions of treaties. Three of the measures referred to the Supreme Court and the Privy Council—for regulation of hours of work, minimum wages and days of rest—were included in labor conventions which arose out of the post-war treaty of Versailles, which Canada ratified.

Those were among the laws invalidated by the Privy Council.

WOMAN DROWNED WHEN COVER OF OLD CISTERN BREAKS

Mrs. Olinda Rocklage, 52, Found in 12 Feet of Water Under Henhouse.

Mrs. Olinda Rocklage, 58 years old, was drowned yesterday when the concrete covering of an old cistern broke, plunging her into 12 feet of water, at her home on Bonhomme road, a mile west of Price road, St. Louis County.

The abandoned cistern was covered by the concrete floor of a chicken house, which was built about 12 years ago. Mrs. Rocklage went to feed the chickens and, when she failed to return, two of her daughters investigated. Discovering the hole in the chicken house floor, they called neighbors, who lowered a ladder and removed the body.

Mrs. Rocklage, a widow, is survived by six daughters and five sons.

$5000 IN BANKS IN NAME OF RAG COLLECTOR WHO DIED

No Bed in Poorly Furnished Flat Said to Have Been Owned by Eugene Kelly, 72.

Examination of the belongings of Eugene Kelly, 72 years old, a collector of rags and junk, who was found dead in poor surroundings last Friday, revealed bank books listing deposits totaling $5139 in three St. Louis banks. The Public Administrator took charge of the estate yesterday.

Kelly apparently died of natural causes in his squalid flat at 2029A Eugenia street, which police understood he owned. He lived in the neighborhood more than 40 years and had become a familiar figure through his excursions to pick up rags, bottles and odds and ends. Police said there was no bed in his poorly furnished home, and he slept on the floor. Records show that he was fined $50 for vagrancy in 1934. The neighborhood in which he lived is inhabited almost exclusively by Negroes, and a Negro neighbor told officers that Kelly had a son, who is being sought. The body is at the morgue.

Police took charge of a woman, found living in poverty in a room in the same house, and placed her in City Hospital.

BIDS ON TWO NEW CRUISERS TO BE ASKED FOR NEXT MONTH

Battleships Named Washington and North Carolina Will Be Three Years in Building.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27. — Bids probably will be asked for next month on the construction of two new $50,000,000 battleships which Secretary of the Navy Swanson named The North Carolina and The Washington today.

Three or four years will be required to complete the vessels. Although no completed battleship ever has borne either State's name, two other Navy vessels have been named North Carolina and four others Washington.

Both states were prevented from being represented in the battleship fleet earlier by the signing of the Washington naval limitations treaty in 1922. Battleships then under construction had been given the names of North Carolina and Washington but both were scrapped before being completed, in accordance with the terms of the treaty.

FRENCH RADIO OWNERS VOTE ON BROADCASTING CONTROL

Government Appeals to Tax-Paying Set Owners to Support Followers of Premier Blum.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Feb. 27.—Last minute ballots from tax-paying radio owners poured in tonight in the Popular Front's fight for control of French Government broadcasting. Tonight marked the deadline for returning mailed-in ballots to elect members of regional councils of radio management.

Counting of the votes of 3,000,000 radio owners who have paid the 50-franc ($2.40) annual tax on receiving sets will start tomorrow.

The Government appealed to politically-minded fans to elect supporters of Socialist Premier Leon Blum to control programs over the nation's 12-station network. The campaign, an issue between Right and Left partisans, was waged as though members of Parliament were being elected.

SWINDLE SUSPECT ARRESTED

Seized at New York as He Is About to Sail for Italy.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Francisco Lubatti, 37 years old, was arrested today as he was about to board the liner Rex for Italy at the request of California authorities. He is accused of a "money making machine" swindle. Police said the request for his detention charged he defrauded a fellow Italian, Candido Gillio of Fresno, Cal., of out $8000.

Lubatti, who police said went by the name of Joseph Lubatti in California, was found to be carrying $1700 in cash, $1000 in traveler's checks and $1800 in stocks. He denied he was the man wanted in Fresno.

CHURCH-STATE ISSUE TENSE IN VERA CRUZ

Dispatches From Orizaba Predict Battle—Government Puts on Censorship.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO, D. F., Feb. 27. — Alarmed over the Vera Cruz church-state issue, Government officials put a censorship on news from the district today.

Catholics, who recently reopened their churches forcibly in a so-called "peaceful rebellion" against anti-church laws, armed themselves against any attempt by the anti-church Confederation of Workers to hold a demonstration tomorrow.

Early dispatches from Orizaba, Vera Cruz, where the issue first flared up, predicted a battle. A Government order prohibited newspapers from publishing any more such news. The situation in Orizaba was described as tense and laden with danger. Advices from there said the confederation was preparing to demonstrate tomorrow in disregard of civil and military orders against it.

Catholics were observed in the municipal market place buying quantities of hemp bags which several readily acknowledged were to be filled with stones and thrown at any parading confederation members.

As when masses of Catholics stormed their long-dark churches a fortnight ago and reopened them, Indians poured in from neighboring villages to reinforce the ranks of Orizaba's faithful.

It was known many Catholic members of the confederation were in the thick of the crowds which broke into the churches. Since then, however, they have received orders from leaders to participate in anti-church manifestations on penalty of being expelled from the powerful union.

Mexican newspaper men said the ban on news of the Orizaba strife fulfilled their worst fears when the new publicity-propaganda bureau was created about a month ago. They charged it was an agency to control the Mexican press.

OPEN VERDICT IN DEATH OF SCENARIO WRITER

California Coroner's Jury Rejects Sheriff's Theory of Accidental Shooting.

By the Associated Press.

BANNING, Cal., Feb. 27. —The Sheriff's office reopened the Humphrey Pearson case tonight after a Coroner's jury was unable to determine the circumstances on which the movie scenario writer was shot to death in his Palm Spring home last Wednesday night.

Pearson was found with a bullet wound through his heart in the bedroom of his home. His body lay sprawled across that of his wife, the former Rive-King Bowman, formerly of Columbus, O.

Mrs. Pearson was too hysterical today to appear at the inquest.

Sheriff Carl Rayburn declared his investigations showed the death of Pearson was accidental. His evidence, however, failed to convince the Coroner's jury, which returned a verdict that Pearson came to his death "from a gunshot wound under circumstances which the jury is unable to determine from the evidence presented it."

Alfred Blackman, the Pearson butler, told of visiting the Pearson bedroom three times Wednesday night. He said the first time he entered the room, Pearson appeared to be drunk or asleep on the bed. He said on his second visit, Mrs. Pearson was on the floor, endeavoring to telephone, while her husband still lay on the bed. "She asked me to call a doctor," the butler testified.

Blackman, declaring he had often seen Pearson flourishing a pistol only to have it taken away from him by his wife, said he looked for the pistol in its usual place, but instead found it in the bathroom on the opposite side of the house.

When he returned to the room a third time, Blackman said, he found his employer had fallen out of bed, sprailed over his wife, who was in hysterics. The butler said he tried to lift Pearson's body, but Mrs. Pearson clung so tightly to it that he could not.

Leonard Mitchell and Catherine Henderson, friends of the Pearsons, said that on the night Pearson was shot, both Pearson and his wife were intoxicated.

Sheriff Rayburn's theory is that Pearson was killed when his wife attempted to take his pistol from him, the weapon being accidentally discharged.

BAR ON TEACHERS' UNION CONDEMNED BY EDUCATORS

Progressive Association Asserts St. Louisans Have Right to Affiliate With Organized Labor.

A resolution condemning the regulation of the St. Louis Board of Education prohibiting the employment of teachers who are members of any organization affiliated with organized labor and calling for an investigation of the circumstances preventing its repeal, was adopted at the concluding session of the annual conference of the Progressive Education Association yesterday at Hotel Jefferson.

"It is the tradition of academic freedom that American teachers be accorded the same rights as other citizens, including the right to join organizations of their own choosing," the resolution stated. It was introduced by Russell Babcock of the Winnetka(Ill.) public schools.

Opposes Davis' Removal.

Action on the resolution was taken at a general session at which subjects under discussion included educational freedom, teachers' organizations, loyalty oaths, social planning and race and religious prejudices.

Other resolutions adopted indorsed the child labor amendment, the efforts of President Roosevelt in the Department of Social Welfare to protect the interests of consumers and legislation to provide Federal aid for education without discrimination against "minor races." Legislation "to take the profit out of war" also was advocated.

Babcock's resolution also added the association to the organizations, including the American Federation of Teachers and the American Sociological Society, which have expressed themselves against the dismissal of Jerome Davis associate professor of practical philanthropy at Yale Divinity School. The failure to reapoint Dr. Davis must, the resolution stated, "in the light of all known circumstances, be regarded as a violation of academic freedom."

Dr. Davis was notified he would not be retained next year after the publication of his book, "Capitalism and Its Culture." He charged it was because of the expression of his economic opinions.

Baker on Teachers' Union.

President Frank Baker of Milwaukee State Teachers' College, who obtained special permission of the American Federation of Teachers to join their union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, although he is an administrator, asserted that teachers must "organize in accord with their function to perpetuate democracy through the promotion of the common welfare."

Almost every teachers' organization in America, he charged, has fallen into the hands of a small group, usually administrative. The one exception, he said, was the American Federation of Teachers, organized around locals which have regular meetings and give the rank and file of the membership something to do instead of merely having annual conventions.

"To my mind," he said, "any board of education or any administrator that uses the threat of insecurity to deny teachers the right to join the American Federation of Teachers, is depriving the teachers of a right clearly guaranteed them under the first and fifth amendments to the Constitution.

"The teachers have as good a right to join the Federation of Teachers as the administrator or the members of the board have to join the Association of Commerce.

Purpose of Education.

"I believe the fundamental purpose of American education is the promotion of the common welfare and the avenue for achievement of that is to be found in raising the standard of living of the mass of the American people—the workers and producers. I wished to be identified with the greatest force in the raising of the standard—organized labor."

American public education, Dr. Baker said, has failed democracy for four reasons: (1) It has not taught the realistic truth about democracy, having shown the perfections of democracy but not the realies; (2) it has not upheld the fundamental ideals of American democracy—work of the individual personality, liberty, equality and fraternity; (3) it has not built its own organizations on democratic principles, and (4) it has not carried democracy into the classroom.

School Board Institutions.

School boards mistakenly intrude into the determination of questions which are not general public policy but which require technical competence the board members do not possess, Goodwin Watson of Columbia University Teachers' College said in a paper on educational freedom.

"Administrators conceive of themselves at the 'top' with teachers 'underneath,' and speak of 'my school,' 'my policies' and 'my staff' in some inappropriate analogy to the owner of a business or the commander of an army," he declared. "Supervisors get the unfortunate notion that teachers are to carry out the supervisor's program, rather than be helped by the supervisor in building their own program.

"There are two great concepts which must be stressed if the insecurity which naturally arises from maladministration is to be relieved. One is the primacy of teacher-pupil relationship. Janitors, administrators and supervisors exist only to improve the quality of that teacher-pupil experience. They are the servants of teaching. They are justified only so long as they serve the teaching.

Security for Teachers.

"The quality of teaching depends, however, upon the teacher. No administrative or curricular or supervisory or janitorial or financial setup can give children a good education under a strained, anxious, fearful, insecure and maladjusted teacher.

"The other concept is that of genuine democracy. This does not mean electing representatives or counting noses. Democracy means the participation of everyone in accordance with his ability in the formation of policies which concern him. It means no domination, no exploitation, no under-cover manipulation. It is probable that the achievement of democracy in education depends upon teacher organizations, parent organizations and pupil organizations able to demand and not merely to request democratic organization."

The association's Commission on Educational Freedom, Watson said, should attempt to include teachers under the Social Security Act and explore the possibility of "increasing the present seriously inadequate social security benefits." Campaigns for State legislation and for voluntary co-operatives were urged if benefits of the Federal plan cannot be extended to teachers. State tenure laws, giving teachers in elementary and secondary schools the security of tenure which most college professors take for granted, also were advocated.

Loyalty Oaths Condemned.

Legislation requiring loyalty oaths of teachers was condemned by Dean Grayson N. Kefauver of the Stanford University School of Education.

"The recent legislation growing out of the stress of the depression does not indicate a lack of desirable loyalty of teachers to American ideals," he said. "Instead, it is clearly an attempt to intimidate teachers to bring pressure on them to avoid study of the social field and to break public confidence in the teaching profession.

"Strenuous resistance to this discriminating legislation is fully justified. However, it is difficult to avoid misinterpretation of this resistance. Critics of schools loudly proclaim the resistance is evidence of undemocratic attitude. Consequently, teachers should adopt a positive program of interpretation of the meaning of American democracy. By this method it will be possible to show the un-American nature of efforts to block effective teaching through requirement of loyalty oaths."

Officers Elected.

Dr. W. Carson Ryan, New York, staff associate in higher education, Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, was elected president of the association. Dr. John Dewey, 77-year-old Columbia University philosopher, known as "the father of progressive education," was named honorary president.

Carleton Washburne, superintendent of schools at Winnetka, Ill., was elected executive vice-president. Other vice presidents chosen are: Robert H. Lane, assistant superintendent of schools, Los Angeles, Cal., and Lois Hayden Meek, Teachers' College, Columbia University.

Frederick L. Redefer was re-elected executive secretary and the election by the directors of Forrest Long, professor of education at New York University, as treasurer was recommended by the nominating committee.

TENNESSEE COAL, IRON CO. WAGE PARLEY COLLAPSES

Strike In Ore Mines Likely, Says Union After Deadlock Is Unbroken.

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 27.—Negotiations to prevent a strike in the iron ore mines of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co. have been unsuccessful, union officers, returning here from mediation conferences at Montgomery, said today.

The Tennessee company employs about 2500 men in its iron ore shafts. Members of the mine, mill and smelter workers' union, who claim a majority in mines of the Tennessee company, already have voted to strike for abolition of a tonnage pay scale, return to a daily wage and reinstatement of 155 union miners.

The Montgomery conference, suggested by Gov. Bibb Graves, was attended by T. C. I. officials, union leaders, L. J. Smith, U. S. Labor Conciliator, and the Governor. "Things are deadlocked and there seems no prospect for any future negotiations," Smith said after the joint conference at the capital. T. C. I. said the 155 men for whom the union asked reinstatement were "inefficient or undesirable." The union termed failure to re-employ the men "discrimination."

A commission to investigate the cause of the disturbance was dispatched to Latakia by authorities, while reports were current in Beirut that Count de Martel, the French high commissioner, was anxious to dissolve the iron shirt organization.

ANOTHER SMART USED CAR BUYER

● "I suppose it was natural for me to turn to a Dodge dealer when I decided to buy a used car," states J. S. Robertson, express clerk. "I need transportation to run back and forth to the office and yet I want a dependable used car because I am often obliged to leave it parked outside the best part of the day in all kinds of weather.

"But I will confess that after I had just about selected a very excellent buy, I shopped around the other places and checked up, only to discover that the used car that the Dodge dealer offered me was priced between $35 and $50 under what other dealers were asking.

"Besides, the Dodge dealer's used car that I had selected was one of their Blue Seal cars that had been triple-checked for appearance, condition and price, and the salesman had a complete record of its specifications. Needless to say, I bought the Dodge dealer's used car and I have had absolutely no trouble with it. It looks 'swell' and it performs 'swell', and above all it is thoroughly dependable."

Pennsylvanian Identified as Ohio Fugitive 15 Years After His Escape.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 27.—Torrance J. Cannon, in Pittsburgh, Pa., decided to fight extradition to Ohio where he escaped from prison 15 years ago. He became a mill foreman in Pittsburgh, married and has two daughters, who learned only four days ago he was a convict. His wife caused his arrest after a domestic quarrel and he was identified by fingerprints as an escaped convict.

Mrs. Cannon visited Columbus yesterday and asked Gov. Davey to pardon her husband. Warden James Woodard of the Ohio State penitentiary said he would ask Gov. Davey Monday to issue extradition papers for Cannon.

DOUGLAS AIRCRAFT PLANT TO REOPEN

Firm Makes Announcement—Strikers Expect It to be Picketed.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 27. — The Douglas Aircraft factory will reopen Monday, President Donald Douglas announced today. All but 72 of its 342 sit-down strikers indicted on trespass conspiracy charges were released from jail without bond. The 72 were required to give bail.

President John K. Northrop also announced reopening Monday of the Northrop plant, Douglass subsidiary, where a sit-down strike was abandoned yesterday under threats of more indictments and Northrop's promises to negotiate.

A spokesman for the United Automobile Workers of America, aircraft division, said picketing at the Douglas plant probably would continue Monday.

Douglas said in his announcement that the decision to reopen the factory was "in response to a petition signed by hundreds of employes." Gov. Frank F. Merriam praised the action of Los Angeles county authorities in handling the sit-down strikes at the two factories.

"The defiance of Government and violation of the law cannot be tolerated or condoned in any community," he said.

Ugly Side of London Life Pictured as 'Mixture of Muddle, Pretense, Misery'

'Metropolitan Man', Book by Robert Sinclair, Gives Bald Figures on Sickness, Housing and Crime.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—No city on earth has had so many laudatory books written about it or enjoyed such a good "press" as London. Literally hundreds of books have been devoted to London's scenic grandeurs, its eminent citizens, its literary associations, its river, its East End, its West End, its architecture and its very alleys. The faculty which England, as a whole, has displayed for puting its best foot forward in its own press has extended doubly in London, its metropolis and hub of empire. The press of other countries, as in individual cases, has tended to take England's capital at its own valuation.

But now a book appears which deals with London not as a static, physical city but as an organic center of 7,000,000 people. Its statistical method is bald, but it gives an interesting picture of Londoners in the mass, how they live and die and what fate awaits them from the cradle to the grave. The book is "Metropolitan Man" and its author is Robert Sinclair.

In one of his few editorial outbursts Sinclair accuses London of being "a disgusting mixture of muddle, pretense, lost opportunities and needless misery."

Undernourished Children.

On public health he gives some figures to account for the fact that in an hour's walk about the city one sees an astounding number of bleak-faced, thin and ill-seeming people. Fewer than one-sixth of the children of London are adequately nourished, and in inner London alone 22,000 school children are chronically unfit, he charges. A recent examination of 1638 schoolboys chosen at random revealed misshapen rachitic in 87 per cent of them. In the poorer districts 90 per cent were rachitic.

London is a hotbed of chronic diseases, says Sinclair, with voluntary and municipal hospitals costing £10,000,000 (normally $50,000,000) a year terribly inadequate to take care of the demand for beds. Every year 2,300,000 new patients are admitted to hospitals and, in inner London 4000 die of tuberculosis, two-thirds of them under 45.

One in 90 Londoners is a mental case. Mental hospitals cost £1,600,000 a year. In the inner county there are 29,000 mental patients in public care, besides 4000 mentally defective school children and 16,000 other mental defectives.

It is an interesting sidelight on the traffic muddle of London that one-sixth of the population are engaged in transport in one form or another, that 20,000 horses still ply the streets between the shafts of wagons and that "more of London's defectives enter the coal-delivery trade (which is principally horse drawn) than any other single trade. . . . The carter is the most mentally backward of all drivers."

Density of Congestion.

London's slums, Sinclair estimates from his researches, account for 2700 needless deaths every year. The average density over a third of London is a fraction more congested than two persons to a room. There are actually 150,000 persons living at more than three to a room. Only 37 per cent of London's families enjoy a flat, a house or what is called a "maisonette" to themselves.

In this respect London is shown up even by the "depressed areas," for only Durham in those areas has a greater density of living. Though 80,000 houses have been built in the last recorded 12 months, 360,000 more are needed if London's surplus population—growing at the rate of 80,000 a year—is to be properly housed.

In another respect London does not fare as well as some of the grimy north country towns. It is even smokier than Leeds, with all that connotes to public health. Records show that 475 tons of solid impurities are collected per square mile from the central London atmosphere in a year.

Sinclair writes: "The 14,000 homeless, the 60,000 dwellers in condemned basements, the 175,000 unemployed, the 24,000 mental patients, after all, are but a few members of the great family of Londoners. We hardly notice them in our daily round. But if every bus in every street in London were filled with drawers of the dole and food tickets there would be some left over."

One out of three persons in the great, rich city of London dies in a workhouse (poorhouse) or a rate-aided hospital, statistics show.

"Doomed to Suicide."

Five people a day in Greater London commit suicide and the rate in Inner London is one suicide in 73 deaths.

From this Sinclair estimates that 90,000 persons are now walking the streets of London who are destined to die by their own hands. At every large football match it is safe to say that 1000 present will eventually take their own lives.

"The 90,000 Londoners who are doomed to that fatal despair," says the author, "are unaccountable figures in the happiest age which the sane and civilized English have reached."

Alcohol, Births, Crime.

An indication of the other escapes from life which may be taken is given by the liquor sales of certain poor districts. In poverty-stricken Bermondsey, for example, twice as much is spent annually on alcohol as on bread, milk, rent and rates. Women are convicted of drunkenness to the number of 4000 a year.

One in every 20 babies born in London is illegitimate, and the rate is going up steadily. Legitimate births have fallen from 290 to 145 per 1000 married women of child-bearing age.

A surprising thing to Americans who have been brought up to believe that the English are not given to crime and that when they do yield to temptation they are promptly caught and punished is the revelation that three London crimes out of four are never cleared up, that four-fifths of the property stolen is never recovered and that there are 65,000 ex-jailbirds in London alone.

Says one ex-police commissioner: "It is not unknown for a skilled housebreaker to commit as many as 100 crimes before he falls into the hands of the police." A criminal called "Flannel Foot" has been leading the police a chase for 17 years and has never been caught. He twits them with letters every now and then.

Another idea which has grown in the American mind is that government is better in England than elsewhere. It is an astounding fact that less than half of London is ruled by the London County Council, but that the remainder is governed by 355 bodies comprising 6390 members. Confusion and dispute are continually arising among them as to their powers and prerogatives. There are even 50 Mayors to add to the confusion and jealousies.

In the scholastic sphere it is notable that the "ladder" of free education is available to only one London boy in 100 at the age of 18, and it carries only one elementary schoolchild out of every 400 free into the University of London.

REBUILT STEAMER 99 PCT. FIREPROOF

The Catherine, in West Indian Service Has Virtually No Wood in It.

(Copyright, 1937.)

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 27.—A passenger ship which is said to be 99 per cent fireproof, and the first to be rebuilt in compliance with the new regulations of the United States Department of Commerce to eliminate fires at sea, has been completed at Baltimore by the Maryland Drydock Co., subsidiary of Koppers Co., Pittsburgh.

The vessel is the Catherine owned by the A. H. Bull Steamship Co. It will resume service in the West Indies inter-island trade between Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. It will carry 64 passengers and a crew of 47.

Less than 1 per cent of the materials in the Catherine are of wood, although present Government regulations permit 10 per cent. The remainder is steel, fire-proof composition material and compressed asbestos.

Fire Detectors.

Fire detectors are a few feet apart in the ceiling of the Catherine's passenger decks and are connected to the pilot house by a system which would automatically signal the exact location of fire if the temperature in their vicinity should go above normal. Smoke detectors in all cargo spaces and store rooms are also connected with the pilot house. Manually operated fire alarms and fire warning bells are scattered throughout the boat. Engine and boiler rooms, lamp rooms and paint lockers are equipped so they can be flooded with fire-smothering gas.

Staterooms walls and doors are of compressed asbestos supported by steel. Floors are laid on sheet steel and are covered with a thick layer of insulating material and a top covering of sheet rubber. Berths are metal and cabinets and dressing tables are covered with panels of asbestos with a highly polished bakelite surface. Porthole draperies and bed spreads are impregnated to resist fire.

Stairways are all steel and are open beneath so that combustible material will not be stored there.

Insulated Against Tropical Heat.

Decks are supported by solid sheet steel backed by four inches of fireproof insulation. Sides of the boat are insulated against tropical heat.

Watertight bulkheads, extending to the top deck of the vessel, provide sufficient buoyance to keep the Catherine afloat should an accident occur to the hull. Fire-screen bulkheads are equipped with steel, insulated doors which are kept closed by automatic devices.

Four inches of fireproof insulation has been placed over the cargo spaces and the engine room and working spaces. All doors in bulkheads, deck houses and main passageways are made of steel.

A garage space to accommodate 30 cars has been built in the hold of the Catherine with watertight side ports in the shell of the ship which permits driving cars directly from loading docks.

VIEW OF DYNAMITERS ON ASTURIAN FRONT

Eye-Witness Tells of Loyalist Raid on Cottage in Spanish War.

From the Manchester Guardian.

IN THE SAN ESTEBAN LINES, ASTURIAS.—The famous Asturian dynamiters were to act today, over ground already contested in 1934. Capt. Canga, a husky young Socialist miner, commanding the battalion, explained that it would not be so exciting as the much-photographed action at Toledo, but it would be more typical, for the miners on this front are conservative and do not use the sling. "Yes," struck in a veteran of the '34 beside him, "you must watch closely. It is something esthetic!"

The objective was a small cottage which was supposed to house a machine-gun nest some 300 yards away across a field. Its flanks were covered by two ruined barns. In the ditch which served as observation post Canga gathered his men. They were an odd-looking lot, for the regulation militia uniform has not yet reached this front. Some wore the workman's blue jeans, but with old black felt hats; others wore ordinary cheap suits with red scarves and leather crash helmets; a couple were in khaki. There was even one in the full spick-and-span field-gray of a Lieutenant of Carabineros. They carried packets of dynamite, from three to seven sticks about six inches long wrapped together in greaseproof paper and provided with long cord fuses. These they cut short, then lighted their cigars, and went, in two detachments, advancing on the cottage from either side, while Canga's men kept up covering fire.

The dynamiters, cigars glowing, edged round the barns. Canga whistled. In groups of three, one after the other, the dynamiters ran out, paused to touch the glowing cigars to the fuses, and swung their bundles up on to the roof. The last to go, as they ran back to the trench, turned, flung a last bundle outside the door to cover the retreat.

There was an awful pause. From the trench one could clearly see three bundles lying on the roof, the fuses spitting. One could not help wondering if those inside had heard the thuds above them—and were waiting. The fuses appeared to die down. The seconds lengthened, although it could not have been a quarter of a minute since the first bundle fell on the roof. There was an explosion behind the house, where a charge had fallen too far. Another. Then the thing on the roof suddenly fizzed, and a cloud of smoke, tiles, bricks and timber shot into the air and slowly dissolved.

The action had been successful. The rest was simply rifle work, and not much of it. The veteran smiled grimly. "I told you it would be something serious, something esthetic!"

PAUL V. M'NUTT TAKES OATH AS PHILIPPINES COMMISSIONER

American and Filipino Officials at Ceremony in Washington.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—American and Filipino officials were present today while Paul V. McNutt, Indiana's recent Governor, took the oath as high commissioner for the Philippines.

Secretary of War Woodring presented McNutt with his commission a few minutes after he introduced McNutt to President Manuel L. Quezon of the Philippine Commonwealth Government, here to seek future trade concessions for the islands' products.

The new high commissioner succeeds Frank Murphy, now Michigan's Governor, in the $18,000 a year post. His nomination was confirmed this week by the Senate.

FOUR ROBBERS GET $20,000 AT CLEVELAND BRANCH BANK

Commandeer Auto and Force Owner to Accompany Them to Scene of Holdup.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 27.—Four men held up a branch of the Lorain Street National Bank today and fled with $20,000.

Joseph Varga told police two of the robbers commandeered his automobile a few minutes before the robbery, forced him to pick up two companions and then made him drive to the bank.

Three of the men, carrying revolvers, entered the bank during the noon-day rush, the fourth remaining outside with Varga. One walked quickly to the rear of the lobby, another stood at the entrance and the third leaped over a counter.

"Get back against the wall, all of you," shouted the leader to the 50 customers and employes.

The robber who jumped over the counter ran through the tellers' cages and ordered Manager R. W. Reitsman and Tellers E. C. Ritenour and J. A. Baracksky against the wall.

One of the robbers cleaned out the cash drawers and scooped up money in the vault, then the three fled to Varga's car, forced him to resume driving and finally threw him out two blocks away.

Police arrived a few minutes after the robbers fled. Later they found Varga's automobile abandoned several miles from the bank.

POSTOFFICE STARTS 4-BLOCK TRIP TO BECOME CITY HALL

St. Cloud, Minn., Moving 2500-Ton Granite Building in Streets It Fills Completely.

By the Associated Press.

ST. CLOUD, Minn., Feb. 27.—St. Cloud's 2500-ton granite postoffice today started a four and one-half block ride down the city's main business street to become, at the end of its journey, the new St. Cloud City Hall.

The site vacated by the structure is to be occupied by a new $275,000 postoffice.

The structure was pulled from the old foundation into the center of the street. It was estimated eight days would be required to turn moving rollers at right angles before the four block journey could be started.

The building will fill the street, coming within six inches of each curb. Movers estimated it would take three weeks to reach its destination. The old postoffice is 72 feet long, 40 feet wide and of two-story height.

PLAN TO SHORTEN NEW YORK AND MONTREAL WATER ROUTE

U. S.-Canadian Commission Considers Cutting Way by Thousand Miles.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Chairman A. O. Stanley said tonight the U. S.-Canadian International Joint Commission was considering a new plan to shorten the water route from New York to Montreal by 1000 miles.

After mentioning the proposed St. Lawrence Seaway in a radio address, he said: "The commission is now considering the further extension of the proposed seaway by the deepening of the Richelieu River, the utilization of the waters of Lake Champlain and the deepening of the existing canal connecting the headwaters of Lake Champlain and the Hudson River near Albany, thus shortening the water route from Montreal to New York Harbor by approximately one thousand miles."

TWO ARMY RESERVE FLYERS KILLED ON BLIND FLIGHT

Plane Crashes in Field Near Chicago; Victims Were Airline Co-pilots.

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—Two flyers, members of the Air Corps Reserve, were killed today when their plane crashed while on a blind-flying practice flight.

The training ship carrying second Lieutenants John Spake, 30 years old, and Clyde H. Wood, 26, both of Chicago, dropped from an altitude of 600 feet into a South Side field. They crashed 40 minutes after they took off from Municipal Airport.

Col. E. W. Hill of the Sixth Corps Area Air Force said the plane was so badly damaged he could not determine immediately which of the men was at the controls. Both were commercial airline co-pilots on a two-week leave from their regular jobs.

GERMAN JEWS AGAIN FLOCKING TO PARIS

25,000 Estimated to Be Seeking Asylum Under Blum's Administration.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Feb. 27. — In recent months—since the semi-Socialist Government has come into power in France—a new wave of German refugees has been streaming into Paris. After a lapse of about two years, during which the situation of German Jews in France had become so bad that others preferred to stay at home, the fresh influx has almost reached the level of 1933 and 1934.

There are two reasons. One lies in France and the other in Germany. Leon Blum's Government has decreed that all German refugees who left Germany between February, 1933—the beginning of Jewish persecution — and Aug. 5, 1936, receive permits of sojourn from French police authorities. This does not mean that they may work in France, but at least they can live in France and not be thrown out by the police, as happened in many cases under previous ministries.

Having heard about this decree, German Jews visioned once more a quiet haven in Paris, forgetful of the fact that only old refugees were permitted to live here. The same right was not extended to those newly arrived. But they thought that a Socialist government headed by a Jew could not be too severe with them.

The other reason was Hitler's Nuremberg laws, directed against Germans married to Jews or against children of mixed marriages. The situation has become unbearable for a much greater percentage of the German population since these decrees went into effect than before. Besides, many Jews or radical Germans who had been confined to concentration camps at the beginning of the Nazi rule, in 1933 and 1934, have been freed in the last year. They returned home, where they were ostracized and guarded by Nazis.

Many of these Jews naturally looked toward exile as salvation from humiliation, hatred and starvation. Some obtained permits to go abroad, others fled. And many came to Paris.

A great number of German Jews who had settled in Spain have left that country and come here. Others have filtered in through the Swiss frontier, as rules against German emigrants have become severe in Switzerland. And an exodus is beginning from Czechoslovakia and Austria, where there is thought to be some danger of Nazi invasion.

At present, German refugees' committees estimate that 25,000 German emigrants are seeking asylum in France, the great majority destitute. Nearly all are in Paris. A French law prohibits German citizens from living in a zone along the French frontiers. So German Jews may not live in Alsace, nor on the Riviera, nor near the Spanish frontier. They all flock to Paris.

A great deal has been done in the last few years to resettle elsewhere the Jews who came to Paris. As Palestine took only those who had funds—and these were a minority—measures were taken to direct them to South America. The South American republics — Paraguay, Uruguay, Argentina, Brazil — were about the only countries in the world that allowed immigrants, and several thousand German Jews went there.

REDWOOD'S LOYALTY TO UNION COST LIFE, PROSECUTOR SAYS

Official Asserts He Knows Two Men Who Were Involved in Plotting Murder.

By the Associated Press.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Feb. 27.—Prosecutor Breslin named tonight two men he said he thought "were involved in the plotting and appeared to be directly responsible for the death of Norman Redwood," sandhog union leader. The Bergen County grand jury will meet Tuesday.

The prosecutor gave out a 20-page statement, detailing union and labor disputes which he contends culminated in the murder of Redwood who was shot by men in an auto eight days ago in the driveway of his Teaneck home.

Breslin said the murder was decided on 24 hours before it occurred.

"There is no doubt in my mind about what caused Redwood's murder," Breslin said. "It was his absolute loyalty to members of his union."

TAKE IT FROM CHRYSLER OWNERS!

"DELIGHTFULLY EFFORTLESS TO DRIVE," says Mrs. Helen R. Hobson of Lakewood, Ohio. "As president of the Ohio Home Economics Association, I drive my Chrysler Royal a great deal. On my trips I find that the overdrive not only saves on gasoline, but gives an effortless ease of motion that makes driving much less tiring."

"21 MILES PER GALLON ON LAST TRIP," says W. G. Magnuson of Chicago. "I drive 30,000 miles a year in my business . . . and Chrysler's economy means a lot to me. I drove my last Chrysler 48,000 miles without spending one cent on motor repairs."

"THE SAFETY FEATURES SOLD ME," says Dr. Nicola Gigante of Detroit. "I've owned nine Chryslers and I know there is nothing to compare with the safety of Chrysler's hydraulic brakes and all-steel body construction. My new Royal coupe is a wonderful performer . . . and it's very economical."

"FIRST CAR I'VE SEEN WITH ROOM ENOUGH," says J. A. Want of Mountain Lakes, N. J. "I use my car for commuting to the city . . . about 100 miles a day . . . and I especially appreciate its roomy comfort and easy riding. It's great to find a really roomy car that is also outstanding in economy."

"HANDSOMEST CAR OF THE YEAR," says Mrs. Marjorie B. Hebert of Scarsdale, N. Y. "I like the smart, forward reaching lines, and the gloriously roomy and comfortable interiors. The car rides beautifully, and is delightfully easy to handle on any kind of roads."

CHRYSLER TOPS 'EM ALL!

Owners' statements exceed every promise we ever made about the new Chrysler Royal! It's perfectly apparent that Chrysler has invaded the low-priced field with an entirely new kind of low-priced car . . . that combines quality with low price . . . roomy comfort with economy . . . brilliant performance with low-operating costs.

See the new Chrysler Royal today . . . and its luxurious companion cars, the Imperial and Airflow.

MORE GEISHA STRIKE, 300 NOW IN TEMPLE

Sympathizers Helping Finance Strike of Dancing Girls in Osaka.

By the Associated Press.

OSAKA, Japan, Feb. 27.—Striking Geisha girls, their number increased from 80 to 300 since this morning, settled down tonight for a prolonged stay in a Buddhist temple on top of a mountain near this city. Many of the 2000 other geisha employed in the industrial city of Osaka were expected to join the strike, called because employers refused to permit the girls to organize for collective bargaining. The girls charge their managers with exploiting them, and demand the right to join the Geisha Guild, labor organization of the entertaining girls.

Crowds of sympathizers gathered outside the temple tonight to hear the young women sing some of the same songs and shout some of the same slogans that striking geisha used back in the 1860's.

Newspapers estimated the strikers were receiving at least 1000 yen ($285) from sympathizers helping them finance their strike.

"Fight to the Death."

After marching to the temple the geisha declared they would wage "a fight to the death" if their demands were not met. Their first pleasure was to have the bonzes of the temple offer prayers on their behalf.

Previously these geisha had trouble with their managers when they refused to rehearse for the annual presentation of the Ashibe dance, which belongs to the quarters of licensed vice rather than the geisha resorts.

The geisha of Japan are primarily singers, dancers, artists of the samisen, or three-stringed guitar. They hold themselves aloof from the women of the licensed vice quarters.

The employing group is well-organized in Tokio and Osaka.

Strikers' Rigid Routine.

The strikers decided on a rigid routine despite the gifts of food, rice wine, bedding and other comforts which sympathetic business men sent them. Determined to stay in their sanctuary until the issue is settled, they elected a treasurer, a public relations bureau and a bargaining committee to deal with their employers.

They have adopted this daily routine:

10 a. m.—Deadline for rising, dressing and eating breakfast.

11 a. m.—Worship for all, including prayers to Buddha for victory.

Noon—Luncheon.

1 p. m.—Reply to letters and acknowledge gifts from patrons; write love letters and postal cards soliciting support for the strike.

3 p. m.—Compulsory long walk for exercise.

8 p. m.—Dinner and bed.

RADIO BEAM CURVED TO HELP PLANES LAND

Inventors Think New Device Will Reduce Accidents Near Airports.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—What many radio engineers hold is the answer to the problem of safe blind landings for aircraft has been developed by two young scientists, who turned down an offer from a foreign Government after the United States dismissed them.

The instrument, perfected by Dr. Frank G. Kear and Gomer L. Davies, enables a pilot to take his plane down a curved glide path from a height of 3000 feet to a smooth contact with the ground. It may go far, the inventors believe, toward avoiding accidents near airports such as those which have occurred recently.

Following it in fair weather or foul is a comparatively simple job of maneuvering the craft until two instrument needles are squarely crossed, then holding them in that position.

Development of the device became possible when the two men discovered how to project radio waves in a pencil-like beam curving upward from a point on the airport runway.

Two Hit by Economy Act.

When the economy act of 1933 came, Kear and Davies were hard at work in the radio laboratories of the National Bureau of Standards and had developed the instrument to the point of testing it in flight. A few days later they found themselves out of a job.

Several foreign scientists had become familiar with their work, but they refused an offer from one foreign Government—which they will not name—and took less lucrative jobs with a new organization, the Washington Institute of Technology.

The institute projected a new idea in the relation between science and its application for human betterment—it employed men to work in pure science, leaving the mass production of instruments and devices they perfected to manufacturing organizations.

One of the first of these is the blind landing device.

Active in Aviation Research.

Both men have been active in the movement to improve air navigation. While in Government service Davies discovered the "multiple-beam" effect in the radio range beacons, a phenomenon which in mountainous country resulted in the projection of several false beams in addition to the true one and which is believed to have been the cause of several fatal accidents.

Dr. Kear is credited with perfecting an antenna system for the radio range beacons which made them useful for the first time at night. Previous to his work they were useless after dark because of "night effect," a fading due to changes in the layers of air high above the earth which reflect radio waves back to the ground.

In addition Dr. Kear was one of the group of scientists at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology which developed about 10 years ago a "mechanical brain" capable of solving problems involving six different integrations simultaneously.

GERMANY BARS TRADING IN ALL FOREIGN SECURITIES

Another Move to Keep Investments at Home; Stocks Must Be Sold to Government Banks.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 27.—The Government barred trading in foreign securities today, adding to restrictions initiated last October governing all German-owned foreign securities. Such securities must be sold to the Reichsbank or to Devisen banks in the future, at a "fair price" to be fixed by the Reichsbank, the Government announced.

Any other trading may be carried on only with special Government permission. Quotations on foreign securities were immediately discontinued on German bourses. The order will affect more than 200 foreign issues.

Bankers estimated tonight that Germans hold foreign securities worth more than 2,000,000,000 marks (about $804,000,000), including bonds and shares on deposit abroad as well as in Germany. Probably 25 per cent of these are American issues, it was estimated. The Government's move serves the double purpose of keeping future German investments at home as well as mobilizing existing foreign holdings for an emergency.

SEINE, SWOLLEN BY RAIN, ROUTS RIVERSIDE DWELLERS

Suspension of Navigation Between Paris and Rouen Threatened; Marne Rising.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—(Sunday)—Suspension of navigation between Paris and Rouen seemed likely early today as the River Seine, swollen by a torrential rain and hailstorm during the night, continued to rise.

Persons dwelling in the riverside districts of Ivry and Choisy-le-Roi, southeastern suburbs of Paris, left their homes for higher ground when a rise of the Seine of four and a half inches in the last 24 hours brought the water over the quais at some points.

The River Marne also was still rising. The waters of the upper Seine and tributaries of the river showed signs of falling, leading to hopes that Paris would be no worse flooded than at present. The peak of the flood was predicted for today or tomorrow.

Yesterday workers on Paris' 1937 International Exposition, scheduled to open in May, were summoned to move building materials to higher ground.

NEW ENGLAND SHOE STRIKE OVER, SAYS UNION LEADER

Last Company at Lynn, Mass., Agrees to Increase of 15 Per Cent in Wages.

By the Associated Press.

LYNN, Mass., Feb. 27.—William H. Mahan, leader of a C. I. O. strike which resulted in a 15 per cent wage increase to many New England shoe workers, said today the strike here was virtually over.

The Maxwell Shoe Co., only affiliated concern unsigned, agreed to the pay increase today. The firm employes between 150 and 200.

Mahan said several small open shops would confer with union representatives Monday regarding the pay increase problem.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 27.—The crest of the Mississippi River flood was passing Angola, La., above Baton Rouge today. Above Angola the river was falling steadily.

The Weather Bureau here ordered small craft warnings at 8:30 a. m. west of the mouth of the Mississippi River to Brownsville, Tex., and northeast storm warnings at 9 a. m. from Port Eads, La., at the mouth of the river, eastward to Carrabelle, Fla.

END OF MINNEAPOLIS STRIKE REPORTED NEAR

Legal Opinion Sought on Whether Governor Can Take Over Plants.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 27.—Settlement of the strike of electrical workers at the Northern States Power Co. within a few hours was predicted by persons close to both sides, while conferences between rpresentatives of the company and of Local No. 292 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers continued.

State Attorney-General William S. Irvin undertook today to determine whether Gov. Benson could legally take over plants of the Northern States Power Co., pending settlement of the strike. Power service in the city has been interrupted.

The Rev. Francis J. Haas, Federal conciliator appointed at the request of Gov. Benson, conferred today with labor officials in Washington, and is expected here tomorrow.

After a conference in the Governor's office today, George W. Lawson, secretary of the State Federation of Labor, asserted union leaders felt the power company's failure to negotiate in the absence of its president, Robert F. Pack, was a subterfuge to delay or avoid negotiations.

Roger Ruthchick, the Governor's secretary, said the company had not responded to invitations to the conference.

At the conference union officials repeated promises to keep lines open to hospitals and the city water department pumping plant.

Picketing at main company plants continued today, with police and deputy sheriffs on guard at substations.

NEW COMET POLISH OBSERVER FOUND PHOTOGRAPHED IN U. S.

Harvard Observatory Locates It Soon After Learning of Discovery Abroad.

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 27. — Harvard Observatory tonight reported it had photographed a new comet discovered earlier today by a man named Wilks at Cracow, Poland. Observatory experts here found the comet a few hours after receiving a radiogram announcing Wilks' discovery. The observatory said the comet was in the western sky and could be seen only shortly after sunset.

A radiogram, sent by a Prof. Banachiewicz, described the comet as one of the seventh magnitude, its position in right ascension zero hours, 35 minutes, 17 seconds, north 19 degrees 22 minutes, which would place it in the western sky in the evening, near a star labeled "55 piscium."

HELD AS ROBBERY SUSPECT

Denver Prisoner Says He Is Ray Metzgar of East St. Louis.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Feb. 27.—A man giving the name of Ray Metzgar, 38 years old, of East St. Louis, Ill., was held in jail today as a robbery suspect.

Detectives said Metzgar had been beaten by Adolph Ryzman, proprietor of a restaurant, and Ben Milvirick, after he forced Ryzman to give him $13. The prisoner's face was bruised. Several papers bearing the name, "Roy Nessler," were found in his pocket, but he insisted his name is Metzgar.

3 STATES SEEKING TO TRY ALLEGED ROBBER AND KIDNAPER

New Jersey Gets Federal Order for Removal of Merle Vandenbush from New York.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—A warrant for the removal of Merle Vandenbush from Westchester to New Jersey to face trial for the kidnaping of a New Jersey State trooper was signed today by United States Commissioner Isaac Platt in Federal court. The removal complaint charges that Vandenbush kidnaped and transported State Trooper William C. Turnbull in an automobile from Bridgewater, N. J., to Freemansburg, Pa. Trumbull was trying to arrest Vandenbush on a charge of speeding. With Vandenbush at the time were Harry and Arlene Brunette, who were captured in New York last December after a pistol fight with Federal agents.

Vandenbush was captured Thursday when fleeing with two confederates following the holdup of the North Westchester Bank at Katonah, N. Y., when $17,600 was stolen but was recovered.

Three states are contesting for the right to try Vandenbush, New York, New Jersey and Wisconsin, his home state, where he is accused of bank robberies.

IMPOSSIBLE TO REGULATE UTILITIES, SAYS CONGRESSMAN

Pierce of Oregon Tells Power Conference Public Ownership Is Only Solution.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27. — Representative Walter M. Pierce of Lagrande, Ore., told members of the League of Industrial Democracy tonight "the only solution to the problem of utilities and great natural monopolies lies in public ownership."

"We must demand public ownership because of the necessity for removing the influence which monopolies and great aggregations of capital exert on public life," Pierce, former Oregon Governor, declared in an address at the league's power conference. He said he thought regulation of private utilities "is utterly impossible."

"Private monopoly controls not only legislators and sometimes governors and public service commissions, but often party organizations," he said. "Great natural resources of our country have been wasted and exploited because we had not the vision, wisdom and courage to assert ownership." He added, however, he did not think public ownership "is a panacea for all our Governmental ills."

EX-BRAINTRUSTER SAYS U. S. IS CLOSE TO STATE SOCIALISM

A. S. Berle Jr., Tells Harvard Group Government Is No Longer Referee.

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 27.—Adolph S. Berle Jr. told a student-businessmen's conference at Harvard University tonight that he believes America is nearer to state Socialism than it is to the old concept of Government as a referee in citizens' affairs. Berle is New York City's Chamberlain and a former New Deal "brain truster."

"It would be less of a jump now to State Socialism in America than it would be back to the old idea of Government as an agent to keep the peace and see that the ground rules are obeyed," he said. "Two years ago it would have been said that to maintain work for men without work would be too costly; or that minimum wages would tend to become maximums and dislocate labor conditions, but there are going to be some such solutions of our problems by almost universal demand."

His statement: "I often think that what I want is not a new Constitution but the return of the Constitution I thought I had," was vigorously applauded.

QUITS OFFICE AFTER 29 YEARS

Pearl Smith Retires From Venice Board of Supervisors.

Pearl Smith of Madison, Ill., member of the Venice Township Board of Supervisorsfor 29 years, announced his retirement yesterday because of ill health. He is 60 years old.

He first held public office as town clerk at Madison in 1906, served a two-year term and was elected to the Board of Supervisors, serving continuously thereafter, for 11 years as chairman. Formerly he was chief of the Madison Fire Department, a volunteer organization, and is past president of the Illinois Firemen's Association. He has been street commissioner of Madison for 25 years.

College Dormitory Fire.

ALBION, Mich., Feb. 27.—Fire today destroyed Dean Hall, an Albion College dormitory, while firemen pumped water frantically from a mill race after finding two fire hydrants out of order, apparently frozen. None of the 26 young women residing in the dormitory was injured and most of them saved their clothes and other belongings.

PALESTINE ORDINANCES CODIFIED TO 1934

Mandate Government Has Replaced Turkish Decrees—New Criminal Statutes.

From the Manchester Guardian.

The legislation of Palestine since the beginning of the British Administration in 1918 is extraordinarily voluminous and varied.

The mandatory Government has been called upon to replace the haphazard Turkish decrees and orders with an equipment of modern law which should at once satisfy the needs of the progressive population and be in accord with the needs of the simple peasants. It has been noted that the output of Ordinances of the Government of Palestine each year is about equal to that of statutes of the British Parliament. Legislation is easy in that there is no legislative assembly to discuss proposals. But one of the consequences of easiness of legislation is the habit of constant amendment. A large part, therefore, of the annual ordinance-book consists of modefications of older ordinances.

Mass of Ordinances.

The attempt was made at the end of 1925 to consolidate the large mass of ordinances, decrees, regulations and proclamations, but the compilation appeeared only in English and had no statutory authority. A more thorough consolidation was undertaken some years ago, and has been brought into force under an ordinance as from the end of last month.

It is a collection of the revised laws of Palestine as at the beginning of 1934, which will replace as the authority for the courts all previous piecemeal legislation.

There are several important acts passed since 1933 about matters which were not included at all in the revised laws, and these will not be consolidated. Among them is the new Criminal Code, based on the principles of English law, which came into force at the beginning of this year. There is also a new bankruptcy law, based on the English acts, which replace the provisions of the Otterman Commercial Code, that has now been completely superseded.

Change in Personal.

The personnel of the Government of Palestine will be considerably modified in the immediate future. Just when the Royal Commission has been conducting its examination into the Mandatory Administration it has occurred that the term of a considerable number of the senior officers has come to an end or that promotion has been offered to them. The Chief Secretary, Hathorn Hall, has been appointed Resident of Zanzibar; one of his principal assistants, a Jewish official, has been appointed to Uganda; the District Commissioner of Jerusalem, Maj. Campbell, who has held office since the early days of the military occupation, is retiring on pension; Col. Hudson, who has been Postmaster-General since those first days, is retiring; while the Director of Education, Humphrey Bowman, who had held that office since 1930, left it in 1936; and the Director of Customs and Industry, will finish soon a long career in the Colonial Service.

BETHLEHEM STEEL LIKELY TO RAISE WAGES 10 PER CENT

Announces It Expects to Conclude Negotiations With Employe Representatives Soon.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Bethlehem Steel Corporation, second largest in the industry, announced today it expected a "satisfactory conclusion" to negotiations with employe representatives for a wage increase within the next few days."

It was said in steel circles the rise would probably be about 10 per cent, similar to that of last November. Approximately 65,000 workers are understood to be involved. The company expressed the hope that a solution would be reached for the Walsh-Healy act requirement of a 40-hour week, which big steel companies with their 44-hour week, gave as a reason for not bidding on Navy steel contracts.

EAST SIDE DEMOCRATS PICK 18 CANDIDATES IN 20 MINUTES

Machine's Township Slate Unanimously Chosen; G. O. P. Has Trouble; Too Many on Relief.

The East St. Louis Township Democratic convention nominated candidates for 18 township offices at the election April 6 in 20 minutes in a smoothly organized meeting at City Hall yesterday in which the machine slate was put over unanimously. But the Republicans, in their convention last night, had trouble getting candidates to run, partly because they had little hope of being elected and partly because many prospects were WPA employes and ineligible.

The Democratic nominees and the offices for which they were picked, were: Chief supervisor, John J. Rogers, incumbent; assistant supervisors, Leo W. Quick, Wendell Gray and Frank Holten Jr., incumbents; Ester Saverson, Negro; Edward J. Majka, Thomas J. Corrigan, Ollie Roberts, justices of the peace; James M. Kelley, J. C. Brady, Walter W. Hinderberger and Chris G. Young, incumbents, and William Kane; constables, Barney Johnson, Tom McDermott and William Hockaday, incumbents, and Leo Bazza and Dan O'Brien.

Republican nominees were: Chief supervisor, Fred Roak; assistant supervisors, Clyde L. Young, J. C. Mosley, Negro; Emmett Simpson, Oscar Mease, John Gerhardt Jr., Cecil B. Nutter and Tom Huber; justices of the peace, Tony Stocker, William Lynn, Belus Woods, Negro, and Bart Schmidt; constables, Irwin Talbert, William Lee, Clifford Rohm, Frank Crowell and Fred Midgett.

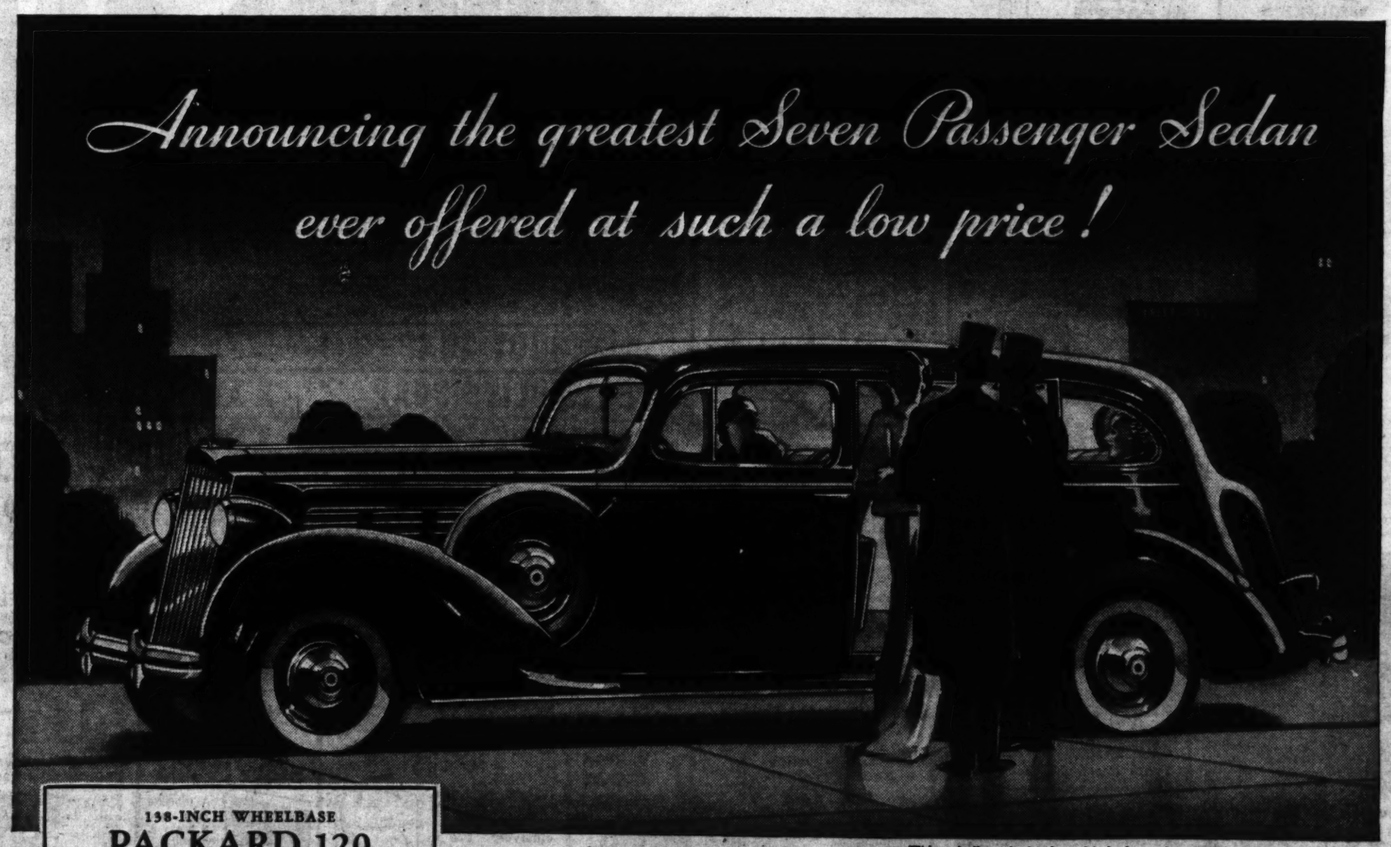
STIX, BAER & FULLER (GRAND-LEADER)

Many of the most desirable rental properties now available are advertised extensively in the Post-Dispatch want pages.

Announcing the greatest Seven Passenger Sedan ever offered at such a low price!



138-INCH WHEELBASE

PACKARD 120

THE TOURING SEDAN, $1900

The desirable comfort of this seven-passenger car is also available in a limousine model, the division glass dropping flush with the seat back for informal or formal use as wanted.

THE LIMOUSINE, $2053

*Delivered complete at St. Louis, including tax. Car shown above with side-mounted spare wheel equipment, $2116 delivered.

With a wheelbase of 138 inches—28 inches longer than that of regular Packard 120 models—this new Seven-Passenger sedan provides ample leg and knee room for all passengers.

FROM coast to coast, a record-breaking welcome for the new Packard 120 has rolled in. But . . . many have told us, too, that they'd gladly pay a bit more for this magnificent car in a model which offered big-car roominess, luxuriousness, bigness.

This public demand has been answered! Packard now announces the addition of a 138-inch wheelbase seven-passenger Sedan to its line of Packard 120 models.

Upholstery and fittings express the quiet good taste that is characteristic of all Packards. The auxiliary seats are, we believe, the most comfortable ever built into a seven-passenger automobile. They give even very tall passengers ample leg and knee room.

This car is available in many smart colors and color combinations. To make sure of prompt delivery, it is suggested that you place your order as soon as possible.

COMMERCE CHAMBER'S STAND ON 69 BILLS

Approves Permanent Registration and Pension Law Change.

The Board of Directors of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, acting on recommendations of the Chamber's Tax and Legislative Committee, has approved 30 and disapproved 39 bills pending in the Legislature.

Among those approved were Mayor Dickmann's permanent registration bill, measures which provide for submission to voters a proposed amendment to the State Constitution reducing the age limit of persons eligible for old age assistance from 70 to 65, and bills for licensing of motorists and for promotion of safety on highways.

Disapproved were bills which would fix amounts of old age pensions at not less than $20 nor more than $30 a month for an unmarried person and not less than $30 nor more than $45 for husband and wife, a bill fixing maximum speed of automobiles on highways at 60 miles per hour during the day and 45 miles per hour at night and a bill which would remit interest on overdue taxes. In opposing a measure designed to strengthen the Jones-Munger delinquent tax law, the board said the law had failed and should be repealed.

Other Bills Approved.

Other bills approved were for an increase in higher brackets of the State income tax law, for abolishment of the fee system in St. Louis County, to prevent erection of advertising signs within 100 feet of any State highway, to enlarge the rights of insurance companies relative to flood coverage, to place members of the Legislature on a flat salary of $125 a month, to change the date of the primary from the first Tuesday in August to the first Tuesday in June, for creation of an advisory legislative council.

Approval was given to four other bills relating to St. Louis County. These measures would create a County Plan Commission, enable municipalities to vote on civil service for police officers, establish a method for issuance of additional bonds for extension of sewer systems and designate the county as a registration district.

Measures Disapproved.

Disapproved were bills providing that personal injury damage settlements might be revoked if made within six weeks of the injury, that a claimant must file claim with the Workmen's Compensation Commission within six months after the employer's report of the accident, that eight hours be fixed as the maximum working day for drivers of commercial vehicles, that homesteads not exceeding $1500 be exempted from taxation.

A bill which would repeal the law providing for six commissioners of the State Supreme Court was disapproved as likely to hinder work of the Court and congest its docket.

House Joint and Concurrent Resolution 8, relating to the marking of ballots cast in an election was opposed on the ground it would tend to increase opportunity for fraud.

HIS WIFE NO WIDOW

FREDERICK W. WOITKE, FORMER New York advertising man, who was believed to have committed suicide in 1928, in jail at Miami, Fla, charged with abandonment. Attention was drawn to him when his wife, believing herself to be a widow, sought to collect his soldier's bonus, but discovered that it already had been paid to him. An investigation followed and Woitke was seized as he was working as a clerk in a liquor store.

HABEAS CORPUS HEARING FOR MRS. ZELLMAN CONTINUED

Her Lover Also Seeks Freedom After Being Held in Healer's Murder.

Hearing on the application for a writ of habeas corpus filed in behalf of Mrs. Cecelia Zellman and her lover, Thomas Pierce, indicted for the murder of her husband, George, Rosicrucian healer, was continued to Wednesday morning by City Judge William F. Borders at East St. Louis yesterday.

Assistant State's Attorney R. V. Gustin, who sought the delay, told Judge Borders that police had rearrested two men, previously questioned, and were examining them further. He said that in view of developments he desired more time to talk to the defendants and others.

Mrs. Zellman accused Pierce, WPA worker and ex-convict, of the murder, but later said the statement was false and was forced from her by police. Pierce has denied the accusation. Last Friday, Frank Slezak, unemployed packing house worker now held for observation at County Hospital, Belleville, told a policeman friend that he killed Zellman.

JUDGE PROTESTS OVER TRIP MADE BY LIFE-TERM CONVICT

Michigan Murderer, on Return, Thanks Jurist, Under Impression He Approved Favor.

By the Associated Press.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Feb. 27. — Circuit Judge George W. Sample said today he had protested to the State Parole Commissioner against a visit to Kentucky made recently by Brent Dunn, life-term convict in the State Prison of Southern Michigan.

Dunn was sentenced for killing John Reinhart of Ann Arbor in 1933.

Charles Downey, prison record clerk, said Dunn was permitted to leave Feb. 11 because his father was reported to by dying in Dexter, Ky. Dunn made the trip in custody of his brother, R. W. Dunn, Dexter school superintendent, who was sworn in as a special deputy.

Judge Sample said he learned of the incident when Dunn wrote him a letter of thanks, apparently thinking the Judge approved the visit.

444 WOMAN FLYERS LICENSED IN U. S.

They Range in Age From 17 to 59— 14 Have More Than 1000 Hours in Air.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The United States has 444 licensed woman aviators. Some are just past 16 years old, others are nearing 60, Bureau of Air Commerce records show. They include heiresses, movie stars, mothers and working girls.

Of the total, 295 fly for fun with private licenses. Seventy-one are in the transport class. Fourteen have recorded more than 1000 hours' flying time.

More than one-fourth of the women holding licenses live in California. Edith B. Clark of Santa Monica is the oldest woman pilot. She is 59 and has flown more than 197 hours since she received her private license four years ago. Five other women past 50 hold licenses.

Regulations forbid girls to fly until they are 16, but five 17-year-olds have licenses. They are: Lucy Sagarino of Corpus Christi, Tex.; Nora J. King of Bryn Mawr, Pa., and Evelyn G. Sharp of Ord, Neb., with private licenses requiring at least 50 hours' solo flight, and Barbara Huckins of Dallas, Tex., and Norma Christmas of Allentown, Pa., with 25-hour amateur licenses.

Women, especially in small towns, are showing an awakening interest in aviation, Mrs. Phoebe Omlie says. She possesses the first bureau license authorization issued to a woman—10 years ago last month—and at the last official report had flown 2475 hours. That total is 675 more than that of Laura Ingalls, second in flying time.

Most of the 14 women who have more than 1000 hours in the air are pioneers. Amelia Earhart, who was licensed by the bureau in 1929, now has 1694 hours to her credit. Edith Foltz of Los Angeles, Jean Larene of Dallas and Edna M. Gardner of New Orleans have more than 1300 hours each.

At present, no woman pilot is employed on a regular airline job, officials said.

TEST OF TENNESSEE SCHOOL LAW ON NEGROES AND WHITES

Chancery Court to Hear Arguments on Statute Barring Co-Education of Races.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 27.—Chancery Court officials opened the way today for a test of the validity of a Tennessee constitutional provision prohibiting whites and Negroes from attending school together.

They set March 22 for a hearing before Chancellor Lois Bejach on a Negro's application for a mandamus writ to force his admittance to the University of Tennessee's College of Pharmacy here.

Counsel for the Negro, William Redmond II of Nashville, declared the old law establishing the Tennessee Agricultural College, predecessor of the university, provided that no citizen should be excluded from its privileges by reason of race or color unless provision was made for separate accommodation and instruction.

E. A. Nimnicht Made Regional Manager for Chevrolet in St. Louis

Succeeds T. H. Keating, Who Takes New Used Car Operations Position.

T. H. Keating, for the past three years Chevrolet Midwest regional manager with headquarters here, left the past week for Detroit to fill one of two new assistant sales managerships created by W. E. Holler, vice-president and general sales manager of Chevrolet.

Keating and W. G. Lewellen, formerly director of mass selling in the central office, will have charge of a new national used car operation designed to benefit the public by providing better values in used cars and better service in the used car departments throughout the dealer organization.

Under them—Keating in the eastern half of the United States and Lewellen in the western half—there will be built up a merchandising organization paralleling the closely co-ordinated setup which already exists in the new-car end of the business.

New Used Car Sales Idea.

"For years, dealers and manufacturing companies have been endeavoring to improve used car merchandising," Holler said. "But no company has organized on a national scale to give its dealers and the public an operation backed and clothed with sufficient authority to make it effective. To do this means to promote more confidence in the buying public that the used car offered for sale contains as much value as the price tag is labeled.

"Of course, we realize the manufacturer has a responsibility to its dealers. We also realize that the manufacturer and seller of new cars should work with its dealer organization to build up cordial relations with the buyer of used cars, for he is the one who makes the volume sales of new cars possible.

"It is our intention to concentrate on used cars the same careful planning, direction and supervision that we apply to the sale and service of new cars and trucks.

"In the past, the only organization effort applied by the manufacturer to the used car problem has been confined to the creation of a more or less obscure used car department not in line with executive authority. Chevrolet is changing all of this by the organization of a separate used car selling force directly under the supervision of the general sales manager and comprehending a complete regional and zone organization.

Nimnicht Comes From Detroit.

"It is the opinion of Chevrolet officials that the same management that has consistently been applied to new cars will, when applied to used cars, change the whole status of the present used car situation in the industry."

Keating is a veteran member of the Chevrolet organization, having joined it in 1917. He served in New York, Tarrytown, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Detroit, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, coming to St. Louis as regional manager Nov. 1, 1933.

Keating's post as regional manager will be filled by E. A. Nimnicht, another Chevrolet executive of long experience. Nimnicht comes from the post of national manager of retail selling in the central office. His background includes service at Norwood, O., Tarrytown, Wichita, Kansas City and Baltimore, as well as several months in 1927 as regional sales promotion manager in the St. Louis area.

New Chevrolet Regional Manager

E. A. NIMNICHT

T. H. KEATING

Through a shift of executives by the Chevrolet Motor Co., Detroit, T. H. Keating leaves his post here as regional manager to become an assistant general sales manager at the home office, and E. A. Nimnicht comes from his post as manager of retail selling in the central office to be St. Louis regional manager.

Attendance of 3,428 Businessmen at Truck Body Show Reported

An attendance of 3428 business men, not counting salesmen or women visitors, was registered at the custom truck body show held in the Coliseum Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week.

Joseph A. Schlecht, secretary-manager of the Greater St. Louis Automobile Association, said yesterday that the exhibitors included virtually every truck distributer in the city and virtually all makes of trucks marketed here were on display with special bodies.

One order for 30 bodies was reported during the show.

It is expected that the show will prove a stimulus for displaying trucks at the fall show of the Automotive Association.

The truck show was sponsored by the McCabe-Powers Auto Body Co., and E. J. Powers Sr., president of the concern, acted as show manager.

Goodrich Silvertown Manager Back From Inspection of Factories

Back from a week spent inspecting the plants of the B. F. Goodrich Co. at Akron, O., and attending sales and advertising conference, J. Harry Evans, manager of the Goodrich Silvertown store at 2301 Olive street, says that the Akron officers were optimistic over the outlook. "Great strides have been made in tire and tube manufacture in the last few years," he said.

"Our officials at Akron were especially enthusiastic over the continued prospects for increasing prosperity in the agricultural regions, as well as the cities. It is estimated there are 52,000,000 steel wheels now used on agricultural implements which rubber tires can make more efficient."

Studebaker Introduces Suburban Utility Car

The new utility car known as the suburban car recently introduced by the Studebaker Corporation is built on the same chassis as the Studebaker coupe-express, so affords passenger car comfort while accommodating eight passengers and luggage.

Patterned to serve as an enclosed utility vehicle for large estates, resort owners, farmers, suburban residents and light delivery users, the suburban car has either curtain or glass enclosure.

Like the Studebaker coupe-express, it is a two-purpose vehicle. Removal of the rear seats converts it into a spacious enclosed utility vehicle.

Steiner Automobile Co. Moves to Building On Delmar Boulevard

The Steiner Automobile Co. has moved to 2626 Delmar boulevard, where it has remodeled a building into a sales and service station for Reo trucks, buses and cars.

New equipment has been installed, and Marvin Fisher put in charge of a force of factory-trained service men. Robert Dye is to be the used car and truck manager, and Elmer Distelrath of the parts division and station.

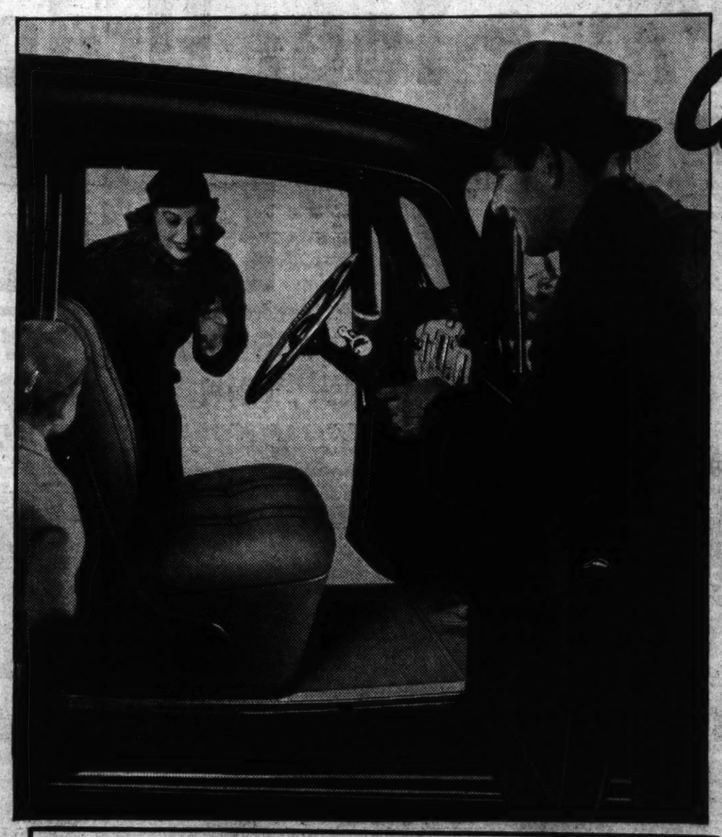
For Easy Entrance

Methods of providing easy entrance into a Hudson or Terraplane brougham. As shown in the diagram, the front seats are pivoted at the left hand side so that the right hand side may be swung forward for access to the rear compartment. In addition, the back of the right front seat is so easily handled that the normal pushing forward on the seat back not only lowers the back of the seat but also swings the cushion around the pivot as indicated. This gets the whole seat out of the way.



A Billion Miles WITHOUT A GEAR LEVER

Good-bye to "Push-and-Pull" driving! Try this NEW and better way...TODAY!

The old-fashioned gear lever is gone. The front floor is clear of all levers. You control gears with a finger flick, up at the wheel. It's magically easier, safer. More than 100,000 owners have driven over a billion miles this way. Ask any of them.

Once more, you will find it fun to drive! Hudson and Terraplane have brought back the pleasure of motoring, with the one entirely new feature of 1937 . . . the Selective Automatic Shift.

Hudson and Terraplane dealers everywhere invite you to try it . . . today. Nothing new to learn. No cost or obligation.

One Finger . . . and One Flick

Of course, the conventional gear lever is available without cost, if you want it. But with Hudson's exclusive Selective Automatic Shift—an optional extra on all 1937 Hudsons and Terraplanes—you select gears with a finger flick, up at the wheel.

And you can forget the clutch pedal. Gears shift themselves when you lift your toe from the accelerator.

Each in its price class, these new Hudsons and Terraplanes are No. 1 in size and roominess . . . with 117-inch wheelbase in Terraplane; 122 and 129-inch in Hudson. And 55 full inches of front seat comfort . . . several inches more than you find in any other popular cars.

Drive the No. 1 Cars

No. 1 in power . . . ranging from 96 and 101 horsepower in Terraplane on up to 122 horsepower in the Hudson Eight. No. 1 in proved economy. No. 1 in safety, too, with bodies all of steel, and exclusive Duo-Automatic Hydraulic Brakes.

You need not take our word. These cars ask only a chance to show you they are No. 1 in these and a long list of other value features. There's a Hudson or Terraplane waiting here for you to prove it.

TRY THIS NEW WAY TO DRIVE! TODAY

REMARKABLE ECONOMY PROVED AGAIN!

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.: Hudson Eight—22.71 miles per gallon! Terraplane—22 miles per gallon! These are the official gasoline mileage figures established by Hudson and Terraplane in the 1937 Los Angeles-Yosemite Economy Run. And they are certified by the American Automobile Association, under whose supervision the test was held. Hudson beat all other Eights by more than 2 miles per gallon. Terraplane had the best gasoline mileage of all leading low priced cars. This annual classic was run over a twisting, mountainous, 352-mile course. Each car carried five passengers and baggage—with no coasting allowed.

KATZ DRUG CO. TO OPEN STORE IN WELLSTON

Acquires 15-Year Lease on First Floor and Basement of Building at Easton and Hodiamont.

By Berry Moore.

The Katz Drug Co., which opened its first store in St. Louis last fall at the southwest corner of Seventh and Locust streets, has closed negotiations for a 15-year lease on the entire first floor and basement of the Loop Building at the northwest corner of Easton and Hodiamont avenues, for a Wellston store.

The building is owned by the Pelligreen Realty Co. of which Lee Pelligreen is president. Otto J. Dickmann, president of the Joseph F. Dickmann Real Estate Co., negotiated the lease.

Annual rentals for the 15-year term of the lease, Dickmann said, will reach a total exceeding $300,000.

Approximately 14,600 square feet of floor space will be occupied by the Katz concern in the Wellston building, with 8100 square feet on the first floor available for drugs and merchandise. The basement, comprising 6500 square feet, will be occupied as a stock room, as a source of supply for the store, which will be on a scale with the downtown store.

A large outlay has been made for remodeling and equipping the new store. It will contain 20 complete departments, including a fountain of modernistic design, and booths for 125 persons. It will employ between 100 and 125 persons, to be recruited in Wellston and in St. Louis.

To Establish Six Stores.

This is the selcond of six stores to be established at strategic points in the St. Louis area, it was stated. Work of remodeling the building is to start immediately. The interior will be of modernistic design, with entrances on both Easton and Hodiamont.

Katz's expansion program includes the establishment of a major warehouse in St. Louis as supply source for both local and outside stores, which is necessary to move Approximately a half block at the southwest corner of McKissock and Withers avenues, in North St. Louis, owned by G. C. Naumann, has been purchased by the M. Holtzman Metal Company. The transaction was handled by the Henry R. Weisels Co. The consideration was not disclosed.

The site has a frontage of 200 feet on McKissock, by a depth of 150 feet on Withers, extending to the north and south alley of the block. The south half of the site is improved with a one and one-half story brick building with 20,000 square feet of floor space, available for manufacturing or warehouse purposes.

SIX APARTMENT BUILDINGS FOR THE MOORLANDS

Ground Broken for Modernistic Structures on Buckingham Drive and in Forest Court.

SEVERAL PROJECTS RECENTLY COMPLETED

Construction Started on Duplex at Southwest Corner of Byron and Glenridge.

Plans have been completed for six apartment buildings, designed for sites in Blue Ridge Terrace, Moorlands, Clayton.

The largest of these is to be erected at the northeast corner of Buckingham and Westwood drives by Edward J. Mutrux, architect and builder, as a speculative investment. The estimated cost of the project, including that of the site, is $125,000.

The structure will be two stories in height, modernistic in design, fireproof in construction and air conditioned. There will be 16 apartments, eight of four rooms with one bath, and eight with six rooms and two baths. There will be circulating hot water for heating and service with thermostatic control. Electric stoves of the newest type are also to be installed. Specifications call for metal partitions, door frames and window sashes. A 26-car garage will be located in the basement. The site has 140 feet on Buckingham and 120 feet on Westwood. The building permit has been issued and excavation has already been started, with construction contracts calling for completion Aug. 1, 1937. A building line of 15 feet is being observed on both streets.

A three-story structure of modernistic design is to be built on the west side of Forest Court, south of Wydown boulevard, in the Moorlands, by Jesse Sprague for undisclosed interests. This project, involving an outlay of $110,000, including the cost of the site, is being financed by the J. R. Van Raalte Mortgage Co.

The Forest Court structure will contain 14 apartments of four and five rooms, including sleeping porches, and will be air-conditioned by refrigeration, with control in each apartment. Marble baths will be attractive features. The basement will include a garage for 26 cars. The building will occupy a lot 130 by 120 feet. Construction is scheduled to start forthwith. H. F. Van Hoefen is the architect.

This is one of a number of apartment projects financed in this section by the J. R. Van Raalte Mortgage Co., including a multi-family structure along modernistic lines, nearing completion on Wellington drive, between Glenrode and Westwood drives, in Blue Ridge Terrace.

Plans have been disclosed for two other apartment projects in Forest Court, but details as yet are not available.

Construction of two three-story apartment buildings has been started by Jacob Rubin & Sons, one at 7545 York drive, the other at 7543 Oxford drive, in Blue Ridge Terrace. Each will contain six apartments and two baths. Both will be air cooled. There will be garages in connection. Each will occupy a lot 65 by 115 feet.

Rubin & Sons recently completed a 12-family apartment building on the south side of Cromwell drive, east of Westwood, financed by the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Realty Co. These apartments contain five rooms and two baths. The structure is unique in that it extends from Cromwell drive on the north to Clayton road on the south, with facades on both thoroughfares. All except two apartments in this building have been leased.

12-Unit Building.

A three-story building of attractive design, with accommodations for 12 families, has just been completed at 7544 York drive, Blue Ridge Terrace. It was erected by a client of the John P. Dolan Real Estate Co. which financed the project. Each apartment has five rooms and bath. The gamut of innovations is run in this building, which is ultra-modernistic. It is exciting general attention. Management is under the John P. Dolan Realty Co.

Lichtenstein Estate, Inc., has just completed the erection of an 18-family building at 7549-53 Parkdale drive, which bristles with new novel features. It recently completed an 18-unit building of similar design on Byron place, 200 feet east of Westwood, in Blue Ridge. Each building has 12 two-bedroom apartments, and six one-bedroom apartments. Both have six maid's rooms. Basements are equipped with laundry facilities, including electric washers and ironers. There is garage space for 20 cars in each building.

The two projects, involving a total of more than $240,000, were financed by the General American Life Insurance Co., represented by M. H. Rodemeyer & Co., realtors.

Other noteworthy apartment projects have recently been completed, or are in process of construction in Blue Ridge terrace, which extends west from Glenridge drive, and from Wydown boulevard to Clayton road, and which virtually include Forest Court, extending south from Wydown boulevard, lying just east of Hanley road.

The Magidson Construction Co. also have under construction several duplex and apartment buildings in Blue Ridge which are exciting more than ordinary attention.

Duplex Construction Active.

Construction of duplex dwellings is running well with that of apartments in the Moorlands, which seems destined to be completely absorbed within a comparatively short time.

Construction has been planned on a duplex (two-family dwelling) at the southwest corner of Bryon place and Glenridge drive in Blue Ridge. Designed on a pretentious scale, this building will vie with the most attractive in Blue Ridge.

Anticipating the demand for sites in this section for apartment projects, Eugene and Harry Freund, real estate operators, recently purchased 19 lots, or a total of 1200 front feet in Blue Ridge terrace. They have no building plans, merely acquiring the lots as a speculative investment.

Several clients of Cornet & Zeibig have purchased lots in Blue Ridge terrace with plans for the erection of apartments or duplex dwellings.

QUESTIONS BEFORE THE HOUSE

Q. Twice now the hinges of our garage doors have been torn loose by the wind. Isn't there some way this can be prevented? J. L. D.

A. An open garage door offers large surface to the wind, and, if strong enough, the wind will rip the screws out of almost any door that stands open. The installation of doors that slide up overhead in the garage would solve your problem. Or, if you do not want to go to this expense, you can sink posts well into the ground so that the doors may be hooked to them when they are opened. This is only a precaution and would not be a positive protection.

Q. I would like to have the kind of faucet on my sink that both the cold and hot water runs through. Do I have to get a whole new sink, or can I just get a new faucet?
MRS. CLARA P.

A. Unless your sink is of a very antiquated type, you can get a mixing faucet that will fit. Most sinks now have the openings for the hot- and cold-water pipes spaced so that a standard mixing faucet can be installed. If you have an old sink that requires a special fitting, possibly your plumber can make the necessary connections.

Q. Is it possible to have a light put in at the back door of a house?
ANNA R.

A. It should be quite a simple operation. Call in an electrical contractor and he can undoubtedly put one in with little trouble. If the fixture is in the open, be sure it is one that will resist the weather.

Q. Can you tell me what makes our windows sweat every night? As soon as the sun goes down and it gets dark the water begins to collect on the windows, and by morning there are regular puddles on the sills. We want to prevent this condition in a new home we are planning.
MR. AND MRS. T. S.

A. Without knowing the conditions, it is hard to say where the moisture comes from, but the sweating is caused by an excess of moisture in the house which condenses when it strikes the cold window panes. If there is a humidifier in the heating system, too much moisture is being released. Cut down the supply until only a little moisture appears on the windows in the coldest weather. It may be necessary to adjust this from time to time to take care of changing conditions. If there is no humidifier, then you must search elsewhere for the source of the moitsure. If you cannot find it, you can counteract the condition to some extent by airing the house well at night. Your architect should be able to help you solve this problem.

Q. We like casement windows and want to build a Colonial house, but people tell us these two do not go together. What do you say?
HOME BUILDERS.

A. Casements were used in the earliest types of so-called Colonial houses, but were discarded early in our history in favor of the double-hung type, which was used during the Georgian period of the Colonial. If you want casements, why not have an early American house designed? It would be advisable, if you want to be sure that the windows are consistent with the design, to employ a competent architect so there will be no mistake.

Q. Is it necessary to bolt the frame of the house to the foundation wall? IGNORANT.

A. It is advisable, although in some parts of the country where heavy wind storms are not encountered, it is not always customary.

Q. Does it keep a cellar dry to put drain tile around the foundation walls? HENRY.

A. If there is any sewer or other place into which the tile line may be drained, it will help a lot; otherwise it is of little use. Of course, the walls and floor must be reasonably tight.

Q. What do you consider the most suitable roofing for an English type house? THOS. H.

A. The English use thatch, slate, and tile mostly, but as it is difficult to get men who know how to lay thatch and as it is not allowed under fire laws in many places, the choice would be between the other two. If slate is used, it should be fairly thick and preferably in graduated sizes. If tile is used, it should be of the flat, shingle type and not the Spanish tile. It comes in various tones of dark red.

Q. Is it a good idea to build a brick enclosure in which to set the kitchen stove? HOUSEWIFE.

A. Yes; such a feature is nice and is a fire protection. If there is a flue available that can be used as a vent for the stove, a sheet of metal can be carried across the face of the top of the enclosure to form a hood, and the kitchen can be ventilated above the range, which will allow cooking odors to be carried off directly. Of course, such a brick enclosure must start on a proper foundation like the rest of the foundation walls.

Q. Our house has casement windows that open out and the screens open in. I should like to take advantage of the slack season to have new screens made if I can get some that will not disarrange the curtains and valances every time we open them. Can you suggest how this can be done? P. T.

A. There are three ways you can overcome this difficulty: You can have screens installed that roll up like window shades, or you can have hinged screens that have a stationary piece at the top so that the opening part of the screen will clear the bottom of the valance, or you may have double hung sliding screens. If the rolling type is used, they may be left up all year round, and the box in which the roller is contained will be hidden behind the valance. If the hinged screens are used, the lower bar of the stationary portion should line up with one of the muntins, or cross bars, of the windows. If you decide upon sliding screens, they had better have metal frames, as wood would take up too much room. Be sure the meeting rail of the screens lines up with one of the muntins in the windows.

A Colonial House Designed for Corner Lot

A Low Rambling Effect Is Achieved by the Addition of a Garage Wing and Unscreened Porch While a Trellised Entrance Gives Interest as Well as Emphasis.

THE house that is planned for a corner lot has many possibilities which the house that is set neatly among its neighbors does not have. Even the small house may look imposing and have an air of dignity with two exposures and low lying wings. Where the lot is deep the architect usually plans a rambling effect, and to avoid monotony he plans a decorative effect for the sides of the house.

The small house shown here, which is an adaptation from the Colonial style which is so popular in the east and middle west, has been planned with a great deal of thought. The entrance is planned for the long side of the lot and the porch with its wrought iron trellises and copper roof add interest as well as emphasis to this facade. For the low, rambling effect a garage wing has been added with entrance at the side, while an unscreened porch strikes a good balance on the other side.

The floor plan follows the Cape Cod type of square house without the dividing hall. A good sized living room faces on two streets, while the dining room, which is at the back, looks out over a garden. The entrance hall is rather spacious and has a winding stairway just opposite the front door. On either side of the door are a lavatory and coat closet with windows.

This hall, which is both service and entrance hall, has a number of interesting features. It connects directly with the garage, the basement and the kitchen. In a maidless household this is an important point since it makes access to the front door for anyone working in the kitchen quite easy.

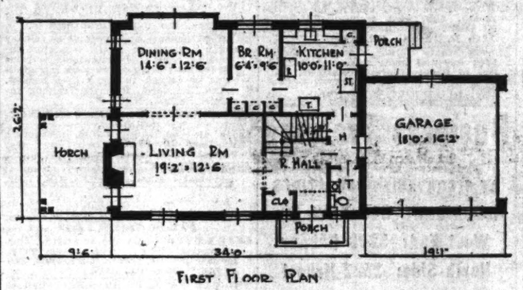
THE kitchen is a fairly large workshop and connects with the dining room and breakfast room. Built-in cabinets in the passageway make a kind of service pantry when the entertainment warrants it.

Three bedrooms and a centrally located bath which is shared make up the second floor. All bedrooms have two exposures and ample closet space. The upper stairhall is lighted by a window.

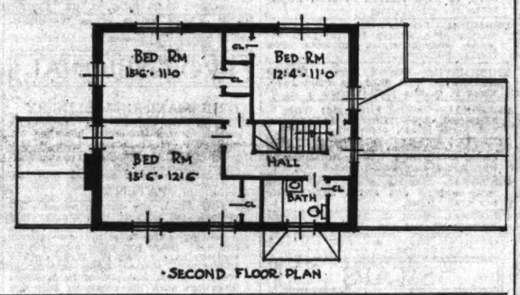
A Colonial type house of this kind has many possibilities in construction. The architect has suggested brick painted white, with contrasting slate roof of grey green and green blinds. This gives the neat, clean effect that is so much sought after in Colonial houses. For the interior, where the Cape Cod effect is desired, knotty pine panelling stained a honey color may be used in the entrance hall and in the living room. It is also possible to combine wall paper and paneling for a very pleasing effect.

Kitchen and bathroom may be tiled, although linoleum for floors and wainscoting is coming into favor. Woodwork in the upstairs bedrooms should be painted white and a figured wall paper is suggested.

The house and garage contain about 28,950 cubic feet and the cost is estimated, with air-conditioned, gas-fired furnace, at 35 cents per cubic foot. The house was planned by Julius E. Tarling, member of the St. Louis Chapter, American Institute of Architects.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN



SECOND FLOOR PLAN

Remodeling Easily Accomplished

Since all kitchens cannot be new, remodeling is being resorted to as never before, and the carpenter, painter, electrician, and other workmen who are well equipped to promote the beauty and convenience of kitchens find their services in great demand.

Careful planning concentrates effort and minimizes necessary labor. Modern equipment and time-saving devices are expected in the up-to-date housekeeper's workshop. Adequate lighting, natural and artificial, must be there also, for light makes for cleanliness as well as cheerfulness.

Ample built-in shelving and cabinets are required. The correct floor or floor covering for comfort, utility, and beauty should be selected. And as a successful finish just the right color combination must be used in decoration and kitchen accessories to make the room as attractive, pleasant, and lovely as any other in the house.

In refinishing old houses, a return to the old type of painted floor is being noticed. In many cases the owner doesn't wish to go to the expense of laying a new floor, and the old one can be satisfactorily scraped, cracks filled, and painted with a good quality paint.

Dark red, black, or yellow are once again the favorites for this type of finish.

The room with a bay window has a distinct advantage. An ultra-modern effect can be obtained by building in a window seat or placing the new sectional couches in the bay and curtaining the window with full, straight curtains.

In the decoration of children's rooms it is well to remember that only the strong intense colors make an impression on minds not ready to receive the subtler gradations of color. Green trimmed with red, or blue with orange, are pleasing to a child.

Extra Bath Needs Little Space

The plans for the modern home of homes and apartments ordinarily include an extra bathroom. The modern bathroom is compact and does not require the extensive space formerly considered necessary for this room.

In the manufacture of modern plumbing equipment special consideration has been given to their adjustment to a limited area.

A space as small as 5 by 5 feet in size can be effectively utilized, although 6 by 8 feet is preferred, especially in the better type of apartments.

The size and shape of the extra bathroom necessarily depends upon whether space is immediately available or whether it must be created from adjoining rooms, halls, or clothes closets.

The artistic decoration of a bathroom does not necessarily require heavy expense, but a cheerful atmosphere is requisite and bright coloring is frequently used. The floor material should be waterproof, readily cleaned, and attractive.

Tile, either as wainscoting or as total wall surfaces has been found satisfactory for bathrooms. The material used on the remainder of the interior surface, whether plaster with glazed paint finish or wallpaper, must carry out the note of cheerfulness and simplicity. If paper is used, it is well to bear in mind the fact that its exposure to dampness from the shower fixture must be avoided.

Of great convenience in a modern bathroom is a medicine chest of sufficient size to include supplies and medicines. The light fixture properly adjusted to facilitate shaving or make-up adds to the comforts of users. In addition to adjustable glass shelves in the medicine chest, an extra glass shelf below the cabinet is a practical feature also.

The tub should be built in and of material that cleans easily and wears well and have a faucet and drain sufficiently large to facilitate rapid filling and emptying.

FOR BETTER LIVING

Whenever an automatic gas or electric domestic hot-water heater is used it should be remembered that all hot-water plumbing lines are a source of heat loss, and a major one, because of the considerable amount of pipe surface exposed to the air as compared to the volume of heated water in the pipes.

For this reason, just as it is important that the storage tank be insulated, it is also important that, wherever space will permit, the hot-water lines be insulated with any of the several good insulation materials now available on the market. It is probable that the insulation of the hot-water lines will do as much to make the operation of the water heater economical as will the insulation placed around the storage tank by the manufacturer or the installer.

Each hot and cold-water supply line connecting to a plumbing fixture should have an accessible shut-off valve in additon to the regular faucet. By the inclusion of these shut-off valves, repairs to individual faucets are made easy without disturbing hot and cold-water service to the other plumbing fixtures within the house.

For economy in building, all the plumbing in the house should be grouped together if possible. In one-story houses the kitchen sink should back against the bathroom wall. In two-story houses the bathroom should be over the kitchen.

Glass ventilators have an important place in every room in the house, bringing comfort and tending to preserve the health of the occupants. These inconspicuous protectors are readily attached and reasonably priced. They permit the passage of sufficient air without drafts, save wear and tear on curtains as well as reducing laundry expense. Stains on the window sills, floors and rugs are obviated by their use.

A laundry systematically planned saves labor as well as time. Ample cabinet space for the storing of soap, starch and other materials necessary for successful laundry work gives the room a neat appearance.

A floor that is readily cleaned and drained is essential. Tubs, mangles and stoves kept in good order expedite work. Well planned window arrangements, with sunlight if possible, make the laundry a pleasant and properly ventilated workroom. Adequate artificial light is important, as is a sufficiency of outlets for the use of necessary electric equipment.

If a special shelf or other compartment is arranged to hold clothes to be mended, and sewing materials readily accessible for the restoring of missing buttons, etc., the inevitable "stitch in time may save nine."

SALESMEN WANTED

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN A BETTER JOB?

Westinghouse Offers An Opportunity

This advertisement is addressed not only to men with selling experience but to men now employed, who have never had a proper chance to find out if they could sell.

Applicants chosen by us will be given a new type of training in salesmanship, and a complete course presented by the industry's foremost merchandising men.

Upon completion of the training course, those men who in our opinion measure up to the requirements, will be placed in the employ of local Westinghouse branches.

If you feel your opportunities are limited in your present position . . . and if you think you would like to grow with Westinghouse . . . Apply in person to the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., 1005 Anchuster Bldg., from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. Ask for Mr. Broadhurst.

MEN FOR A PERMANENT POSITION.

My company has authorized me to employ 7 men immediately who live in St. Louis and vicinity, test them out for several days while in training without any expense or cost whatsoever to them and place them immediately in our St. Louis branch on a permanent basis; with liberal participation in the profits with no investment.

Steadiness and good character needed —not ability to talk, or a clientele or any previous experience. We are not advertising for salesmen—because our method of putting our prospects into the market is so unusual that it must be taught especially—but it is so simple to learn that no time need be lost in getting started. While getting started men of average ability must be willing to get along on reasonable weekly earnings. You learn from practical men earning substantial incomes every week.

We do not require men with sales experience because this work is so different from sales jobs as interpreted by the great majority of men. However, to be accepted you must be willing to work hard and ready to qualify at the larger pay schedules. Apply to personnel manager, Suite 512, Paul Brown Bldg., 9th & Olive sts., between 9:15 a. m. and 1:15 p. m. only.

Shreveport's only complete Department Store needs Salesmen experienced in Draperies, Floor Coverings and Furniture.

ROSEMONT IS WINNER IN $100,000 STAKE

WHAT A HORSE!—Tenth at the Half, First at the Finish

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

As indicated by the arrow at the extreme left, Rosemont is far back in the field as the horses turn into the backstretch of the Santa Anita Handicap. There are nine horses ahead of him, but, below:

Rosemont, on the outside, gets up in the very last stride to nose out the game but tiring Seabiscuit in a thrilling finish.

JUDGES NEED CAMERA'S AID TO PICK WINNER OF SANTA ANITA HANDICAP

Seabiscuit Beaten by a Whisker — Record-Breaking Crowd of 50,000 Sees Thrilling Race in Perfect Weather—Indian Broom Third, Special Agent Fourth in Field of 18—Winner Close to Record Time.

By the Associated Press.

SANTA ANITA PARK, Cal., Feb. 27.—Rosemont, the favorite, captured the third running of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap today as a brilliant chapter of American turf history was written.

Records fell behind as the Foxcatcher Farm's big bay champion thundered under the wire to win from C. S. Howard's sensational Seabiscuit in a finish so close the judges had to consult the official photograph to decide which horse won.

Major Austin C. Taylor's Indian Broom was third, and the Canadian sportsman's other candidate, Special Agent, ran fourth in the field of 18 starters.

A record-breaking crowd of more than 50,000 crammed Santa Anita's famed racing plant for the day's festivities.

A mighty roar echoed back from the hazy blue Sierra Madre mountains as the charging brigade rounded the track in a mile and one-quarter dash for the richest turf prize in the world.

Track "Good," Not "Fast."

Jockey Harry Richards brought Rosemont from behind as they neared the far turn, and with Seabiscuit, Special Agent, Indian Broom and a gallant Don Roberta battling gamely, literally lunged down the track to win.

It was the second major victory for the sapphire blue and gold silks of William du Pont Jr.'s Foxcatcher Stable in a week of Santa Anita's fabulous purse offerings. Trainer R. E. Handlen saddled Rosemont for victory in the $7500 San Antonio Handicap last Saturday.

Today's triumph brought $91,800 first prize money to the Foxcatcher coffers and Handlen won $10,000 offered by the Los Angeles Turf Club for the trainer of the winning horse.

Jockey Richards collected better than $9000 for his ride.

In perfect weather and over a strip good but not quite fast, Rosemont, the son of the Porter and Garden Rose, ran the mile and one-quarter in 2 minutes and 2 and 4-5 seconds, which was three-fifths of a second slower than the track record.

The balance of the field finished in this order: Time Supply, Don Roberto, Red Rain, Grand Manitou, Goldseeker, Watersplash, Goldeneye, Chanceview, Mr. Bones, Star Shadow, Accolade, Rushaway, Boxthorn, Sablin.

Suspense for the Big Crowd.

Rosemont, gradually edging the early betting favorite, A. A. Baroni's entry of Star Shadow and Golden Eye, out of the public favor, paid $9.80, $6 and $4 across the board. Seabiscuit, another short-priced favorite, paid $8.40 and $6.80 and Indian Broom $5.80.

The photo-finish was a nerve-tingling end ot a story book race. People, massed to the crushing point, surged crazily around the stewards' stand, tensely awaiting the official announcement. Seabiscuit held a fraction of a lead over Rosemont for 100 yards as they neared the finish line, and only a last stride burst of power put the big 5-year-old over the line.

To the thousands the result was a mystery until the film, hastily

Pari Mutuel Handle $398,553 on Stake; $1,539,879 for Day

SANTA ANITA, Cal., Feb. 27.
By the Associated Press.

THE eight-race program, climaxed by the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap today, accounted for a total pari-mutuel handle of $1,539,879. It was a record day's handle in the three-year history of the track. The handicap coaxed out $396,553, also a record.

Last year on Handicap day, the customers shoved $1,246,497 through the windows while the initial classic day, in 1935, accounted for $802,571.

The betting handle, by races: FIRST: $114,013; SECOND: $147,478; THIRD: $162,451; FOURTH: $180,445; FIFTH: $187,568; SIXTH: $398,553; SEVENTH: $183,511; EIGHTH: $167,860; TOTAL: $1,539,879.

The triumph of the Foxcatcher Farm's Rosemont in today's $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap was the third major money victory for the stable in a week.

Last Monday Fairy Hill won the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby, and two days before Rosemont won the $7500 San Antonio Handicap.

Victory in the Derby brought $45,425 added money, while Rosemont won $91,800 today and $6825 in the San Antonio. Total for the Foxcatcher Farm of multi-millionaire William du Pont Jr.—$144,050.

Richards Feared Seabiscuit.

Jockey Harry Richards, dismounting after a victorious ride aboard Rosemont:

"Whew! That was too close for comfort."

"The horse I was afraid of all the time was Seabiscuit," Richards said.

Jockey Johnny Pollard, rider for the C. S. Howard Stable, was crestfallen but a good sport. He said Seabiscuit broke slowly, and might have done better "from an outside position."

Little Basil James, leading jockey of the nation, aboard Indian Broom for third place, declared the race was "cleanly run," and Sonny Workman, who rode Red Rain, admitted ruefully:

"It was a good race, but I just didn't have enough horse under me today."

The Rosemonts of Other Days.

On a little hillock, overlooking the far turn of the track, there is a big maltese cross, made of granite, beneath a thin group of trees. Four great horses sleep there. They are Colante, Silver Cloud, Emperor of Norfolk and Rey El Santa Anita—thoroughbreds who carried "Lucky" Baldwin's silks to victory in the American Derbies of the past.

Bell Reported Asking Browns for Three Times His Pay of Last Year

By W. J. McGoogan.

Roy "Beau" Bell, slugging outfielder of the Browns, wants more than three times the salary he received in 1936, Bill De Witt, general manager of the club, announced yesterday on receipt of Bell's contract, returned unsigned for the second time.

The club, De Witt said, had offered Bell an increase of 66 2-3 per cent over what he received for his work last season when he was considered one of the most improved outfielders in the game.

Bell batted .344 and fielded .974 in 1936 and ranked among the leaders of the American League, tenth among the regulars to be exact, and batted 21 points more than Joe Di Maggio, sensational youngster of the New York Yankees.

Club Offers About $7500.

It is not the custom of baseball clubs to make public the salaries of their players but informed persons think that Bell received about $4500 last season. If this is true the club has offered him $7500 for 1937 and he is demanding about $15,000.

De Witt said he likely would have another meeting with Bell at the San Antonio training camp when the club begins training there a week from tomorrow, provided the outfielder doesn't sign in the meantime.

None of the Browns' other holdouts, Rollie Hemsley, Lou Koupal or Harlond Clift has been heard from recently.

The Cardinals advance squad is scheduled to leave here for Daytona Beach, Fla., this morning, the group including eight men headed by Coach Buzzy Wares. Departing from here are Pitchers Bill McGee and Morton Cooper, Catcher Paul Chervinko, Infielder Don Gutteridge, Ira Smith, pitcher and manager of the Houston club, and Jack Julich, an infielder, and Kenny Sullivan, trainer of the Columbus team.

Terry Moore, Cardinal outfielder, who was scheduled to go with the first squad, will not be able to depart because of the illness of his mother. He probably will not leave until the middle of the week.

Frisch Is Waiting for Them.

Lou Scoffic, outfielder, is expected to board the train at Mt. Vernon, Ill., and Silas Johnson, pitcher, at Evansville, Ind.

Manager Frank Frisch has been at Daytona Beach for sometime. Leo Durocher, captain and shortstop and Outfielder Joe Medwick have also been in Florida where they will join the squad shortly. Other members of the large Cardinal outfit will report to Daytona Beach from their homes in various parts of the country.

President Sam Breadon departed by automobile for the camp yesterday and, it is likely, will hold a conference with Dizzy Dean, holdout pitcher, within a few days. Nothing new has been heard from First Baseman Johnny Mize, who is the club's other holdout.

Branch Rickey, vice-president and general manager of the Redbirds is on his way to California to give attention to the affairs of the Sacramento Club, Cardinal Pacific Coast League organization, after which he will return to St. Louis, then fly to Daytona Beach.

Cards to Form Girls' Club.

Meanwhile the Cardinal office has announced a meeting of interested persons to be held at the Auditorium at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning to perfect the organization of girl fans between 10 and 16 years of age. Robert L. Finch of the Cardinal staff is in charge and

GIANTS LOSE TO HAVANA TEAM, 9 TO 1

By the Associated Press.

HAVANA, Feb. 27.—Basilio Rossell of the Havana Professional Baseball team who beat the St. Louis Cardinals twice last training season today allowed the New York Giants only six hits and beat the National League champions, 9-1.

Clyde Castleman and Rookies Bill Benne and Cliff Melton pitched for the Giants and allowed 11 hits. Off to a one-run lead in the first inning, the New Yorkers gave up three runs in the fourth and never got them back.

This was the Giants' second loss in as many starts. The Havana team finished last in the Island League during the winter season, but looked like champions against New York.

ATHLETICS LOSE TO MEXICANS

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 27.—Philadelphia Athletics' pitchers were wild as their 1937 camp exhibition baseball season opened today and the American Leaguers were humbled, 3-2, by the Necaxa Club, Mexican semi-pros.

Fred Archer, fourth Athletic pitcher to see service, sent the winning run home from second base with a wild pitch. A walk and an error preceded the game-ending toss.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Here Comes Schmeling.

HERR MAX SCHMELING, esteemed to have been rudely treated by the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, will dock at New York this week, his fourth visit to the United States in twelve months. Max is coming to find out whether his next fight will be in the ring or in a law court.

The tangle of rival promoters over contract rights almost assures a legal battle. Two separate contracts were signed by Max for a fight with Braddock, the titleholder, as his opponent. After the first had been closed, and Max was comfortably loafing in Berlin awaiting the date of the bout, Braddock's manager began flirting with Joe Louis for a fight at Atlantic City—a so-called no-decision fight.

Max came hurrying across the water to find out what it was all about. He forced Braddock into signing a new and seemingly iron-clad agreement, with the date June 3 specified and New York as the location.

But what's a contract in the life of a pugilist who sees more money by violating it? When the Anti-Nazi Association made its boycott threat, it gave Braddock an excuse to again scrap the Schmeling match and fight Louis for a bigger guarantee.

It is as to the status of his second contract that Schmeling is about to join us, in America, with a promise of using "every legal effort to protect his rights."

Poor Max! He's just another disciple of Hitler in an unfriendly environment. About all they'll give him will be the works.

Garden Is in a Spot.

MIKE JACOBS has Schmeling tied up and the Garden is supposed to hold contractual strings on Champion Braddock. In the legal row that is to follow, Jacobs holds the whip hand of his rival fight promoters — the Madison Square Garden corporation.

Mike told his rivals: "We are not advertising the Braddock-Louis bout as a title fight. Our date June 22 is behind that of the Braddock-Schmeling contract. For the earlier fight I promise to deliver Schmeling on June 3, as per agreement; it is up to you folks to have Braddock there and complete that contract."

That seems to pull the fangs of Jimmy Johnston and Co., since they control Braddock. If the champion fails to appear for a June 3 bout with Schmeling, Max might sue for damages.

On the other hand, can the Garden enjoin Braddock from fighting Louis in a non-title fight,

SCHOOLBOY CUTS EIGHT SECONDS OFF MILE RECORD

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Out of a record-smashing orgy in the National High and Prep School track and field championships in Madison Square Garden today came the fastest mile ever run indoors by a schoolboy as 16-year-old Leslie MacMitchell of New York's George Washington High School, travelled the distance in the sensational time of 4:23.6.

MacMitchell, running in the first of the three races in which the fastest times determined the final placings, clipped eight full seconds off the old record of 4:31.6 made last year by Ray Trail of Mont Pleasant, Schenectady, N. Y. He was asked to match strides with Bradley Rendell of Falliconer, N. Y., to whom he bowed outdoors last fall, but the up-state star was a full 60 yards back of the New Yorker at the finish.

MacMitchell's record-breaking performance was the first on a program that saw Phil Leibowitz, of the local James Madison High lower the George Washington runner's mark for 1000 yards and the prep school athletes bettered five of their national marks. Manual Training of New York, carried off the high school team title with 14 points while St. Benedicts of Newark, replaced St. Johns of Danvers, Mass., as the prep school titleholder with 29 points.

Leibowitz was timed in 2:22.4 in winning the first of the two 1000 yard races.

Prep school athletes lowered marks in the shot-put, 60-yard hurdles, 220-yard dash, 880-yard run and mile relay and high jump.

John Quigley of De LaSalle of New York, came through with a record in the 220 after winning the 60-yard dash for the only double victory of the day. His time of 23.7 in the 220 was one-tenth of a second faster than the record held by Vincent Healey of St. Benedicts.

The 880-yard run was run in three sections with the time of 1:59.2 made by Edward Donovan of St. Benedict's, lowering the existing mark by four-tenths of a second, Drake Prep of New York, ran the mile relay in 3:33.3, for another new record.

Marquette Negro Sets New World High Jump Record

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Marquette University's great Negro jumper, Edward T. Burke, brought the National A. A. U. track and field championships to a smashing climax tonight by clearing the bar at 6 feet 9¼ inches for a new world indoor record. This wiped out by five-sixteenths of an inch the former mark which Burke shared with Cornelius Johnson, Los Angeles Negro.

Uncorking a whirlwind sprint in the stretch, Archie San Romani of Emporia (Kan.) Teachers College, captured the classic 1500 meters championship run. San Romani rushed past Luigi Beccali of Italy and Gene Venzke of the New York A. C. to win in 3:51.2.

San Romani made his first triumph of the eastern indoor season a thriller as he came up with a terrific "kick" from third place to beat Beccali by two yards and Venzke by three in a six-man field that was minus the great Glenn Cunningham, king of the American milers.

Cunningham, because of a cold, withdrew on short notice, thus losing a chance to turn the tables on his conqueror of a year ago, Venzke, in the same event.

Venzke Drops Behind.

Venzke, who holds the world indoor record of 3:49.9 for the "metric mile," looked like a winner as he took command, two laps from home, with Beccali, San Romani, and Indiana's Don Lash trailing in that order. Gene fought off Beccali's challenge, going into the last turn, but was unable to stand additional pressure from both Beccali and San Romani in a 50-meter stretch drive.

Norman Bright of San Francisco Olympic Club turned loose a powerful two-lap sprint finish to defend his title in the 5000 meters run. The blond Californian broke the meet record as he hit the tape in 14 minutes 45.8 seconds. This displaced his own mark of 15 minutes flat, set last year.

Meadows Takes Pole Vault.

Earle Meadows, Southern California's Olympic - champion, clinched the pole vault title when he became the lone entry to clear 14 feet 3 inches. This bettered the former meet mark of 14 feet 1 inch, made by Sabin Carr of Yale in 1928.

The Japanese ace, Suco Oye, and Rosemont, well reined in the early running gained steadily when called on and in a brilliant finish caught Sea Biscuit in closing strides. Don Biscuit was in close quarters at the start but recovered quickly and taken to the rail gained a prominent position rounding the first turn then followed the pace under steady rating to the stretch where he went to the front but although going gamely to the end on tiring ground could not resist the winner. Indian Broom was on the outside down the back stretch and was lucky to escape serious interference but came gamely in the run home and was going well at the end. Special Agent killed off Boxthorn in the early running to open up a good lead but weakened in the stretch. Time Supply was slow to get in stride and was in rather close quarters on the back stretch but moved up strongly after rounding stretch turn and was going well at end. Don Roberto showed good speed and held on well to show a fine effort. Red Rain was slow to get going and was never a serious contender. Star Shadow broke slowly and never was threatened. Gold Seeker made up some ground. Grand Manitou ran a good race. Watersplash although outclassed performed fairly well. Chanceview broke out at the start to interfere with Sea Biscuit and was never a serious contender. Mr. Bones could not keep up. Accolade tired in the stretch.

COOPER LEADS $3000 TOURNEY WITH 139 AFTER 36 HOLES

VIC GHEZZI AND RUNYAN STROKE BACK; GULDAHL HAS 145 SCORE

Six Players Tie for First Place After First Round With 69 but Most of Them Slip on Second Trip.

By the Associated Press.

BELLEAIR, Fla., Feb. 27.—Lighthorse Harry Cooper of Chicago rocketed to the halfway lead in the $3000 West Coast open golf tournament today, posting a 36-hole score of 139.

Two under par for the first day's play, he was one stroke ahead of Victor Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., and Paul Runyan of White Plains, N. Y.

Cooper turned in a 69 on the number 2 course this morning and moved over to the Number 1 layout this afternoon to follow up with a 70.

The tricky Number 1 course took its toll among early leaders who found the other 18 to their liking. Horton Smith of Chicago dropped back to a 75 after turning in 69 for the morning round.

Frank Walsh, also of Chicago, needed 74 on the second 18 after shooting 69.

A 76 was the best Ralph Guldahl of Chicago could do in the afternoon. He also had a 69 on the initial 18.

Ghezzi's 140 was accomplished with a pair of 70's. Runyan came through with a 69 to go with his morning 71.

Fourth best score—141—belonged to Gene Sarazen of Brookfield Center, Conn., who had successive rounds of 69-72.

Altogether 150 players qualified for the final 36 tomorrow. Low amateur at the halfway mark was Morton McCarthy of Norfolk, Va., with 77-76—153.

Following Sarazen were Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., and Harold McSpaden of Winchester, Mass., each with 142, Revolta with 70-72 and McSpaden with 71-71.

Tied at 143 were Byron Nelson of Reading, Pa., who paired 73 and 70, and Walsh.

The 144 group included Jimmy Thomson of Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, Par 71-73; Bob Alston, of Ottawa, Can., 72-72; Sam Parks Jr., of Pittsburgh, 75-69; Smith and Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., 71-73—144.

PENNSYLVANIA WINS EASTERN COLLEGIATE LEAGUE CAGE TITLE

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 27.—The Unversity of Pennsylvania won the championship of the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League tonight scoring an easy 40 to 24 victory over Cornell before a crowd of 5000.

The victory, regaining the title lost by Penn last year to Columbia, was the Quakers' ninth straight in league competition, where they are undefeated. Penn still has three games to play, but their nearest competitor has lost four games.

The championship is Penn's twelfth in league history and Lon Jourdet's seventh in 12 years of coaching.

Led by Franny Murray, Bob Dougherty and Roy Menzel, Penn took an early 13 to 2 lead and, although Cornell pulled up to 26 to 20 with six minutes to go, the result was never in doubt. Murray, who had been replaced by Brickley, re-entered the game at this point and scored three consecutive baskets to start a 14-point splurge for Pennsylvania.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 27.

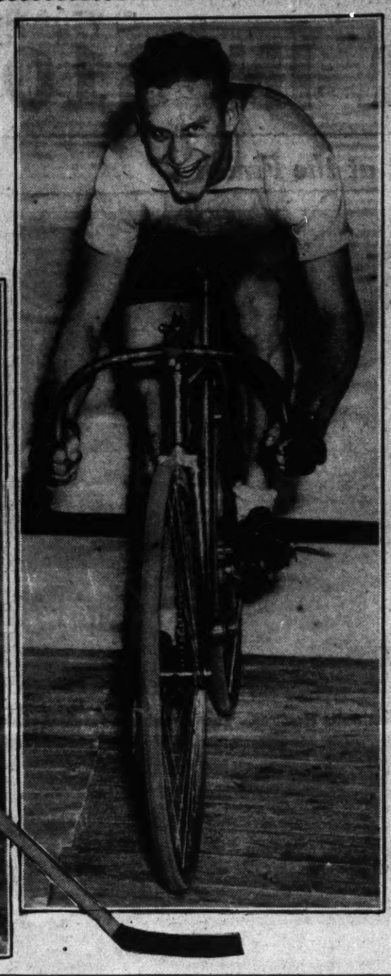
RAY HARRELL, Cardinal pitcher, was operated upon here for appendicitis today and came through in good style. His condition was reported tonight as very good at St. Margaret's Hospital.

Harrell was counted upon as a likely candidate to win a starting berth with the Redbird staff this season. He won 14 and lost 13 games with Rochester last season.

Details as to the illness of the pitcher were lacking but it is assumed that he was stricken while on his way to the Daytona Beach training camp as his home is in Byers, Tex.

This Will Be Iron Man Week

We will have with us Tuesday the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League, who will present among others Murray Murdoch, right wing who has played in nearly 600 consecutive games, pictured below. At right is Fred Ottevaere, one of the six-day bicycle riders who will begin a week's grind at the Auditorium next Saturday.



MANGIN WINS FIRST MATCH IN INDOOR TENNIS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Gregory Mangin and his most serious rival, Frankie Parker, gave up only one game between them today as the first round of the thirty-eighth United States indoor tennis championship was played with the perfunctory progression of the lesser favorites.

Mangin, who is striving for his third straight championship and his fifth title in six years, opened his campaign with a 6—0, 6—1 triumph over Bryan Hamlin, a local adversary, while the No. 2 nationally-ranked Parker whitewashed tall Hugh McLaughlin of Brooklyn, 6—0, 6—0.

The four other preferred players advanced without the loss of a set among them. David Jones of New York, who gained fame in England with his high kicking service, defeated McLeod Stephens of Yale, 6—0, 6—4; J. Gilbert Hall of South Orange, N. J., eliminated Walter Milberg of Brooklyn, 6—2, 6—3; Leonard Hartman, runner-up to Mangin a year ago, vanquished Charles Frink of Brooklyn, 6—4, 6—1, and Frank Bowden defeated John Nogrady 6—4, 6—1.

"Prep" League Teams Favored In District Meet

Two Preparatory League fives, selected by other "A" class teams in the district high school basketball tournament as the probable finalists should have an easy time in reaching the semifinals.

Christian Brothers High, seeded No. 1, plays McBride in its first game when the tourney starts Tuesday at Clayton High and Washington gymnasiums, and while the Brothers lost to their Preparatory League rivals, 19-18, in one game this season, they defeated McBride, 23-10, in another contest.

The Brothers, victors in 14 of 17 contests, should have no trouble in eliminating South Side Catholic High if they get past the first round. The South Siders drew a first-round bye.

St. Louis University High, seeded No. 2, meets an erratic Ritenour squad in its opening game, and if it wins will meet Pacific, a team that has lost nine straight games.

The other seeded teams, University City and Normandy, have more difficult assignments to reach the semifinals. The Indians, last year's champions, play Kirkwood and then, if successful, meet Webster. The Indians swamped Kirkwood, 47-14, a few weeks ago, but were held to a 27-24 score by Webster last week.

Normandy plays Maplewood, a team with which it divided two games this season, and the winner of that game meets Clayton, another strong Suburban League club, and runner-up in the last tournament.

Sufferers From Insomnia Should Have Great Time at Six-Day Race; Kilian and Vopel Are Favorites

By Robert Morrison.

The stuff fiddle strings are made of may be displayed during six days and seven nights in St. Louis starting next Saturday. The occasion: the dizziest of all sports, a six-day bicycle race.

The carnival scene attendant to these affairs will be laid in the Auditorium. There, Managing Director George Harvey tells those who never have watched a six-day race, you may see the most daring, nervy exhibition of intestinal fortitude known to the sporting world.

All Is Awhirl.

Everything is awhirl at these events. The bike wheels, the bikes around the banked oval and the heads of spectators w ho sit fascinated by an animated merry-go-round. But the dizziest part is the riders' disregard of injury in spills.

A good many years ago Harvey said he himself was a rider. He slipped his shirt sleeve above his wrist. His forearm was twisted and knobby.

"That's from accidents in a six-day bicycle race."

He crossed his office in the Auditorium, obtained X-ray negatives and held them to the light.

"I had these made in Cleveland to prove that one of the riders in the race there this year really had broken a collar bone. The rider continued in the race. They didn't believe a man could have that much insides."

The gameness of these pedaling mad men is something spectators marvel at, Harvey emphasized.

"In one of the races this year a rider crashed and ran an eight-inch splinter through his thigh. While the doctor was attempting to extract this piece of wood, the rider was calmly picking other small splinters from his leg."

Harvey yesterday was studying the entry list with an eye to making the pair teams in the field of 20 as balanced as possible. Seventeen men have entered. As soon as Harvey selects three more, the pairings will be made.

To Keep Teammates.

The international teams—Gustave Kilian and Heinz Vopel of Germany, Charles Winter and Freddy Ottevaere of the United States, and Jackie Sheehan and Henry O'Brien, Irishmen, will not be split.

But the others entered will be matched so as to make it a better race, Harvey said.

To enlighten those who don't remember the previous six-day events here in 1933 and 1935, it may be explained the members of the two-man teams take turns resting and riding. At intervals sprints are conducted and points awarded to those finishing first, second, third and fourth.

Sometimes they "jam" (spontaneous sprint) to gain laps. At the end whoever leads in laps or, if there is no distance leader, whoever has the most sprints points wins the race.

From 5 to 11 a. m. is the period when one rider of each team goes slowly around the track for three hours while the other sleeps. The public will not be admitted during this time because the promoters say it is of no interest.

It's a grand place for insomnia sufferers. Something going on all the time. National Cycling Association referees will hold a 24-hour watch. This is in line with a new ruling this year, Harvey said.

Kilian and Vopel, who have won 12 of the last 14 races they participated in this year and last, will be a big attraction. Charley Winter, who with Hans Carpus won the 1935 race here, will try to win again with Ottevaere. These two teams and Sheehan and O'Brien are the strongest entered.

To Be Paired Later.

Others to be paired later are Freddy Spence- Nutley, N. J.; Geary May, Hollywood; Tom Flynn, Brooklyn; Frank Keating, New York; Henri LePage, Montreal; Reggie Fielding, England; Harold Nauwens, Brooklyn; Charles Yacino, Chicago; Dominick Camastro, New York; Jakie Gruber, Brooklyn, and Lawrence Gadou, Montreal.

With the track to be completed Friday, the hall opened to the curious Saturday afternoon, the program is to start Saturday evening with St. Louis amateur races at 8 o'clock and the six-day ride beginning at 9.

Miss Hemphill Wins, 2-1, Over Marian Miley

By the Associated Press.

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., Feb. 27.—Kathryn Hemphill of Columbia, S. C., withstood a valiant stretch drive by Marion Miley of Lexington, Ky., today to win the South Atlantic women's golf tournament.

The score was 2 and 1 after the superb play of Miss Miley, winner in 1935, almost dissipated the four up edge held by Miss Hemphill at the turn.

Miss Hemphill, the medalist, was close to par figures for the 17 holes played in the finals. She survived an able field including Patty Berg, the Minneapolis sensation.

The golfing women tourists end their Florida season with a tournament at St. Augustine next week.

Scoring Record Set.

By the Associated Press.

Coach Ward (Piggy) Lambert withheld three of his Purdue regulars at the start of the game and, with another out for the season with injuries, the Boilers opened firing against their Hoosier rivals with only one regular.

The total number of points scored by the two teams tonight, 114, sets a new conference record.

Chicago Loses No. 11.

By the Associated Press.

EVANSTON, Ill., Feb. 27.—The University of Chicago's basketball team suffered its eleventh straight Big Ten defeat tonight, losing to Northwestern, 34 to 27, at Patten gym before 4000. The Maroons have yet to win a conference game.

In winning its fourth Big Ten game, Northwestern took a 10-point lead midway in the first and maintained that margin throughout, except in the last two minutes when Chicago cut it by a few points. At the half the Wildcats led, 20 to 9.

Mike McMichael, veteran Purple forward, led both teams for individual high scoring, with five baskets and three penalty tosses. Several of his field goals were one-handed shots while on the run under the basket.

Jack Mullins, Maroon forward, scored 10 points to lead the Chicago offense.

developed above the towering grandstand, slid down the wire to the steward's stand. Again the very ground shook with the roars of the crowd.

It was a proper sequel to the suspense that attended the start. Sablin, of the E. F. Seagram estate, a notorious bad actor at the post, held up the start several minutes. Then at the shout "There they go!" Special Agent, Ed Janss's Boxthorn, Don Roberto, the lone California-bred candidate, and Seabiscuit led the pack down the front of the grand stand, and remained in that order going down the back stretch.

Richards Takes the Short Route.

At the far turn the favorites began to take charge of the race, Rosemont moving up on the inside, Jockey Johnny Pollard forcing Seabiscuit into the front rank, and Frank Carreaud's Time Supply, second over Rosemont in the big handicap last year, making a sudden but short lived bid to finish fifth.

Rosemont's victory was the first time in the Handicap history that the pre-race favorite won, last year Discovery was favored, the year before the great Equipoise. Both ran out of the money.

Seabiscuit won $20,000 second place money, Indian Broom, with Jockey Basil James in the saddle, $10,000, and Special Agent, with Charlie Corbett up, won $5000. The secondary purses were double the amount offered last year, which accounts for the fact that Rosemont's triumph netted less than $100,000 in added money.

ST. LOUIS U. SCHEDULES 15 TRACK MEETS

St. Louis University's track team will participate in 15 meets this spring, including the Missouri Valley, the Central Intercollegiate, Butler and Kansas relays, according to the schedule arranged by Cecil E. Mullerleile, director of athletics.

The Billikens, who revived track last year under the direction of Ed Hall, former Kansas U. star and teammate of Glenn Cunningham, will participate in a triangular meet with Cape Girardeau and Washington U. April 10. Missouri School of Mines, Western Illinois State Teachers, Concordia Seminary and Illinois Wesleyan will also furnish opposition for the Bills.

Coach Hall has five lettermen from last year to furnish the nucleus of this year's team. Capt. Bob Wilson, Don Wolken, Ray Elkberg, Ike Vollmer and Marty Rosini will each participate in several events in the Missouri Valley meet next Saturday until Hall can get a better line on the newcomers to his squad.

The schedule:

By Reno Hahn.

The Food Centers, Municipal Basketball Association champions, will be favored to win the Ozark A. A. U. basketball title in the tourney beginning tomorrow night at Sherman Park gymnasium with [illegible] teams entered.

The Centers, with Ad Dietzel, standout player in the city, jumping center, recently defeated the previously unbeaten Y. M. H. A. team two games to take the Muny title. It is possible that these two squads may meet for the Ozark championship, for they are in different brackets.

Two Illinois teams that may be "dark horses" drew byes for the first round. They are the Alton Apex team, which will play the Food Centers if the Muny champions win, and the Granite City Pals. The Pals scored several unexpected victories last year.

One of the most interesting first-round contests is that between the Royal Hearts and the Polish Falcons, both Muny League teams, at 7 o'clock on the north court. The Falcons, strengthened by the addition of Paul Housman, recent graduate of McKinley High, scored a 31-30 victory over the Hearts in their last meeting. It was the first triumph for the Falcons over a Muny League rival.

SHAMROCKS AND OPTIMISTS PLAY IN SECOND HALF OF DOUBLE BILL

Winner of U.S.F.A. Contest Will Enter Western Semi-Final and Oppose McNab's Undefeated Eleven.

By Dent McSkimming.

Rival factions in the professional soccer field here join hands in offering a combined program in which the Shamrocks oppose the Hart's Optimists in an exhibition match and the Burkes face the Town Criers in a second round national challenge cup match. The doubleheader will be played at Public Schools Stadium (north field) starting at 1:45 p. m.

Out of the Burkes-Town Crier game will emerge the Shamrocks' next cup match opponent. Spectators will find themselves drawing comparisons as the games progress, trying to foresee the developments of next Sunday.

The Shamrocks, winners of 18 straight games this season, have never before opposed the Optimists, a club which recently dropped a very closely contested national cup match to the Burkes, 1-0. In a series of St. Louis Soccer League games, the Optimists, despite the youth of most of the players, maintained a very stout defense and finished second to the Burkes in the first half-season schedule. With Manager Eddie Hart at center forward, they have shown steady improvement and are now regarded as quite as effective a team as either the Burkes or Town Criers.

Because of the fact that Manager Emil Cueto has been able to keep his team fairly stable, the Burkes will likely play nicer football than the Town Criers this afternoon. The latter club fell below expectations in league competition, but Manager John Marre has recently regained the services of several stars who had quit the game, and if they all reach their peak the team may pierce the Burkes' sturdy defense for several goals.

The only other club in the western division still eligible for the national championship is the Sparta team of Chicago, waiting upon the St. Louis clubs. Thus, the winner of today's cup match here will oppose the Shamrocks on March 7, the winner to oppose Sparta in the western final series.

Mexico takes its soccer with few smiles. Following the defeat of the Espana Club of Mexico by Independiente of Argentina, the Espana Club directors released three star players. One, Pepe Rodriguez, because he did not perform as well as expected against Argentina, and the other Luis Fuente and Manuel Alonso, because "their private lives were not exactly what they should be." All three forwards are ranked among the best in Mexico. The third game of the series between Argentina and Mexico's top clubs will be played this afternoon. Mexico's club, America, won the first, 5 to 4; Argentina the second, 3 to 1. The Shamrocks of St. Louis have contracted for a series of five games in Mexico City in May and June.

WELLSTON INDIVIDUAL BOWLING TOURNAMENT WILL BEGIN TODAY

The first round of the Wellston Chamber of Commerce individual elimination bowling tournament will open at the Wellston alleys this afternoon with 32 bowlers competing. The winners will meet the following Sunday in another series of eliminations.

The pairings for today:

MARQUETTE NEGRO SETS NEW WORLD HIGH JUMP RECORD

Richard Ganslen of Columbia, both cleared 14 feet. Ganslen negotiated the height for the first time in his brief college career.

Slender Tommy Deckard, Indiana University, galloped to record-breaking victory in the 3000 meters steeplechase.

Deckard was clocked in eight minutes 48.6 seconds as he ran away from the veteran Joe McCluskey of the New York A. C., former king of the steeplechasers and holder of the national indoor mark of 8:50.

"Dimmy" Zaitz, burly Boston College shotputter, captured the title for the second straight year by tossing the leather covered 16-pound ball a distance of 51 feet 4¾ inches on his last try. This enabled Zaitz to overtake and beat Nebraska's Sam Francis, all-American fullback. Francis did 50 feet 10½ inches in the competition, although he got off one practice throw that bettered 52 feet.

Sam Allen, the stylish Oklahoma Baptist timber topper, raced to decisive victory in the 65-meter hurdles final, thereby retaining his title as indoor champion. Allen beat Allan Tolmich of Wayne University, Detroit, by two yards.

Johnson Wins 60-Meter Sprint.

Ben Johnson climaxed his comeback by gaining the indoor sprint crown at 60 meters. The Columbia Negro, running in front from the gun, beat Bob Grieve of Illinois by a yard in the final with Marty Glickman, Syracuse Olympian, third. The time of 6.8 seconds was one-tenth off the world indoor mark held by Ralph Metcalfe.

Running the anchor, 1500 meters, for the New York Curb Exchange A. A., Cunningham, the ailing mile king, gained the decision over his Indiana rival, Don Lash, in an eyelash finish. The pair hit the tape almost together as Cunningham came from behind in the stretch.

Eddie O'Brien, the Syracuse flash, repeated his 1936 conquest in the 600-meters championship race but was two seconds behind his own world record as he hit the tape in 1:23.

WRAY'S COLUMN

when its contract with Braddock is based only on his next championship bout?

Looks as if Mike has backed Jimmy into a spot. However, that doesn't interest fans who want to see Braddock fight Louis and win, and then oppose Schmeling in September.

A compromise may work out that way. At least Schmeling and the winner of the Louis-Braddock battle may fight next fall in New York, if both parties arrive at a compromising mood.

This would be just one more shove in the game of pushing the German around.

But Max needs the money. Promoter Jacobs told this writer that Schmeling still owes him $31,000 which he will have to cross off his books if Schmeling doesn't engage in a battle in this country.

Our Biggest Sports Event.

MAYOR LA GUARDIA of New York on March 10 will launch what is probably the largest sporting event to be held in any country this year. On that occasion he will roll a bowling ball down a tenpin alley in New York, starting the American Bowling Congress tournament on its long journey.

This tournament is one of magnificent figures. It will last from March 10 until May 4, and more than 22,000 individuals will compete.

Well, that's only the beginning of the thing, according to statistics put out by the A. B. C. publicity department. Have a look at some of the following facts and then try to recall an event that can duplicate them:

The prize money will total $145,000.

There will be 4000 five-man teams, 5800 two-man teams and 11,000 singles bowling.

The total entry fees received amount to $217,000.

There will be 6000 cash prizes offered the 22,000 contestants.

The most remarkable part of the annual A. B. C. event is that there is no question of amateur or professional involved.

Nor is there any handicap—you take your chance of having a good night. And, on alleys newly prepared, the element of chance is large. You can't bowl on newly-built hard board alleys as you might on your home "groove." You have to be there with accuracy ball after ball.

Could Make It Spectacular.

WHILE the present A. B. C. form of prize money distribution has seemed to work out to the satifaction of bowlers, we sometimes wonder if the feature could not be made a matter of vastly greater public interest if the prize money were split fifty-fifty into two groups, the first to include a $25,000 prize to the high five-man team and graded lesser prizes down to the next 10. The other 50 to split up as now, into small sums. Under the present arrangement the 6000 cash prizes average only $24.15.

It's difficult to sustain news interest in a tournament that dribbles on for nearly two months for prizes of chickenfeed proportions. But two or three major prizes in five figures would supply headlines where none now exist.

The really remarkable thing about the A. B. C. is that the promoters are able to command daily newspaper space over such an extended period with no high point of interest.

The A. B. C. is not likely to change its prize-money policy. It has been successful. But the eternal mystery is how the event continues to lure men from distant points at great cost to play for prizes that will not even pay expenses.

It Can Be Done.

MISSOURI UNIVERSITY'S schedule, calling for games with Kansas and University of Southern California with only one day intervening, has caused some caustic comment by alumni, who believe the undertaking will prove too severe for the Tigers.

However, there have been more formidable tasks undertaken in the past and successfully. Perhaps the most notable on record was achieved by the University of the South (Sewanee) in 1899. In that season Sewanee on successive days played Texas, Texas A. and M., Tulane, Louisiana State and Mississippi and won all its games by shutouts!

Sewanee, although it had an enrollment of fewer than 300 students, won all 12 of the games it played that year and with the exception of the contest against Auburn, was not scored on. Auburn scored 10 points, but was defeated. The total score of the Sewanee team that year was 342 to 10. Hope the Missouri team of 1937 is as good.

Middleweights Not in Demand.

ONCE on a time the middleweight division of fighters was very popular, but today the 160-pound boys fail to agitate the cash register to any worth-while degree. That became apparent when Freddie Steele, quite a colorful champion, and Gorilla Jones hardly reached a five-figure total at Milwaukee on New Year's day; and it was again emphasized last week when Steele and Babe Risko grossed only $17,000 at New York.

Lightweights and welterweights in Madison Square Garden more than double this, whenever a title bout is on. Babe Risko, guaranteeing a champion $25,000, not only did not gain the championship, but suffered an actual loss of $14,000 by his gamble. That gives him a title of sorts—he's the hard-luck champion now.

All of which leads up to a proposal made by George Wilsman, manager of the Negro middleweight, Allen Matthews, that Freddie Steele and Matthews be matched for the title in St. Louis. Wilsman thinks St. Louis could do better than New York with this match.

NO DOUBT Matthews would prove a formidable foe for the title holder; he made a great fight in their first meeting, after which fans were undecided whether to cheer the decision in favor of Steele or boo it.

The Ring, a periodical devoted to boxing, suggests that Matthews is entitled to a title go and mentions three bouts for St. Louis: Matthews vs. Fred Apostoli, Matthews vs. Teddy Yaroz and Matthews vs. Steele.

If Matthews fought and won the first two engagements, the title fight might really pass the $25,000 gross.

Even that figure seems low for this division; but apparently nobody cares much about the middles and no city is likely to guarantee even that total, when Steele again risks his crown. This class needs a Stanley Ketchell or a Billy Papke to bring it back to normalcy.

RUGBY TEAMS PLAY IN PRACTICE GAME TODAY

The Rugby Football Union League of St. Louis will hold its first practice session this afternoon at the field south of the Jefferson Memorial, Forest Park, at 2:30 o'clock, with the Ramblers opposing a group of picked players from other teams.

The league is affiliated with the National Rugby Union, headed by Dr. George VanDusen, and each year selects an all-star team to play in intercity matches. This season the players have been invited to play in New York.

Four clubs will be represented in the league and will open play next Sunday afternoon. The teams entered are the Ramblers, Eighty-Niners and a team from the St. Louis County Y. M. C. A.

New Orleans and St. Louis Golf Matches Postponed

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BILOXI, Miss., Feb. 27.

GOLF matches scheduled for today between amateur players of St. Louis and New Orleans were postponed until tomorrow because of rain.

The matches, 30 of them in number, will start tomorrow morning.

Nelson Whitney and Freddie Haas, student of Louisiana State University, are among those who will make up the New Orleans team. The St. Louis amateurs were not chosen for their ability to play alone but because being good players who found it convenient to take a vacation trip sponsored by hotel proprietors of Biloxi and the promotion department of a railroad.

RANGERS PLAY FLYERS TUESDAY, MINNEAPOLIS HERE TONIGHT

TEAM STANDING

(Including Friday's Games.)

	W.	L.	T.	G.	OG.	Pts.
St. Louis	28	11	3	121	75	59
St. Paul	19	20	3	80	90	38
Kansas City	17	21	4	87	83	34
Minneapolis	17	19	3	77	86	34
Wichita	15	23	3	67	73	30
Tulsa	14	17	6	85	80	28

Marking time before the playoffs for the American Hockey Association title, which start about March 20, the Flyers tonight play Minneapolis, a club which is still struggling for a place in the championship games.

Right now Minneapolis is fourth, four points ahead of Tulsa and Wichita, tied for fifth position. Those three teams are battling for the fourth playoff spot and the Flyers have met and lost to Tulsa and Wichita this week.

The Flyers are secure in possession of first place, no matter if they lose the remainder of their games.

Second Exhibition Game.

However, the St. Louis team has an important engagement Tuesday night, when the New York Rangers of the National League call at the Arena for an exhibition game, the second in which major-league clubs have figured here this season. Some time ago the Flyers defeated the Chicago Blackhawks, 2 to 0.

The Rangers are third in the American Division of the National League and are assured of a place in the playoffs. They are 2½ games out of first place.

It will be a different club from that which came here when St. Louis was represented in the big league. Lester Patrick, one of the outstanding coaches of hockey, has informed the Flyers that he will bring a squad of 20 players, including such famous stars as Ching Johnson, defense man; Bill Cook, Frank Boucher, Cecil Dillon, Murray Murdock, Butch Keeling and Ott Heller. These are all veterans, while also with the Rangers will be Alex Shibicky, one of the youthful sensations of the league this season; Lynn Patrick, Lester's son and one of the most promising of the youngsters, and Neil Coville, another newcomer. Art Coulter, who used to play with the Blackhawks, also is a Ranger.

The Rangers have Davey Kerr in goal, a man who took over from Larry Aitkenhead when that veteran lost his power to stop enemy rushes. That was at the time the Eagles were in the league and the St. Louis team tried to get Kerr.

A recent standing of the National League shows that the Rangers had won 17 games, lost 14 and tied nine. They had scored 98 goals as against 84 for their opponents and were credited with 43 points, 17 more than Chicago.

Flyers to Use Third Line.

The club is due here tomorrow morning.

The Flyers will use a third line for the game by permission of the American Association board and are trying to borrow a defense man from another club in the league, to take the place of Joe Matte, who has been sent home to recover from his badly cut foot in preparation for the playoffs. Rockburn, Kansas City, is one of the defense men sought, as is Rusty Hughes of the same club. Both are favorite enemies of the St. Louis fans, being rough, tough, burly players who would come in handy to have around against the Rangers.

Probable lineups for tonight's game:

The New York State Athletic Commission has renewed Max Baer's license and okayed a Baer-Pastor bout. The affair, which is slated for March 19, will be in the nature of a rubber, as both boys have been beaten by Joe Louis.

Bob only weighs 180 pounds, but what he lacks in avoirdupois he expects to make up in speed if they bank the turns.

Max has done nothing to show that he is any better than he was when Braddock and Louis took him to the cleaners. But he may have lost the habit of cocking his right and telegraphing the bad news of the impending disaster.

Max says he welcomes a match with Bob Pastor, as he needs a sparring partner. But you know Max is such a kidder that he sometimes even kids himself.

Wrestling Promoter Packs' Aid Licensed as Boxing Matchmaker

Larry Atkins, of the publicity staff of Tom Packs, wrestling promoter, has been named boxing matchmaker for the Fred W. Stockham Post of the American Legion, which is to re-enter the field of professional boxing with a show at the Auditorium in about three weeks. Thereafter it is planned to hold a show once a month when nationally known boxers are available.

Atkins has been in the boxing game in Cleveland, Chicago and St. Louis for a number of years and most recently was associated with Lew Raymond in the promotion of his shows at the Auditorium.

Raymond's last performance was headed by Henry Armstrong and Tony Chavez, Dec. 3, a contest which Chavez won on a foul. In a return match in Los Angeles, Armstrong knocked out Chavez.

Raymond in New Orleans.

There were charges after the performance here that some of the boxers had to take reductions in their purses, although in the year prior to that show Raymond and his associates had conducted many successful programs at the Auditorium, attracting nearly 100,000 persons.

Raymond has not run since and recently departed from St. Louis with the announced intention of going to New York to try to line up some shows for this spring. However, New Orleans papers within the past two weeks have carried photographs of Raymond with Martin Burke, promoter of that city, with the statement that Raymond planned to form an alliance with Burke for the promotion of boxing in New Orleans.

Thus Atkins seems to step into the place vacated by Raymond and it is expected, will receive the support of Packs, who has not been active in boxing here since 1929 when he promoted the Benny Bass-Eddie Shea bout at the Arena. After that wrestling boomed here to such an extent that Packs paid no attention to boxing.

Mention of Barney Ross.

Jackie Callahan has been promoting contests at the Coliseum this winter and has done very well with modest shows, although he has made no effort as yet to get boxers of the caliber of those who performed for Raymond.

Charles W. Pian, acting boxing commissioner here, stated that he approved Atkins' application for a license as matchmaker and that he plans a conference with him in the next day or two relative to his first date.

Atkins said he had been seeking John Henry Lewis, Henry Armstrong, Barney Ross or Maxie Rosenbloom for contests here.

There had been a report that Joe Louis probably would be seen in St. Louis this spring and some of Louis' handlers said Packs would be the promoter. That was before the contract with Braddock for the championship match in Chicago, June 22, was made.

Since then it has been stated that Louis will not box a man of any merit before the Braddock bout, although he may appear in exhibitions once a month. That is taken to mean that Louis will not be sought for a serious contest here.

COURT SCANDAL, A WHITNEY CASTOFF, WINS $20,000 STAKE

COLT SOLD FEW HOURS PRIOR TO THE FLAMINGO PAYS $93 FOR $2

Son of Royal Minstrel, Well Ridden, Taken From Far Back to Outside by Steffen, Victor by Nose.

By the Associated Press.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Feb. 27.—Charging from out of the pack like a gray ghost in the last sixteenth of a mile, Court Scandal electrified a record crowd by snatching victory right on the wire in the first running of the Flamingo Stakes here today. The light coated son of Royal Minstrel-The Colonel's Lady barely overtook Miss Mary Hirsch's No Sir to win by a nose and paid his few backers $93.70 for a $2 straight ticket.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's entry of Eli Yale and Tattered, favorite in the field of 10 topnotch three-year-olds, finished third and fourth, respectively. Eli Yale was beaten a length for the place while heading his highly regarded stablemate.

The fates played an unkind trick on John Hay Whitney, New York racing commissioner and sportsman. Court Scandal, until today his property, this morning was sold to Townsend B. Martin of Westbury, L. I. Mr. Whitney, out at Santa Anita to watch his Mr. Bones perform in the rich Santa Anita Handicap, negotiated the private sale through his trainer, "Big Jim" Healy, who made the deal in his employer's absence.

$20,900 to New Owner.

Court Scandal won a purse of $20,900 and ran the mile and a furlong in 1:49 3-5 under 120 pounds, which included the veteran Earl Steffen.

While the defeat of Tattered was a disappointment, the altogether miserable effort of Dewitt Page's second choice, Maedic, was even more of a surprise and a shock. The hero of Saratoga, which recently ran a remarkable race to win in his winter debut, broke slowly, was last to the stretch, then could catch only two tired-out horses.

Goes to the Outside.

Steffen rode Court Scandal with excellent judgment. He had the Martin colorbearer running smoothly and on the outside, clear of interference and waiting behind the leaders, prepared to strike when ready. Rudie, Eli Yale, Fencing and Dellor were the leaders to the home lane. No Sir made a spurt from the top of the stretch that carried him into brief and narrow supremacy entering the final sixteenth of a mile. Jack Westrope was pushing the gelding hard and young Miss Hirsch, first woman to receive a trainer's license from the New York Jockey Club, must have looked on believing her greatest thrill was at hand. Then came the totally unexpected and belated rush of Court Scandal and the resultant nerve-tingling triumph that astounded the huge throng. Eli Yale just lasted to beat the slow-starting Tattered.

Better Watch Out, Mr. Trout!

Piscatorial forecasters predict that at least 5000 flies will be cast upon Missouri waters at 6:30 tomorrow morning when reports from wardens' pistols will announce the opening of a new season on Salmo shasta—rainbow trout to the non-scientific.

Despite the fact that the inaugural falls on Monday, many reservations have been received by hotel keepers and park superintendents at Montauk, Roaring River and Bennett Spring, the three principal trout waters of the State.

Nothing could be done by Commissioner Wilbur C. Buford of the Game & Fish Department to alter the starting date from Monday to Sunday, in answer to demands from anglers who find it impossible to push work aside in favor of fishing. "The Legislature sets the opening and closing dates; my department only enforces them," was Buford's statement to disappointed Walkonians.

Gov. Lloyd C. Stark will cast his fly upon the water at Bennett Spring Park in Dallas and Laclede counties where in the past he often has tried his luck. The Governor is an ardent fly-fisherman and is one of many who believe that dough balls and hamburger should not be allowed as bait for game fish.

It is against the law to use any bait except flies in those areas of the State parks which are marked, "For fly-fishing only," and violators are subject to punishment for trespassing when using any other lures.

Better Fishing Looked For.

Officials promise the best fishing in several years at Bennett Spring State Park because of the constant improvements made by CCC boys and the enlargement of the fish hatchery, which has been in continuous operation for over a quarter of a century.

Roaring River State Park is the popular Missouri fishing stream for Oklahoma, Kansas and Arkansas fishermen although many from Kansas City, Springfield and St. Louis areas also make an annual pilgrimage to the Barry County fishing district. Here is ample fly fishing, as well as lakes and streams where meat and dough balls may be used without fear of violating any laws. A State hatchery and rearing ponds keep this area well stocked with Rainbows.

Montauk Park probably is less better known than the two above mentioned because the trout are a little wilder and more cagey than the average fisherman cares for.

Here the water remains at a fairly even temperature the year around. Game fish have difficulty living in waters when the temperature falls below 40 degrees or rises above 68. Montauk waters remain between 57 and 60 degrees. Plenty of natural protection for the fish gives the light tackle fisherman all the sport he wants.

Rainbow Our Only Trout.

The rainbow trout which was introduced to Missouri from the tributaries of the Sacramento River over 50 years ago, is the only species of the trout family being propagated in the State today. The rainbow may be identified by its comparatively short, deep body, short head, smaller mouth reaching scarcely beyond the eye; distinctly but no strongly forked caudal or tail fin and most of all by the brilliantly tinted scales down each side.

It feeds on small fishes, insects, their larva, flies and worms. It spawns during the winter, the female depositing 500 to 3000 eggs each season, each about one-sixth inch in diameter and nearly round and of a light straw or salmon color. In 1921 the State began artificial propagation in the Sequiota hatchery.

Joe Green, State game warden, announced a few simple rules for fishing within any of the State parks. Even though the law exempts women and minors from having licenses to fish elsewhere, a legal permit must be in the possession of every person fishing in the State parks; fishing licenses cost $1 for county residents not going outside that county, $2.50 for a State-wide permit or $1 for a 15-day non-resident trip license. The daily limit is 10 fish not less than eight inches in length. Not over 10 pounds of fish may be taken each day between sunrise and sundown; the trout season will remain open until Nov. 1.

Those wishing to make future reservations at one of the State parks are advised to correspond with the following, according to an announcement by the State Game and Fish Department.

Bennett Spring State Park, Broce, Mo., William J. McIntyre, park keeper; R. U. Kaffenberger, hotel and store operator.

Roaring River State Park, Cassville, Mo., Hugh Brixey, park keeper and hotel, cabin and dining hall operator.

Montauk State Park, Montauk, Mo., George Barnes, park keeper, and Mrs. T. H. Young, hotel operator.

Being a State park it is necessary to bid on and award concessions for the various privileges. The above named have been awarded those privileges.

Skeet Association Plans.

As an answer to a challenge made some time ago by groups who were opposed to the N. S. S. A. (National Skeet Shooting Association), taking full charge of the promotion of the sport, that body issued statements during the past week to all state associations and to all registered skeeters that a detailed report as to receipts and disbursements was being made public as well as changes in the administration of the association.

It is planned to allow the executive committee of each state to appoint, or member clubs of the state to elect some person to membership on the National Skeet Advisory Council, this Council to dispose of questions which will arise in the future as well as problems now pending. These members should be selected by March 15.

The Missouri State Field Trials Association will conduct the annual spring puppy bird dog trials at Sturgeon (Mo.) Sunday, April 11, according to secretary, Dr. F. B. Riley of Moberly, Mo., who is now accepting entries.

Junior and senior puppy stakes are confined to members and dogs must be handled by amateurs; open stakes will be open to anyone paying an entry fee of $5 per dog with 30 per cent of the purse deducted for running expenses and the balance divided 50-30-20.

The Dent County Field Trial Association has set Sunday, March 14, as the date for the running of the Spring trials. These trials are open to dogs of all ages and will be run in 30-minute heats.

The course to be followed will be the same as that used by the Association at previous trials, along the Meramec River Valley, starting at the U. S. Clark farm on Highway 32, which is eight miles east of Salem, running south along side Old Highway 72.

The mutuels paid: Court Scandal, win $93.70, place $35.50, show $13. No, Sir, place $5.70, show $3.70. Eli Yale, show $3.40.

Court Scandal perfectly ridden. He was rated along in early running with boy holding him in restraint but at the far turn he began to make up ground. Boy took him to the outside and clear of all interference, closed gradually and wore down No Sir to win in final stride. No Sir well ridden. He was allowed to gallop along in comfortable position, made his move around turn, closed fast but hung right at end when challenged. Eli Yale broke good, was steadied along while forcing the pace, made a determined bid in stretch but weakened suddenly. Tattered broke slow as usual, worked his way up, was taken wide in stretch and finished with a rush. Dellor well up from the start, saved ground entering stretch but stopped badly in the final furlong. Fencing was hustled along from the start, displayed keen speed but was done for at the end of seven furlongs. Sceneshifter never a factor. Maedic broke slow, lacked speed and never threatened. He was a distanced trailer at end. Rudie had speed for six furlongs then curled up. Uneasy was outclassed.

St. Louisans Go To Annual Yale Prom

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 27.

MORE than 25 St. Louis undergraduates, some of them escorting girl visitors here for the week-end and others in the long stag line, mingled with 2400 guests in Woolsey Hall last night for Yale's annual junior prom, the largest social event of the school year.

Prom festivities began yesterday with tea dances in club and fraternity houses with nationally known orchestras from New York and Boston playing. Later the Yale Glee Club gave its prom concert in Sprague Memorial Hall, and preceding the dance President and Mrs. James Rowland Angell gave their annual dinner in honor of the prom committee, whose chairman this year was George Haines Weed of Savannah, Ga. Floor manager was Clinton Edward Frank of Evanston, Ill., whose guest was Miss Frances Price of Winnetka.

Mr. Weed and his guest, Miss Hester Reed, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lansing Parmalee Reed of New York, led the grand march, which began at 10:15, and after the third dance the old ceremony of the wooden spoon, in existence since 1848, was enacted. The spoon, three feet long, was presented by last year's prom chairman to the head of this year's committee, although in earlier days it was given to the junior with lowest grades.

Some of the St. Louis men entertained young women from their home city, others invited girls from the East, and a few St. Louisans were invited to be guests of Yale students from other cities.

Pairs of St. Louisans included Miss Frances Catlin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theron Catlin, with Dwight Filley Wear; Miss Nancy Houser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Douglas B. Houser and a student at the Stuart School, Boston, with Howard V. Stephens Jr.; Miss Suzanne White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David B. White, who attends the Bennett School, Millbrook, N. Y., with John Langford Taylor; Miss Betty Seward Hulburd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Earl Hulburd, with Elihu Hyndman; Miss Betty Hoerr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland M. Hoerr and also a Bennett School student, with Everett Hamilton; Sally Bridge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Leighton Bridge, with Paul Bailey Jamison Jr.; Miss Elizabeth Lockett of Kirkwood, with Roger Endicott Lord Jr., and Miss Adele Baur, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Baur, who attends Knox School, Cooperstown, N. Florida Season at Peak, Gay With Parties for Winter Colony

By W. E. REYBURN
Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 27.

THE Washington's birthday ball, the thirtieth annual regatta which also recurs on Washington's birthday, and the ninth annual flower show were leading social events of the week.

The ball, more brilliant than its predecessors since the demolition of the old Royal Poincianna Hotel where the party was formerly held, took place at the Everglades Club. Special red and white decorations were put up for the occasion, and guests wore appropriate costumes.

A variety of craft designed for speed dotted choppy Lake Worth for the regatta. Dr. R. H. Herman of Cincinnati set a new world's record in the hydroplane class; Gar Wood Jr. won the outboard race, class A, and John Charles Thomas, noted singer and sportsman, won the Henry L. Doherty trophy for the second time.

The flower show, sponsored by the Palm Beach Garden Club, drew large groups of Florida travelers to the horticultural exhibits, in which the medieval garden of Mrs. Daniel J. McCarthy and the Georgian garden of Mrs. Hugh Dillman were outstanding.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Prufrock gave a luncheon at the Breakers in honor of St. Louis friends who are garden show enthusiasts. Among the guests from the vicinity were Mr. and Mrs. Roland Kahle, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Kahle, Mr. and Mrs. George Edmund Mackey (Cornelia Materne), Mrs. H. H. Culver, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Valier and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Liese, all of whom are visiting in Palm Beach, and Mr. and Mrs. John B. Strauch, Mrs. Gale F. Johnston and her father, Frank C. Rand, and Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Tralles, all from Miami Beach. After lunch the entire party viewed the exhibits at the Royal Poincianna conservatories.

Mrs. Lelia Chopin Hattersley, a former St. Louisan now living in New York, is here for the winter.

Mrs. Lawrence A. Furlong and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. David R. Calhoun, were recent hostesses at a spaghetti dinner at Mrs. Furlong's winter home, Villa Mariette, on Sunset avenue.

In the tennis round robin of the Bath and Tennis Club, Mrs. Furlong and her partner, E. L. Schmidt took second place.

J. Terry West, formerly of St. Louis, and Mrs. West, were recent guests at the Orange Gardens of the Everglades Club at a cocktail party given by Col. and Mrs. Wade H. Carpenter. Mr. and Mrs. West were among the week's luncheon hosts and hostesses at the Gulf Stream Club, and also gave a dinner at their winter home, Villa Tramonto, before Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Dillman's musicale at the Everglades Club. St. Louisans Attend Bryn Mawr Meeting

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.

ST. LOUIS graduates of Bryn Mawr College have been here for several days for the alumnae council meeting which convened Thursday. Among them are Miss Ethel Chouteau Dyer and Miss Mary Bolland Taussig, for whom private parties were given.

Miss Dyer, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Chouteau Dyer, is appearing in Washington this week in "Pride and Prejudice," in which she played in St. Louis recently. Yesterday afternoon she was the guest of Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes and Miss Olivia Stokes, wife and daughter of the Canon of the Washington Cathedral, at a large tea which they gave in connection with the meeting. Miss Dyer was graduated from Bryn Mawr in 1931, following her debut in St. Louis. She was a classmate of Miss Stokes, Mrs. John Farr Simmons, the former Miss Caroline Thompson, and Mrs. Jameson Parker of Baltimore, the former Miss Sydney Sullivan, daughter of Mark Sullivan, whom she visited frequently in Washington during her undergraduate days.

She was here a year ago when the play opened in the capital before going to New York. Last May she was granted a leave of absence to return to Bryn Mawr and appear in the May day fete.

Miss Taussig, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Fred J. Taussig, is the guest of Miss Elizabeth Morrison, who has visited her in St. Louis, and Miss Sara Jenkins Smith, who gave a cocktail party in her honor this afternoon.

Dean Helen Taft Manning of Byrn Mawr, in Washington for the sessions, is the guest of her mother, Mrs. William Howard Taft.

Hitchcocks Leave for East.

Miss Betty Hitchcock and her father, George C. Hitchcock, 5363 Waterman avenue, left this morning for a series of visits in the East. Miss Hitchcock will visit with college friends at Vassar, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and later will be the guest of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Homer White, of Ipswich, Mass. Before returning the end of March she will also visit friends in Boston. Mr. Hitchcock plans to return to St. Louis in about two weeks.

The marriage will take place Saturday evening, April 3, at 8:30 o'clock at the Pilgrim Congregational Church. Following the ceremony a reception for the families and a few close friends will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Birge. After their wedding trip the young pair will live at 625 Westwood drive.

The first pre-wedding party in honor of Miss Birge and Mr. Woodward was given last night by Mrs. Thomas T. Poleman, 6315 Waterman boulevard, at 8:30 o'clock at her home. Guests included members of both families.

USEPPA ISLAND, off the coast of Florida, is to be the winter home of several St. Louis families for the next few weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Elzey G. Varied List Of Activities During Lent Lectures at Junior League, College and Woman's Clubs—Parties for Visitor —Art Alliance Sale.

AT Junior League headquarters, 4932 Maryland avenue, where Monday morning lectures have been held for several weeks, preparations are being made for the appearance of Thomas Hart Benton, whose murals in the Capitol at Jefferson City are the subject of much discussion. Mr. Benton, who has not yet notified the league of his subject, will speak to subscribers of the lecture course a week from tomorrow, at 11 a. m.

Artist members of the league are concerning themselves with the regional conference which opens tomorrow for a two-day session in Lincoln, Neb., where samples of their work—painting, both oils and water color, sculpture, photography and handicraft—winners in a recent contest held here, will compete for national recognition. Winning subjects at Lincoln will be sent to Chicago in May for the convention of Associated Junior Leagues of America, in which they will be judged in a display of similar work from all over the country.

Mrs. Warren B. Lammert, chairman of the Arts and Interests Committee of the St. Louis league, under whose auspices the competition is held, left yesterday with Mrs. Joseph V. Quarles Jr., to attend the regional conference.

Meanwhile, members of the board of directors of the St. Louis Art Alliance are looking for "white elephants"—articles ranging from objets d'art of which their present owners have grown tired, to curtains, wearing apparel and broken bits of china—to be sold Wednesday, Thursday and Friday in the Chase Building, which also houses the Junior League. Funds from the sale will be given to worthy art students in St. Louis to assist them in obtaining materials and paying their tuition for study. In similar sales conducted annually for several years, proceeds have been devoted to traveling scholarships in foreign art schools.

White elephants will be called for and delivered to the sales room by members of the committee and officers of the Art Alliance, of which Mrs. G. Hayward Niedringhaus is president. Other members are Mrs. Henry M. Cook, Mrs. Asa B. Wallace, Mrs. Mahlon B. Wallace Jr., Mrs. I. A. Stevens, Mrs. Meyric Rogers, Mrs. Charles L. Russell, Miss Martha Love and Miss Martha Pettus. Dean Edmund H. Wuerpel of the St. Louis School of Fine Arts is a member ex-officio.

Pilgrims to the garden festival in Natchez, Miss., March 14 to 21, when ante-bellum homes will be on public view, are interested in the coming visit of Mrs. Balfour Miller, originator of the pilgrimage. Mrs. Miller will arrive Tuesday to be the guest of Mrs. Marie Reine Fuzz de Penaloza, 1 Allen place, Ferguson. At noon that day she will be entertained at luncheon at the Coronado Hotel by Mrs. W. K. Massey, and at night at a dinner given by Mrs. de Penaloza's daughter, Mrs. Hubertus Schotten.

At 3:30 o'clock Tuesday night Mrs. Miller will lecture on the Natchez gardens at the Coronado Hotel under the auspices of The Readers, a literary organization formed for the benefit of the library of the Maryville College of the Sacred Heart. She has also been invited to meet the faculty and the student body of the college Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Massey is the club president, and the lecture committee comprises Mrs. Lucien Roy, chairman; Mrs. Schotten, Miss Delphine Polk and Miss Dorothea Warner.

An outstanding feature of the week at the College Club, 5428 Delmar boulevard, to which members may bring guests, is a lecture to be given Tuesday afternoon by Dr. Magda de Spur, vice-president of the Hungarian Association of University Women. Dr. de Spur is visiting in this country as chairman of the central organizing committee for International Women's Week, which is to be held in Budapest Aug. 5 to 12. In her lecture, which is scheduled for 3:30 o'clock, she will discuss "The New States and Their Women." She will illustrate the lecture with photographs.

Thursday luncheons and varied Lenten entertainments at the St. Louis Woman's Club are drawing several hundred members and their guests to the clubhouse, 4600 Lindell boulevard, each week.

Only two of the series remain—a musicale by the Monticello Trio next Thursday and a travelogue of a North Cape cruise the following week. The trio consists of the following members of the Monticello College music department — Miss Miriam Jones, pianist; Miss Mary Elizabeth Jones, violinist, and Homer Ulrich, head of the department, 'cellist. Their program, to be played at 2 o'clock following luncheon, will include a Beethoven trio and theme and variations of Tschaikowsky's Trio in A Minor.

WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—

THERE will be "no gentlemen and no reporters present" at the annual Stunt Party dinner of the Women's National Press Club at the Willard Hotel Monday night. Noted women guests from all parts of the country as well as Washington will attend and Mrs. Roosevelt will be the guest of honor.

Perhaps the busiest of all the Press Club members just now are Miss Mary Hornaday, the president, one of the staff of the Christian Science Monitor Bureau; Miss Martha Strayer, of the Washington Daily News, general chairman of the entertainment committee for the party, and Mrs. Edwin Silver, chairman of the seating committee.

The list of honor guests this year is a particularly notable one.

Washington is taking up "The Suzy-Q," the new dance which has New York in its thrall. Those who attended parties given in Gotham recently by Mme. Raimund von Hofmannstahl, formerly Miss Alice Muriel Astor, sister of Vincent Astor, saw the dance demonstrated by some of the guests.

In passing, it might be remarked that this truck dance has weird rhythm hard for the average dancer to master. Mme. von Hofmannstahl has been an enthusiastic dancer for years and it is recalled that in the days when society grew excited over the turkey trot, and the glide and dip fad it was the graceful Astor heiress who led in these steps in New York's Four Hundred and later introduced them to her European friends.

In those days, Joseph H. Davies, now American Ambassador to Russia, and other Democrats of the Wilson administration, put aside official cares once a week to join a dancing class at the New Willard Hotel. Justice McReynolds at one time was a favorite dancing partner of Washington belles, while all the dancing set of the national capital knew that the late Chief Justice William Howard Taft was "light on his feet" and graceful.

In this Wilson administration class also were former Secretary of War and Mrs. Newton D. Baker, and the world war commandant of the United States Marine Corps and Mrs. George Barnett.

Unless Congress has an exciting protracted debate over the Supreme Court issue it is likely that a number of Washingtonians will begin their London season early by going to the Coronation festivities. During midseason in London, so many Washingtonians appear at fashionable functions it almost seems as if it were a gathering in the United States own capital.

News that Miss Louise Boyd is heading another expedition into the Arctic reminds us that Miss Boyd is the possessor of a coveted citation from the American Geographical Society for her achievements in penetrating further into the North than any other woman. Miss Boyd is a member of the Society of Woman Geographers of which, incidentally, Mrs. Herbert Hoover is also a member.

The national president of this organization of women explorers and geographers is Mrs. Mary Vaux Walcott, glacial botanist and painter.

FOR A PERFECT MANICURE
— YOU NEED THIS
Satinizing Lotion

When you completely manicure your nails, you may have your hands in water as many as four times. That causes your skin to lose its natural oil, tends to make your nails brittle.

Hundreds of women and girls have discovered that it is a real help to use Chamberlain's Lotion immediately after a manicure. Chamberlain's Lotion refreshes the skin, makes it smoother and more attractive, helps prevent hangnails, helps keep the cuticle soft, the nails less breakable.

It is convenient to use too, for Chamberlain's Lotion dries quickly, is never sticky, greasy or gummy. And, you can not only use it to keep your nails and hands attractive, but wherever your skin may become irritated and rough. Try Chamberlain's Lotion. Once you do, you'll use it not only for the finishing touch to a pleasing manicure, but in many other ways. At all toilet goods counters. Chamberlain Laboratories, Inc., Des Moines, Iowa.

CENTURY-OLD FUND STILL PROVIDES BRIDES' DOWRIES

Money Set Aside by Julian Poydras Furnished 28 Marriage Portions in 1937.

By the Associated Press.

BATON ROUGE, La., Feb. 27. — Funds which Julian Poydras set aside a century ago have provided dowries for 28 brides of 1937. Poydras, a Breton sailor and poet who became one of the wealthiest planters of the Fausse Riviere section, is buried at New Roads, La.

Interest from $30,000 which he left is distributed annually among young women of Louisiana's West Baton Rouge Parish for marriage portions. As a matter of courtesy to recipients, parish officials never disclose the amount the brides receive.

It is generally accepted that Poydras was in love as a young man with a girl who refused to marry him because she had no dowry.

Each Week-Day in the POST-DISPATCH

HAVEN'T YOU DREAMED OF GOING ABROAD?
YOU CAN DO IT FOR THE COST OF A THREE-WEEK VACATION AT HOME!

Paris and an International Exposition . . . London . . . the gay capitals of Europe . . . ancient castles . . . quaint peasants . . . historic countrysides . . . these are things that every one should see at least once in a lifetime.

And it's so easy! It has all been worked out so that you can do it with a minimum of expense and time. Any Travel Agent will gladly help you arrange a fascinating trip, via French Line, which will prove one of the most pleasant, educational and interesting experiences you have ever had.

For as little as $300 you can sail over and back on a luxurious French Line ship, and visit the following places—all in the space of three weeks:

You go over via French Line . . . for its speed and safety . . . its airy, spacious cabins . . . and its superb food (wine included with every meal). You'll meet so many interesting people that you'll almost be sorry when the voyage is over.

Two hours after landing, you'll be strolling through Rouen, the ancient capital of Normandy . . . quaint medieval houses . . . a lacy cathedral spire . . . Joan of Arc's prison . . . memories of Corneille and Flaubert . . . and all around, an exciting new environment!

You'll see the rich Norman countryside . . . Bayeux and the great tapestry of the Conquest . . . Caen . . . Lisieux . . . have a delicious luncheon at a wayside inn, set in an entrancing garden . . . and then on to Paris and an attractive little hotel, modern but inexpensive.

You'll see Paris! Notre Dame and Napoleon's Tomb . . . the Boulevards and the Champs Elysées . . . Montmartre and the Latin Quarter . . . and some new places you'll discover for yourselves. This year a brilliant International Exposition presents Paris at its best.

The Short, Boxy Topcoat Promises to Catch Fancy Of Feminine St. Louis

Already Seen in Various Versions About Town, It Will Be Out in Large Numbers This Spring.

By SYLVIA STILES

THE short boxy topcoat which goes by various names from baby swagger to a "jigger," depending upon the choice of the wearer, promises to catch the popular fancy and be out in large numbers to greet the spring. It is seen about town now in various versions of which the plaid variety is the most striking and the gray tweed models the most tailored.

The "jigger" coat takes a welcoming bow along with the bolero, the peplum basque and the printed frock which are the early spring favorites in St. Louis. Its youthfulness doubtless will be responsible for its continued success even though those capes that New York is said to be wild about gain friends farther West, and the English draped two-piecer is the accepted suit uniform.

A clever version of the topper was worn on a recent evening by Miss Rosemary Newman, a Maryville College student. This was part of an ensemble consisting of dress and jacket rather than being a three-piece wardrobe type of suit. A novelty black woolen plaided with red and green lines fashioned the short, boxy coat which had the trim shoulder line and narrow collar associated with the new styles. The one-piece frock was of black woolen which repeated the red and green by the use of brick colored yarn woven into the material to trim pockets and neckline. A narrow belt of black patent leather contributed smartness to the ensemble as did a black felt hat brightened with a touch of red.

The bolero theme was indorsed by another Maryville student, Miss Henrietta Schlesinger, whose black crepe frock was topped by a bolero of aquamarine colored faille. Five rows of cording trimmed the curved front of the bolero and also adorned the short puffed sleeves. The frock, an afternoon type suitable for informal evening wear, introduced cap sleeves of aqua lace, and the blue faille sash which was tied with long ends at the side was finished with a wide edging of the lace. Miss Schlesinger's hat was a close-fitting toque of black grosgrain with a novel bow arrangement of the ribbon at the front. Her pumps were of the sandal type.

Navy blue is a certain favorite of the springtime and looks especially interesting when combined this year with any beige tone, whether of the very pale shade or a deeper golden tint. Miss Beverly Buerlot was noted in the same gathering of attractively dressed young college girls in a blue crepe peplum frock trimmed with very light beige of banana or eggshell cast. The light tone was used as a heavy cording to edge the flaring peplum and the front of the blouse which fastened with covered buttons. The skirt introduced godets at the back to provide low fullness and a swinging hemline. Worn with this was a little off-the-face hat of navy crepe which added a saucy, flaring veil.

—o-o—

THE BLACK FROCK which depends upon white lingerie touches or a bright spot of color for its interest is especially popular at this time of year when between-season wardrobes are a fashion difficulty. I saw Mary Elizabeth O'Neal wearing one of the former type — the white embroidered organdie forming an entire panel at the front from neckline to hemline. Miss Helen Jane Collins, who accompanied her, was in a good-looking black frock which had a vivid red sash tied at the front as the color accent.

—o-o—

AMONG youthfully becoming evening frocks, two that merit special comment include the flower printed satin gown of Miss Charlotte Perabo and the black taffeta dress of Miss Judith Meiser. Both had back interest and covered shoulders, the satin frock having a sash tied in a bouffant bow at the back, while the black taffeta frock introduced a bustle back. The surface of the crisp black fabric was dotted with metal and velvet discs which gave it additional charm.

—o-o—

WITH COLOR of such interest in fashions of the moment, any shade which is different from the ordinary is certain to bring admiration. Raspberry is one of these and is especially flattering for evening wear when created in crisp taffeta. Mrs. Vernon Wells demonstrated the beauty of the color and material in the evening gown which she wore for dancing at the M. A. A. It was designed along Empire lines, the bodice cut with a square neckline at the front and a deep V at the back, and the short sleeves puffed at the shoulders. Matching velvet ribbon circled upward above the waistline at the front, edging the upward swing of the skirt, while a wide band of the velvet ribbon finished the hemline.

—o-o—

CORONATION blue has appeared with sufficient frequency in the advance spring fashions to prove its importance in the mode. It is liked in solid-colored fabrics for daytime or evening dresses, for suits and for printed frocks. Favorite alliances are black and dark red. By combining the blue with a British red, wearers are doing as much to recognize their acceptance of the British trend as when they wear crown or thistle prints.

—o-o—

A GOOD-LOOKING crepe frock of the coronation blue tone was worn by Mrs. Maizie McCormick at a bridge party recently. Interest was divided between the neckline and the hemline. A fluting of white lace edged the neckline, which fastened high with a band of the crepe that was looped and tied. The skirt was finished at the hemline with fabric ornamentation arranged in a scalloped formation. Coronation blue and red ostrich tips trimmed a black close-fitting hat worn with this dress, and accessories were black.

—o-o—

AT A LITTLE THEATER performance one of the most smartly dressed matrons was Mrs. E. E. Pearcy, whose frock of black crepe was printed with widely spaced flower clusters that were quite large and brilliant. The bodice had the new V line at the front and fastened high at the back, where it was slashed at the center. Sleeves were draped to give shoulder fullness and were tight-fitting where they ended above the elbows. The skirt extended to a point above the waistline at the front and had greater fullness at the back, which was slightly more than floor length. A large corsage of flowers cut from the print adorned the waistline at the side front.

In the same group was Miss Aida Mayhew, whose dinner type of black crepe frock followed the two-piece mode. Bands of cartridge pleating finished the cap sleeves and there was a similar band to edge the peplum. Bodice fullness was placed high at the front by means of deep pleats at the shoulder line. A quilted collar of white hammered satin stood out like a ruch to frame the face. With this frock the wearer chose a close-fitting hat of black grosgrain adorned with a brilliant pin.

MISS DIETRICH WITH HER HUSBAND RUDOLPH SIEBER, CENTER, AND JOSEPH VON STERNBERG.

THE GLAMOROUS MISS DIETRICH OF TODAY

"The STORY of MY LIFE"

Told by Marlene Dietrich In a Series of Interviews With a Noted British Novelist.

By CHARLES GRAVES

LONDON, England.

MARLENE Dietrich's recollections of her early life are fascinating, and later on I am going to reveal them in her own words, but I think the most interesting place to begin her story of her life is with her discovery by Joseph Von Sternberg. The circumstances have never been told before.

She was playing a straight part in a Max Reinhardt production in Berlin on the night when Von Sternberg first saw her.

The first she knew of it was a message telling her to go out to the Ufa Studios to discuss a part in "The Blue Angel," which Von Sternberg was to direct, with Emil Jannings as the star.

"I was not very much interested as I had played small parts and did not like myself on the screen," Marlene said. She was curled up, in white satin trousers, in her Grosvenor Square apartment, where white predominates in the decorations, as she recalled that interview.

"I presumed that I was going to be given a small part.

"When Mr. Von Sternberg said to me, 'You will play the woman,' I got up at once. 'I'm terribly sorry,' I said, 'but I'm not good in films. I look horrid. I couldn't possibly play the leading part.'

"'But you are going to play the part,' he said. I smiled and went home.

"He telephoned again. 'Learn a vulgar song for your test tomorrow,' he told me.

"I came without a song. I did not bother, you see. I never expected to get the job.

"Mr. Von Sternberg insisted I must sing something. I have always adored American gramophone records, so I said I would sing 'You're the Cream in My Coffee.' The test was taken."

It was Lucy Mannheim the producer, Eric Pommer, wanted for the role. Lucy was given a test. She brought a new song. One line in it was all Von Sternberg liked about the test. He had the composer write a number based on that line—"Falling in Love Again."

Emil Jannings and everyone else, except Von Sternberg, wanted to give Mannheim the part. Von Sternberg said he would go straight back to the United States if Dietrich did not get the role. Pommer gave in.

Dietrich made the picture for $5000. Today she gets $200,000 a picture, and $20,000 a week overtime after 12 weeks. In 1935, Paramount paid her close to $400,000.

It was lucky for her that her stamina has always been marvelous, for she worked at the theater every night, and by day had to make both the German and English versions.

Then Schulberg, the production head of Paramount, arrived from Hollywood, looking for talent.

"He offered a contract, but I could not make up my mind. There was my little daughter, Maria, to think of, and I did not know if I would like America. So Schulberg left, and I had no offer from anyone for a long time—not even from Ufa; they had not enough confidence in me.

"It was not until much later that Mr. Von Sternberg persuaded Paramount to put in a clause that if I did not like America I could come back after six months. So finally I went to Hollywood.

"Everything was beautiful. But then Mr. von Sternberg can throw you up to the heavens and make you feel like a queen in a minute. He is a wonderful man. I love him deeply."

"What about his being your Svengali?" I asked.

"I only wish he had been. It would have been so very exciting," she replied.

Dietrich said Svengali with a delicious snigger and that characteristic droop of the corners of the mouth which has a world of meaning.

"I was always hiding behind Mr. von Sternberg," she continued. "People said that I was entirely under his influence. 'Oh, how he treats that poor woman,' they said when he once made me do 30 'takes' of one scene.

"That was so silly. He insists on perfection, and so when I was stupid he made me go on until I had got it right.

"For a long time he did not want to direct me—for the last four years, in fact; but I kept on persuading him.

"At last I realized that he really resented it, so I did not beg him any more. I would love to be in one of his pictures again. I would not mind even a very small part."

Since this conversation, she has persuaded Von Sternberg to direct her again.

—o-o—

"WHAT does Mr. von Sternberg think of me?" she said. "Well, the other day they pinned him down and finally he said: 'My opinion of her is in my work.' Wasn't that a wonderful compliment? I could not have been happier.

Marlene Dietrich spoke like a small girl who was repeating how her teacher had thrown a kind word at her.

I asked Marlene why, if she did not like publicity, she wore trousers, presuming that that could be the only reason why she wore them.

She was most indignant, and looked more beautiful than ever.

"I like trousers," she said. "You do not realize that Hollywood is in the country and everybody wears trousers. It just so happens that they pinned the fashion on me.

"I used to wear trousers in the house, even in Germany. They save so much trouble. See, I can sit how I like."

She laughed, and sat up in her armchair.

"And, anyway, men's suits are never out of style, whereas women's fashions change every five minutes. That saves me lots of time, and I am lazy.

"I never do anything for publicity. For one thing, you never know how it will turn out. I am so used to trousers now in Hollywood that it is quite strange seeing women walking about in skirts for the first two or three days when one goes into town. Of course, you must have the trousers cut very well."

Hers were a credit to her Hollywood tailor.

"And another thing," said Dietrich, "some critic has been saying that I should not go to premieres because there are such crowds of people, and that it is just asking for trouble.

"It is ridiculous. When I was a little girl I used to love seeing the film stars arriving. Why shouldn't the public also have fun? After all, it is only a second from the car to the theater, and, anyway, there are always police to keep back the crowds.

"As a matter of fact I don't mind large crowds. It is the boys chasing one for autographs that are tiresome."

I suggested that she was looking slimmer in her last picture, and asked if it had anything to do with some clause in her contract about her weight.

"There is no such clause in any contract anywhere," she said. "If I am thinner it is because I have to get up at 6 a. m. and only have time for a glass of orange juice before going to the studio.

"Then I am hard at work all the morning. At lunch time there are all kinds of fittings, which gives one no time to eat properly. And at night when I get back I am so tired that I have no appetite.

"Film actresses, you know, have to work hard. People may say that we earn too much money; they forget that life on the screen is very short.

"Besides, in California, we have to pay 65 cents in every dollar we earn in income tax; and look at the cost of living out there!"

Marlene Dietrich has a laugh which is all the more fascinating because it has never been revealed on the screen. I asked why.

She shrugged her shoulders. "Because it has never been in the script," she said. "Good comedy is not easy to find."

When she laughs, she throws her head forward, and the mass of auburn red curls reveals the beauty of her neck. Her eyes can hold an infinity of restrained merriment.

You should see her at a wrestling match. She only goes in order to laugh. She told me so.

She smokes too much, of course, but it never seems to affect that alluring voice.

How detached she can appear! "I have no moods," she said to me. "I am like a man in that way."

—o-o—

OF course, she has moods. She is subject to acute melancholia. "I take everything as dark as it comes," she said one day. "I live for the day. If I am happy I am happier than anyone in the world. If I am sad . . ." She shrugged her shoulders expressively.

Marlene Dietrich is the most provocative women in the world. Can you rob her of her poise? Can anyone? Well, von Sternberg might —or Maria, her daughter, if she were ill. She can be hurt only through the people of whom she is fond. "I never bear grudges," she says—"unless my friends have been injured."

I have never seen her cry. But I am told that when she does it is tempestuous. She never does anything by halves. Her arrogance is superb, her indifference magnificent.

"Straightforward scenes are the easiest things of all to play," she said, "but you can't really be personal when you hear the director say to your lover, "Be very passionate about it, but be sure and keep the shadow off Miss Dietrich's nose.'

"Mr. von Sternberg never lets me play love scenes—not ordinary ones, I mean, with hugging and all that, because he hates ordinary love scenes. In 'Morocco' Gary Cooper was supposed to kiss me behind a fan, but that was all.

"Nor did I have any real love scenes, as I say, in any of the pictures he directed. Putting on the make-up takes away all the glamor, and when a man is made up and you know that he is just playing the part—I feel I would be making love just as well to a lamppost."

When I suggested that all the same it must be much more satisfactory to have a good-looking man to make love to you, Marlene smiled cynically. "If you have to have an attractive man to make love to you, it means you are not an actress," she replied. "Besides, I am not interested in men because they are good-looking. I don't find that enough. It is their mind or their brains which are so much more important than looks."

"I would much prefer to be a

MISS DIETRICH WITH HER HUSBAND AND DAUGHTER.

MARLENE DIETRICH is the most glamorous woman in the world today, and yet it is difficult to put her personality on paper.

She gets bored so quickly when talking about herself that I had to pay her at least 25 professional visits to obtain anything like a complete picture of her. It is her genuine belief that the public should only be interested in her work—and nothing else.

This is the first time she has ever disclosed anything of her private life, or her real thoughts. Twice a year she gives an interview in the United States, but it is invariably of technical, generalized character.

MY OPINION

by Martha Carr

Dear Martha Carr:

THIS letter might sound as though it comes from a henpecked husband and to satisfy my own self I wish you would please give me your opinion on my case.

My wife is always complaining that she has no place to go during the day, or nothing to do. She continually wants to go visiting to her friends' or relatives' houses and won't stay at home. In the evenings and over the week-end I have to do most of the housework or nobody will do it. We can't afford to send the laundry out or have a house-girl. I work hard all week in a factory and all I can hear from her is that she is too tired or not strong enough to do the work around the home.

Now, Mrs. Carr, I am convinced that her weakness is just an alibi. What can I do to make her realize that she should stay home and do her work?

ABOUT TO STRIKE.

Perhaps your wife's plea of lack of strength for housework is not an alibi. Her vitality may be low for some reason that a doctor could promptly discover. You might suggest her seeing one. Too, there are some women who are not lazy about other things, but who have a serious distaste for domestic work. If your wife is in this class she might be much happier at regular employment away from home, and with the increased income you might afford a "house-girl."

Have you tried letting things go when she failed to perform her duties about the house? It might arouse her to her responsibility.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● WE ARE SIX GIRLS between 11 and 12 years old. Last summer we disbanded a club we had had for some time. Now we want to start it again and we want a new name. We used to call it the J. U. S. Club, which stood for "Just Us Six." Could some of your readers suggest a nice name?

Thank you very much.

SIX GIRLS.

—o—o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM WRITING for a girl friend of mine. She asked me why she could not hold on to a boy friend. She is a nice looking girl and is 16 years of age. And could you tell me what a boy mostly requires of a girl. I am 17 years old. Thanking you, I remain,

A FRIEND.

Your girl friend should not worry about "holding on" to anybody at the age of 16. She has a few more years to live before beginning to be serious. Your question about what a boy requires of a girl would be a hard one to answer with anything short of a book. However, at your age try being sensible, companionable and interesting and you will learn for yourself through experience the answer to your question. If you will send a self-addressed stamped envelope my pamphlet on popularity may help you.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I WONDER IF YOU COULD help me find good homes for my two dogs which we can't keep any longer. One is a fox terrier, good watch dog and good for hunting. The other is a little dog about five or six months old. He eats everything.

Anybody could call for them. Our home is at Spring Lake Park.

J. KOLLER.

—o—o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I HAVE BEEN GOING with a boy for more than a year and a half. During this time on my birthday and at Christmas he has given me very lovely gifts. He is going to have a birthday soon and some of my friends say that I should not give him a present. They claim it is not proper for a girl to give a boy a present unless they are going steady or unless they are engaged. Since both this boy and I are too young to go steady, I do not believe this is true. Thanking you in advance,

M. S.

I think it would be nice to remember your friend on his birthday with something like a pocket handkerchief or a book that would interest him. A suitable greeting, obtainable for a few cents more, could be enclosed. The idea of your remembering his birthday has nothing to do with the fact that you have been "going with" him; your remembrance will be as one friend to another.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I WANT TO KNOW what you can suggest for me to do to make my dad realize that I have feelings. I am 13, quit school when I was 14 and started working out at housework when I was 15.

Dad says it is as much my duty to put money in the home as it in his. He is making a living wage. He drinks a lot and always fussing at me. I've tried fussing back and I've tried keeping my mouth shut but neither does a bit of good. What do you suggest?

HURT FEELINGS.

If it is impossible for you and your father to agree, perhaps you could arrange to board and room with relatives for a while until he appreciates your contribution to the home. If you are working, and able to support yourself, perhaps a little show of independence on your part would bring your father around to a more reasonable frame of mind.

—o—o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I DON'T KNOW whether you will encourage or discourage me, but whichever you do, I hope it's for the best.

Last summer I became acquainted with a boy whom I grew to like very much. He is 16 and I am 15. I see him a lot up at school but usually he is with another girl. Yet I know he likes me by the little things he does and says every now and then.

Sometimes I am quick-spoken and although I do not mean to, I believe that I have offended him by this unfortunate trait. I think he goes with those other girls just to make me jealous.

Do you think he is worth the trouble to apologize to, in case I have offended him? I like him very much.

THANK YOU.

Unless you have a specific instance for which to apologize, by all means don't. It will only embarrass the boy. You are probably attaching too much importance to your own feelings for him and to his motives in seeing other girls. Try acting natural and more kindly when you are with him. Being "quick-spoken" will never revive his interest in you.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

EXQUISITE PLEASURE FOR THE BACHELORS-AT-HEART.

SO HE'S STILL A BACHELOR!

They Make the Best Husbands (Sometimes) and You Might as Well Be Reconciled to the Idea, Anyhow.

BY HENRIETTA RIPPERGER

ILLUSTRATIONS BY WYNHOFF

SOME men are born to be husbands. As boys, they spend their youth looking over the girls with an eye to finding ones who are willing to settle down, and give up knitting for themselves, in favor of sewing buttons on for somebody else. Their answer to the question what makes you happy, is one of the "knock knocks"; (to revive an old pastime), "Knock, knock," it runs. "Who's there?" "Tum." "Tum who?" "Tum, tum te tum. Tum, tum te tum!" If after reading that aloud you don't get it, you aren't married and never have been, and you may as well turn to something else. These devoted, domesticated and thoroughly desirable men don't enjoy anything to which they can't take their little women along.

If fate has given you one of them as your companion in the wedding march the question we raise won't apply.

But it is our belief that most men remain bachelors at heart. The Justice of the Peace may lean out an upper window and say: "You're married," (and it's just that simple, they say, in some places), or the clergy may have turned out in state, but no matter how binding the bond and how elaborate the ceremony such men remain untamed.

The bachelor-at-heart really enjoys the companionship of his kind. He likes to go out with the boys. He is an all-night poker player, or nearly all. His bass to the inevitable "Honey" has often brought tears and salvos of applause from people at other tables. It is his experience that women, with their unspoken criticism of the other guests, and their recurring desire to go home, are dampers on his spirit. He goes alone. It is the convention for wives to resent these evenings. Call any haunt, if you are a wife, and ask for a husband and the waiter can be heard inquiring, "Are you here, Sir?" Yet these are the amusements which involving as a rule, little or no feminine society are less menacing to domestic happiness than many other pursuits. Or he plays golf, in a man's foursome, while his baffled wife whiffs at the ball a few holes ahead.

—o—o—

IN the more effete circles, he is the confirmed diner-out. We got a mental picture of him the other day, quite by accident. We were looking over the book of samples of dance invitations at a Fifth avenue jewelers, the one who does the invitations for many of the important parties in New York, when we came across an engraved card in which Mr. Reginald So-and-So accepted with pleasure the kind invitation of someone whose name he would write in. In other words, Mr. Reginald was ready to go. You could see him, hurrying home to pop into his dinner clothes, which hung always ready, like a fireman's suit, for a master who was always available. There was no corresponding card to say he wouldn't come. It is evidently not in Reggie to say no or to regret. The girl who marries him will have to hustle to keep the pace!

The bachelor-at-heart does not like to be tied down to plans. Oh, of course he has a few of his own, and oddly enough they are often regular ones. He seems to like to go to the same place and do the same thing about once a week. Perhaps in the uncertainty of his other ideas, one fixed evening appointment gives him a sense of stability; is a sort of anchor to windward. But he does not like a wife to make engagements for him. His wife, if she is a womanly woman, is just the opposite. She likes to sit down and say: "A week from next Tuesday we go to the Brown's for dinner." You can hear her on the telephone making plans; to meet her mother for lunch, to get the children, to join a friend for the movies. This is because she does not have many outside things to attend to. She is like the little girl who, getting a letter from the orthodontist said, "At last I have affairs of my own." Her husband has them all day. To him, recreation means freedom from appointments, the ability to decide on the spur of the moment what it would be fun to do.

The bachelor-at-heart is not a bit interested in the details of domestic life. He likes perfect service and the best of food. But he does not want to see the wheels go 'round. He won't say what color he thinks the new sofa should be. He won't look at samples of draperies, a trait that makes him a very trying companion at times. He won't choose the wallpaper, or even vote, although he may object, later, to the fact that his workroom has been papered baby pink with silver stars.

In aggravated cases, he won't even help with the baby. (Here our sympathy, which has thus far been somewhat with him, must be withdrawn.) Tendencies to ignore the baby should be nipped in the bud. Children are everybody's business.

The married bachelor thinks, sometimes unfairly, that women make a lot of unnecessary bother. This is why you so seldom find women aboard sailboats, unless they own them, or in fishing camps, except under unavoidable circumstances. These are two strongholds of the masculine bachelor temperament; the third, the bar, usurped by the feminine element. I'll take her aboard," said a man to a friend who wanted to bring a woman sailing, "if she isn't the sort who has to stop and fix her hair or her face, or get into different clothes."

The bachelor-at-heart laughs longest and loudest at the friends who sit waiting in cars while the wife visits a beauty parlor before starting somewhere. He likes the results, but she must get them alone and at convenient hours, when he isn't around.

And finally, the bachelor-at-heart may be recognized by his unwillingness to account for himself even when his actions are above reproach, and his aversion to checking in. He may go away and send you a card once during two or three weeks, marked "Love from South Bend," (as if it was South Bend you wanted love from!) or "My room is at the left." This probably indicates something in his character that psycho-analysts could name; but they wouldn't, it being our experience they are out sleuthing for unhealthy traits in women rather than in men!

And you can't do a thing about him. He is a disconcerting husband to say the least. But the wise guy takes his assets into consideration before deciding against him. After all, he never bores her. He never talks about gadgets until she wants to scream. And the gleam in his eye that made him so attractive is still there, when the eyes of less spirited men have gone dead as a used-up battery. If she puts out the spark, it will be less fun for everybody, including herself.

"Are you a widow?" a visitor to our town asked a woman.

"That's too bad," she went on rather naively, on hearing the woman had a husband. "I know a bachelor I'd like to see married to you."

"Thanks," said the woman in question, "But I'm already married to one, and I like it."

Hope for the Homely :-: :-: By MARJORIE HILLIS

Ruth Gordon, wouldn't even be considered in a contest of classic beauty.

ONE of the nicest things about the present time is that you don't have to be beautiful. And a very small proportion of the Women Who Get Around are. I am not pointing any moral about beauty being only skin deep either—it doesn't matter much how deep or shallow it is, it's what it does for you that counts.

Good looks are still a help, of course, but they are not an essential. Just look at any list of outstanding women. Whether it's a list of important women, or smart women, or popular women, or actresses, the beauties will be few and far between. More than that, there'll be a lot of definitely homely ones, many of whom manage to look very interesting indeed.

That, of course, is the trick. Once upon a time, if you were an ugly duckling, you were apt to accept it as a cross to be borne, and to become meek and mouselike. Nowadays, if you have any spunk at all, you make the most of your best points, minimize your worst, and go ahead on the principle that you are as handsome as most—as you probably are.

—o—o—

ALMOST EVERY ONE has some good point—hair, skin, coloring, carriage. Few women have all of them. This is curious, for as one looks at photographs of beauties of the past—Lily Langtry and Mary Anderson, for instance, with their classic features—they actually seem to have had everything. But how many current actresses, for instance, can you name who are really beautiful? Certainly some of our most popular ones, like Katharine Cornell or Katharine Hepburn or Ruth Gordon, wouldn't even be considered in a contest of classic beauty.

What have they, then? They have, first of all, personality. They have intelligence enough to emphasize their good points, and they make use of the miracles accomplished in modern times by clothes and cosmetics.

These are tools that everybody can work with. I have seen a woman with a face like a horse, long and actually ugly, who kept her skin in condition, her dark hair slick and well coiffed, and wore severely chic clothes—and whose appearance was so interesting that you turned to her in preference to all the pretty-pretty women in the room.

As a matter of fact, people aren't attracted by prettiness today, except in children and young girls, where it is always charming. I suppose the qualities that attract the most are clarity of skin, good figures, good carriage and litheness of movement, all emphasized by good taste in clothes. And every one of these things is something that can be acquired. If you're endowed with them by nature, so much the better. But if you're not, it shouldn't mean defeat.

It should mean an extra spur to your ambition. For the women people look at admiringly today aren't just lucky—they are women who have mastered the art of good grooming through intelligence and hard work.

—o—o—

I HAVE been having a little redecorating done in my apartment lately, and getting a lot of fun out of it. I'm fond of possessions, I'm afraid, and love arranging them to look their best. I find myself feeling an affection for the rooms, with their new freshness, and for all the odds and ends I have collected here and there.

And I picked up a paper and saw a photograph of a street in the middlewest after the recent flood. There was a row of houses—nice, suburban-looking houses whose owners must have loved them—with water within a few inches of the tops of the second-story windows. You could only see the roofs, rising forlornly above the river.

It startled me more than all the pictures of danger and disease. For even though the floods may have receded, just think what the houses must look like! The danger and illness are temporary—one hopes—but it must be an endless job to bring even comfort back to the homes, to say nothing of charm. Even if one could afford to spend more money, after repairing all the fundamentals, think of the havoc to be faced! Think of having mud and slime on the rug you bought after such long saving, for the dining-room. And water-spots on the gay foyer paper you chose with such care. Think of having your furniture water-soaked and your ornaments broken! (Right now, in the midst of my own bit of decorating, I can hardly bear to think of it!)

—o—o—

THE WORST of it is that most of us forget to sympathize when the headlines disappear. There is so much to read and worry about, we can't remember unless our memories are jogged. But all along the Ohio River, drabness will stretch like the river slime for months to come. There will be very few charming houses used as backgrounds for gay parties—if there are any gay parties!

This may seem like a minor point, but it is one that anybody—even people like me, who can't figure out the economics except pretty sketchily—can grasp. All you have to do is to sit in the middle of your own living room and consider how you would like to have it filled up with water, well mixed river mud. After a few such moments of meditation, I hope you will be moved at this late date to send a check to the flood sufferers.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

"CIGARETTES made Duestrow crazy.

He killed his wife and baby and now he's on the hook."

Doesn't make much sense to us youngsters, does it, these lines from a ballad that kids used to chant on the South Side? But many of the old-time residents of St. Louis could tell you the whole sensational story of the double murder for which Nicotine Fiend Arthur Duestrow was hanged 40 years ago this month.

On St. Valentine's eve, 1894, Arthur Duestrow, not exactly sober, pulled up in a horse-drawn sleigh before his substantial home at 1724 South Compton avenue. Mrs. Duestrow, hearing the jingle of the bells, sent a servant girl, Katie Hahn, below to ask if the master had come to take his 2-year-old son riding, as he had so often promised to do. At this innocent question, he burst out profanely, stormed into the house and up to his wife's bedroom, followed by the alarmed girl. When Mrs. Deustrow attempted to shield Katie from her violent husband, he turned his abuse on her, slapping her several times. Like a perfect stage villain, he snatched up young Louis from his crib, and with threats that he was gone forever, dashed down the stairs. When he reached the kitchen, he had a different idea. He leaped back up to his wife's room, dropped the child again among his playthings, fired three bullets from a pearl-handled revolver into her head—

—o—o—

BUT LET KATIE tell the story as it was reported in that evening's Post-Dispatch. Katie had fled to her third-floor room when Duestrow made his first exit. After she heard the three shots, she crept back down to escape and from the landing saw this scene: "Duestrow stood speechless with his revolver in his hand. While poor little baby Louis, white as death, with his chubby fingers clasping his toy wagon in his childish fright, stood watching the monstrous father. And then what terrible vision came before this woman's eyes. She saw this father close upon his boy, too frightened now to cry. She saw him raise him up and pinion his baby from him against the wall. She saw his arm rising. Then heard two shots"—The sixth bullet Duestrow turned on himself in an ineffectual attempt at suicide.

Later Katie recalled having heard Mrs. Duestrow cry out as her husband's threats grew, "Don't shoot, Arthur, for God's sake; for your family's sake, don't shoot, we are innocent." And she recalled seeing him stoop over his wife to exclaim in German, "Bist du todt, Tinie?"—"Are you dead, Tinie?" She was not dead, but never regained consciousness. She lingered for four days after an emergency operation had been performed. The child was killed outright. Duestrow descended to the waiting sleigh, ordered the driver to take him to the nearest police station and surrendered.

Particular local interest attached to these murders not only because of the barbaric way in which they were committed, but because Arthur Duestrow was a wealthy and well-known sport, wild since his youth.

—o—o—

HE WAS the son of Louis Duestrow, then dead, one of the Granite Mountain millionaires who, in spite of his wealth never had gained an entrance into the best German society of the South Side. But he left his son with an income said to be $20,000 a year. At the time of the crime, Arthur Duestrow had been married just four years. His wife was the former Albertina Leisse, bookkeeper for an afternoon paper. Two years before, Duestrow, entered St. Louis Medical College, more for the honor of it than anything else, for he seldom attended to his studies. From the testimony of many saloon keepers and the operators of the owl cars which brought him home late at night, he must have spent most of his time over the bottle. He was a quick-tempered man, whose passions, particularly jealousy, were easily aroused. He always carried a revolver and more than once, in these rages had threatened to use it on innocent offenders.

There still was another phase of the crime which kept it on Page One for more than a week. That was Duestrow's association with one Clara Howard. Gossip had linked the names of Duestrow and Miss Howard for more than a year. He was known to have lavished money and attention on her and was at her establishment two hours before the murder.

According to one version of the story, she was dividing her time between Duestrow and a "certain sporting man in town," and was trying to cut loose from "the moneyed man"—i. e., Duestrow—"because of appeals from his wronged wife.

When Duestrow called on her the afternoon of Feb. 13, he found Clara Howard in the company of the other man. She, according to the story, man," she said one day, "because they have clearer and better brains. There is no advantage in being a woman."

"But if you were a man wouldn't you miss being protected?"

Dietrich stared. "But it is much nicer to give protection than to get it."

Another time she said:

"There is only one love that is not egotistical. There is only one person who will accept any excuse, who will forgive anything, who asks for nothing in return."

—o—o—

I STILL did not believe that she could really feel so impersonal in her love-making on the screen.

"Wouldn't it be fun to make the actor think that you really are in love with him although you are really only saying your lines?" I suggested.

Marlene laughed. "I haven't done that since I was 16," she said. "You see, I am a gentleman at heart."

I still insisted: "But wouldn't it make for more realistic acting if you let them think that you were falling in love with them in real earnest?"

"Make them feel in love for the sake of art?" Marlene smiled. "Certainly not. In any case, your true feelings never really show on the screen. If you really meant it you would not do it publicly.

"It would not be at all easy to play with someone with whom you were in love. It would be, on the contrary, very embarrassing, for one is never unconscious of the camera.

"I would sooner do a love scene with Charles Laughton, if it were in the script, than with any other actor, however good-looking he might be," Dietrich remarked at another time.

"Laughton's performance in 'Rembrandt' made me feel quite drunk at the time. After it was over I almost felt like giving up acting altogether when I thought of all the tricks I have to play to try to make myself look beautiful, and Laughton can look beautiful with his hair all over the place and in ragged clothes."

Naturally, in discussing love, she referred to her first love affair, of her married life with her husband, to whom she has been married 13 years, and of her daughter, Maria. And she was quite frank in discussing the person whom she loves most.

NEXT WEEK—Marlene Dietrich talks for the first time of her family and early days, discusses her marriage frankly, and reveals who is the great love of her life.

Royal Symbols

ALL of the symbols which are associated with royalty in the British Isles have been reproduced for American women to wear this spring. Most of them appear on the fabrics which have discarded the early splurge of gay flowers for plumes, crowns, lions and unicorns. Thistles and roses furnish the chief floral motif.

The coronation theme is out in all its glory with the designs giving it greatest emphasis, but the colors also leaning toward pomp and ceremony. The crowns and plumes predominate in every material and color scheme from pique to satin and from purple and white to crimson and navy.

"WE'RE COLLECTING OLD CLOTHES FOR THE LEAGUE RUMMAGE SALE, MRS. BALCHER—HOW ABOUT THAT BLUE SUIT YOUR HUSBAND ALWAYS WEARS?"

Our League's zeal for pet charities runs second only to the assiduous planning that goes into our spring meeting clothes. Personal vote for smartest member—the slim blonde whose husband's wardrobe may be commandeered. Her basque-fitted, waist length jacket and minutely pleated, surging skirt combine at once a knowing modernity and a feeling for quaintness. Of black light weight woolen, softly tailored, with black braid following the line of collar and pockets, thus accenting the notches. The soft gleam of antique gold at her throat is repeated in the ornament on a chapeau which is almost, but not quite, a Scotch beret.

Mme. Chairman displays her good sense of values in a springy silk print whose small black flecks on silvery gray, side closing, and sleeves loose to the cuff, all minimize the results of pastry indulgence. Trimming is reduced to top-stitching (again stressing the vertical approach) and a small winy-red nosegay at the V neck.

A word of praise for the navy twill at the right. That notch on each side of her coat is repeated in the skirt, the neck's collarless, allowing free play for a cascade of crisp white pique ruffles. All especially good with the new straw sailor dripping a stiff little coarse-meshed veil all around its edge.

HEIGHTS OF DEMENTIA

By Lucius Beebe

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 27.

RESULTING from a synthesis of coincidental insanities and, no doubt, a heavenly conjunction of the more mad making planets, the world's scrammiest community during the last week or so achieved heights of dementia fit to addle the wits of the beholders and even to frighten such connoisseurs of the preposterous as, say, Gertrude Stein.

To remark that the collective mind of the swami-ridden civilization is handsomely cracked is not only banal but has established a new index of understatement. Hollywood fairly dithered with excitement and commotions of a heebiejeebie or schizophrenic order, almost all of which were provoked by folk fresh from New York, but which were embraced by the local inmates with hospitable enthusiasm and cherished much like the New York hat in the play of that name.

Not the least of these was the concert of his own music conducted by George Gershwin at the Philharmonic Auditorium and the routs and pageantry attendent thereon. Then there was a festival in honor of Libby Holman contrived by her friends and attended by some of the more interesting local cases. And the arrival of Salvator Dali, the demon surrealist, with a number of upsetting notions, which were rendered no less provocative by his refusal to speak the English language in a community not quite awash with scholarly conversationalists, did nothing to restore order or abate the civic tumults which raged at the Victor Hugo bar and other popular rendezvous.

THE GERSHWIN CONCERT was widely heralded as the greatest philharmonic achievement of modern times, so far as Hollywood was concerned, and was celebrated by everything but the discharge of maroons and lighting of bonfires. Such devotees of the muse as Harpo and Zeppo Marx, Betty Furness, Louis B. Mayer and Boris Morros turned out in shoals.

Many of the music lovers were so bemused by the first half of the program as to remain, in search of contemplative peace in which to relieve its wonders, in the adjacent Biltmore bar for the rest of the evening. Ginger Rogers was squired by the omnipresent turf and harmony aficionado, Alfred G. Vanderbilt. Simone Simon was present on the arm of an unidentified youth who chewed gum throughout the evening in a reverent frenzy.

Jock Whitney squired the monocled Heather Thatcher and, indeed, the auditorium was equally divided between single eyeglass wielders and gum chewers, in some cases both accomplishments being blended in one skilled individual. Los Angeles applause for such essays in esthetics as "Porgy and Bess" consists of piercing whistles between the teeth and shouts of "Attaboy George" from the auditors. The general result is a cross between Carnegie Hall and the Polo Grounds during the World Series.

After the whistling was over, Gershwin was entertained at a levee staged at the Trocadero by Arthur Lyons, to which an intimate three or four hundred had been asked to drop in for a buffet supper combining the best features of Russian, French and Southern mammy cuisine, while the California Collegians alternated with a stringed orchestra which played old Volga tunes until many of the guests were wearing their muffs in the manner of fur hats and doing squat dances on the parquet.

—o-o—

THE VERY NEXT evening the Trocadero was the scene of another festival which loving friends arranged to fascinate Miss Holman, and the repercussions of the event are still echoing around Beverly Hills drawing rooms. T begin with the celebrants included such a mixture of guests as Prince and Princess Sivgard Bernadotte of Sweden; the Nunnally Johnsons, Errol Flynn and Lily Damita, Muriel Lee, Mrs. Clark Gable, Thyra Samster Winslow, Tyrone Power and the unbelievable Dalis. Toward the end it embraced most of the patrons of the Trocadero who, apprised by their senses that big doings were toward in the Rose Room, not to mention the passage of wine stewards laden with hods of champagne wine, joined the party and lent it their enthusiastic moral support for several hours.

Perhaps the high point in the evening was achieved when the Princess Bernadotte, freighted beyond further endurance with gems, SACRIFICE!

"FROM NOW ON I'M GIVING UP BEAUTY—GOING IN FOR JUST ACTING."

Grace Moore Comments on Metropolitan

Believes Opera Needs Pepping Up; This Has Already Been Done.

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.

GRACE MOORE, the thrush from Jellico, Tenn., has come bursting into our town, spattering her enduring blonde beauty over the local scene, whooping up the press in a ladylike way for her latest picture, and making a few speeches to the pop-eyed reporters, who adore this canary for her loveliness and admire her for her power to attract the rubles of the natives.

She told us a lot of things. She whoops for vegetable juices as an aid to slimming, she had a good word to say for California sunshine as an antidote for flu bugs, and she posed for pictures holding a handful of fruit she had brought from her own farm in that eminent State. And she said one thing calculated to burn New Yorkers of 1937 to as crisp a frazzle as overdone rashers of breakfast bacon.

La Belle Moore said in the hearing of all that a little movie pep would stir up her alma mater, the Metropolitan Opera—and at this point the alert members of the assembled multitude grew somewhat pale and frosty. For it is agreed on all sides that the movie prima donna gave off this hurried opinion about two years too late! Under the magnetic direction of the tenor-impresario, Edward Johnson, the dear old Met, leading aviary of the world, is enjoying the most successful, interesting and peppiest season in many years—if not in its history! The back of your hands to you, Grace Moore!

Not only is its Wagnerian section, headed by the incomparable Flagstad and Melchior, the greatest in history, but the new regime has swept out a lot of the aged blimps and brought in some of the prettiest and most talented warblers ever known, such as Muriel Dickson. Only the other day it unveiled a new Manon in the luscious and musicianly Bidu Sayao, and its current season is zestful, artistic and money-making. So be careful, Gracie old chicakadee! What with the studio and the mike, I'm afraid you've lost touch!

—o-o—

EVERY DAY a quiet titter, in a nice way, and so it pleased me to read that Mrs. Wally Simpson attended a fancy opera on the Riviera wearing a green gown, and ermine wrap, a diamond bracelet and an emerald ring. The last line of the item got me. "The audience failed to recognize her." Sic transit gloria Wally?

And what do you make of the recurring reports that the Windsor honeymoon will be spent in our Republic? If it is, I guarantee that the antics of many Eastern dowagers will reach a new high in absurd Anglo-Mania!

—o-o—

ONE OF THE MOST popular books of the day here is "Beloved Friend," the story of Tchaikowsky. I went to a party the other day for the two authors, Catherine Drinker Bowen and Barbara Von Meck, and found them highly excited about the way the tome is going over the counters.

Speaking of books, the astonishing "Gone With the Wind" has finally dropped to sixth place in the fiction sales of Brentano's here, with "The Late George Apley," by J. P. Marquand, now topping the list. If I haven't already boosted the "Apley" book, I've meant to. It's one of the very finest things I've digested in years.

—o-o—

HARDLY A WEEK passes here but some gent sets fire to himself by smoking while nodding off to slumber—and now I am pained to report that this happened to one of us. A nurse named Mabel L. Walton allowed the sandman to creep up on her while puffing, with the result that she suffered severe burns. I think she is the first woman in local history to suffer this occupational accident of the smoker. And on the subject of cigarettes, I learn that cigarette manufacture in '36 reached its all-time high, with the total over 153,000,000,000, or enough to keep a Gotham debutante supplied for a year and three months.

Spangles and Beads

Those spangled evening jackets and beaded dresses of the past season were merely forerunners of more spangles and beads to come, if reports from the fashion centers are to be taken seriously. A very elaborate evening mode is forecast. It includes appliques, encrustations, beading, spangling and embroidery with a few ruffles thrown in for good measure.

The fragile materials such as chiffon and laces are used for the display of these elaborate trimmings which are designed along decollete lines, the skirts quite full and never more than floor length. An occasional dance frock which is really short is introduced, its elaborating making up for its absence of skirt length.

SPRING SUIT

A HINT OF SPRING IS IN THE AIR AND NOW IS THE TIME TO GET THAT SUIT WHICH WILL BRIGHTEN YOUR WARDROBE BENEATH A TOPCOAT THESE CHILLY DAYS AND BE ON HAND FOR THE SUNNIER DAYS TO COME.

A Cry for Individuality In Our Present-Day Life

By Elsie Robinson

I LIKE fences. I like what fences did for people and places. And I lustily rebel against our increasingly unfenced life. Democracy is all very well in its time and place. But this idea of letting any tramp walk in, waste your time and energy, and park all over your premises, burns me up.

There is a quaint notion that America was once a wide, open, free-for-all place. To the contrary, until the turn of the century, fences were as de rigueur as pants. Everyone had 'em, ranging from high walls and hedges to the homely, whitewashed picket. This was true even on the wild and wooly frontier, where it was firmly understood that you'd better keep out unless invited in—if you valued your health. Only snacks, shanties and the kind of trash who lived "across the railroad tracks" went unfenced.

The yards behind these barricades were as diversified as the people who owned them. Rivalry ran high as to the respective merits of stone bottles, painted cobblestones or clam shells for "ornamental edges," and whether an iron bloodhound or a lattice-work arbor was classier as the central piece de resistance.

But one thing was sure—each owner was supreme dictator within his own boundary line. If he wanted to express his libido by building miniature chalets out of busted beer glasses, then, by gum, he built 'em. And if you didn't like it, you knew what you could do.

—o-o—

THIS, I admit, was tough on art, but it promoted something which, at that time, was considered far more valuable than any landscape gardening—namely, each man's fundamental and sacred right to be himself. Our fathers had left their homes, starved and bled, to assert and maintain that right. America was founded upon it. Those fences, with their strictly segregated garden patches, symbolized it. As yet, the deadly blight of standardization had not hit these United States.

But presently it arrived. The word was passed that fences were not cultured—we must tear them down and merge our front yards in one uniform vista of mowed lawn and manicured mignonette. Also, the psychologists warned us, fences were anti-social . . . encouraged reserves and inhibitions. People ought to get together. Drop in and out without knocking. Be folksy!

So away went the fences. And away, even faster, went all personal reserves and peculiarities. Until, today, we're all as much alike as a bunch of gum drops. Instead of being the Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave, we're a collection of stereotyped robots. And, I don't mind saying that the situation is, to me, perfectly revolting.

I don't want to be like other people—no matter how smart or charming they may be. I don't want to wear something just because other people are wearing it, or think something just because other people are thinking it. I want to inhabit my own private premises—and live my own personal life. And I regard people who invade my time, ape my manners and swipe my ideas as common trespassers, and nothing else but.

—o-o—

AS for being folksy—the very notion gives me the screaming meanies. I have, I believe, a normal interest in and affection for my fellow man. And if other people want to run in packs, they can. But I am NOT and I have no intention of becoming, a 100 per cent sociable animal.

Frankly, I think most of our getting together is inspired by sheer stupidly and laziness—most of us being unable to amuse ourselves. And I refuse to serve as free fun for any bunch of empty noodles.

There are times when even my best beloveds look about as welcome to me as a dose of measles. There are frequent and protracted periods when I desire to be left completely alone with me, myself . . . and I warn anyone who interrupts those times that they'll probably get bit. What this country needs, even more than a good 5-cent cigar, is a lot of mufflers for the human larynx.

So, as I said in the beginning, I like fences. I like decently fenced places and decently fenced people. I'm all for the good old days when you knew where your life stopped and the other fellow's began! Even the humblest American had individuality then. Today there isn't enough, in the whole batch of us, to equip a common fish worm.

The children's toy box can often supply the materials for unusual table decorations. Tiny houses may be placed on a mirror "rink" for a skating party and little people and furniture used for a bridal shower.

Flower-Tinted Caps

BRIGHT flower-tinted caps that are made of suede or antelope offer a diversion in the way of between-season millinery. Rose tints predominate but there are blues, russet shades and green included in the collections which add spice to a wardrobe. The caps are designed to be worn off-the-forehead and are so small that they seem accessories of the coiffure.

Created especially to go with these caps are matching leather bags and gloves. However, it is best to choose between the two rather than to become too enthusiastic and wear a complete ensemble. A little flash of the leather looks very chic but too much spoils the theme.

IT MUST BE US!

Reprint from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Sunday, Feb. 7th, 1937.

CATERING to this motorized, always-on-the-run world in which we live, business has contrived to render almost any service at the curb. One West End laundry posts liveried men at strategic corners to collect bundles. Of a Monday morning when customers with laundry to be done, are east bound, the laundry's man crosses the street and takes up a stand by a boulevard stop sign. The transaction in transit is simple enough. All you have to do is open a window (down, if you're in a private automobile, but if you're aboard a trolley or bus), and hand your bundle out to the gentleman. A cavalier manner of winding up is to call back, as you speed on, "Be sure to have it ready by Wednesday."

Rector's Own Dishes

By George Rector

TALK about food in Germany and you talk about the hot dog. Not in Coney Island, or Atlantic City, or anywhere on the white, long stretches of California's coast line can you bite into a weenie of such depth and fullness of flavor as you do if the name is Frankfurter and you buy him anywhere south of Bremen. For the Frankfurter is the great father of all the hot dogs in the world with a family history traceable to the Visigoths. His native heath is Frankfort itself, on-the-Main, and if you ever should confront a bill of fare in the rathskeller of Frankfort's old town hall, you don't have to keep the waiter hovering while you make up your mind.

A while back the American Hotel Association sent a delegation to eat their way through the cooking departments of Europe and you can take my word for it that the high spot of the expedition occurred in that dingy old Frankfort cellar where the meal was Frankfurter Wurstchen mit Sauerkraut und Kartoffelbrei, and a stein of beer. There's a balanced diet for you, that, cheap and simple, got most encores from all the stuffers present. It made you ponder the greatness of Goethe (a Frankfort boy who made good), with a great deal less wonder.

You just have to take my word for this. I said somewhere before that there isn't any recipe for the United States hot dog and that goes for Frankfurter-on-the-Main. It's because he growed up that way that he's so good, but topnotcher though he is, he doesn't take up all the Deutschland side of the menu. Look out for pork.

—o-o—

The Germans get pork under 20,000 different heads and with as many variations as there are consonants in the language. Hats off to the Chinaman, you remember, whose house burnt down with a pig in it and roast pork was sampled for the first time in history. Well, the Germans are his most conspicuous gastronomic descendents and this is how they do roast pig today. This is (hold your breath for 30 seconds) Gefultes Spanferkel im Backofen Gebraten—which means, simply enough, sucking pig baked brown in the oven.

—o-o—

● THE BUTCHER will prepare the suckling pig for the oven by scraping and thoroughly cleaning, not forgetting the eyes, ears, nose and mouth. He has to force the mouth open and insert a piece of wood to keep it open while roasting.

If you like to try it follow these instructions:

Wash in cold water and dry thoroughly. Then fill him with stuffing. A simple savory bread crumb stuffing will do, or rice and sausage is a good idea, or mashed potatoes with a bit of raw onion and finely chopped parsley. Stuff the little pig and sew him together (just as if you were sewing up the Thanksgiving turkey). Then place the suckling in a roasting pan with the forefeet out straight and the hind legs folded under, tying or using a skewer to keep them in position. Rub pig with soft butter or sausage fat, sprinkle with salt and dust with flour. Start to cook in a moderate oven, basting every 15 minutes until pig is cooked and skin is crisp and brown, which will take from three to three and one-half hours of roasting. When he's finished, put him on a hot platter, take the wood out of his mouth and put in instead a nice red apple or lemon. Put two bright red cranberries in his eyes and garnish the platter with parsley or watercress. If you like put a garland of paper around his neck (the butcher will make this for you). Serve with a tart apple sauce.

Here's a particularly good stuffing: Combine four to six cups of stale bread crumbs, two cups of cooked, chopped prunes, two cups of chopped greenings, one teaspoon of salt, one-quarter teaspoon of cinnamon and enough water to make the stuffing moist but not wet.

Sausage stuffing comes next: Cook one pound of sausage meat over a moderate flame and drain off the fat. Then add four cups of boiled rice or stale bread crumbs, two tablespoons or sausage drippings, one tablespoon of chopped parsley, two tablespoons of chopped celery leaves, one small grated onion, one tablespoon of poultry seasoning, one teaspoon of salt and one-fourth teaspoon of pepper.

—o-o—

● SOMETHING ELSE good and German is potato stuffing: Cook enough white potatoes to get six to eight cups. Then drain and mash, using only enough hot milk to make the mixture fluffy. Then beat in two tablespoons of butter, two tablespoons of chopped parsley and one tablespoon of grated onion. Beat long and well.

CAKES FOR FESTIVE OCCASIONS

They Are a Feast for the Eyes When a Cook Makes Them Artistically.

By Sue Moody

TOP—A CHOCOLATE CAKE WHICH TAKES AN APRICOT FROSTING; BELOW, AN IDEAL CAKE FOR A ST. PATRICK'S DAY PARTY.

TIMES being what they are and a fine bakery just around the corner, there's no occasion to feel flustered, thought Mrs. Goodbonnet, trudging home one evening with Ella's birthday in the back of her mind and only a week away. The good lady felt vaguely relieved because they made such good angel food at her bakery. Angel food is somehow suggestive of birthdays! You could take a large cake home, decorate it profusely with Vienna frosting, perhaps a sprinkling of sugar beads, and achieve quiet a sensation in the birthday line. Add twinkling candles to its tall top and . . .! Yet she was never quite satisfied. Such a cake always looked a bit too magnificent. She preferred birthday cakes like the delicate, ambrosial sponges her mother used to make, cakes iced all over with plain white frosting.

Her mother had been accustomed to trim the birthday cake whimsically with little pink rosebuds, or with swirls of the same white frosting. Once she had decorated the top with a few of those crunchy, small, black-covered almonds. How distinctive that cake with its chaste whiteness and glistening black accents!

"You can't hurry a birthday cake," her neighbor, Mrs. Burgess, had been wont to remark, sinking into a comfortable chair and beginning to sketch on a piece of paper. "You have to relax, and plan. A cake turns out better if you put plenty of relaxation into the batter, and plenty of joy into the frosting. Who wants a commonplace cake? You want a new idea! and, perhaps, a new color scheme!"

Mrs. Goodbonnet and Mrs. Burgess would plan a plot to concoct the right cake for the person who was going to have the birthday. The result might be a chocolate angel food with mocha frosting. Or a feather white cake, (one egg yolk in it), frosted with pale pink icing—candied violets in a design in the center and a border of tiny lavender candles. (Such a cake would be a square cake three layers deep.)

For youngsters the two women would plan a circular cake of many layers; or streamlined loaf cakes. They would evolve (with the help of the pastry tube) stem and scroll designs for the centering of rosebud candle-holders; or, if they wanted to bake a larger cake in the good old round pan, they would design a decorated top that would be breath-taking.

Her greatest success was a circular cake which she baked in a German fluted pudding mould. Other women would never have dreamed of using a pudding mould for a cake, but Mrs. Goodbonnet wanted those flutes around the edge that made the cake, when iced in pale apricot, look like a flat autumn flower. The cake batter was firm yet light.

FLUTED CHOCOLATE CAKE

One cup sifted cake flour.
One and one-half teaspoon baking powder.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One-third cup butter.
One cup sugar.
Two eggs, separated.
One-half cup lukewarm water.
Three squares (three ounces) unsweetened chocolate, melted and cooled.

Mix and sift flour baking powder and salt together three times. Cream butter until soft. Add sugar gradually, beating until light and fluffy after each addition. Add egg yolks. Beat well. Add warm water. Add chocolate. Blend lightly. Add flour and beat until smooth. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into shallow, fluted, greased cake pan. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) 25 to 30 minutes or until firm. Remove from pan and cool. Frost with apricot frosting.

APRICOT FROSTING

One cup syrup drained from canned apricots.
Five canned apricots.
One-half cup sugar.
Two egg whites, stiffly beaten.
One teaspoon lemon juice.
One-fourth cup confectioners' sugar.
One egg white, unbeaten.
Vegetable tints.

Cook apricot syrup, apricots and sugar together until syrup threads, (230 degrees). Pour hot syrup slowly and stiffly over beaten egg whites, and continue beating until firm and cool enough to spread, adding lemon juice, gradually.

using half of frosting, outlining fluted edge carefully, and making the surface as flat as possible. Allow it to dry. Add remaining ingredients to the rest of the frosting, beating until smooth. Divide into three parts. Tint one part pale green, one yellow, one orange. Use these frostings in a pastry tube to make a flat, old-fashioned corsage in the center of the cake.

The rippling smoothness of this yellow-tipped cake was its chief virtue so Mrs. Goodbonnet never detracted from it by putting candles around the edge. (Some cakes are made to enhance the candles; others need candle-light for a background.) This cake she would decorate only near the center with frosted flowers. Then she would place it in the middle of the table on a dull-surfaced round plate and encircle it with candles tall enough to shed their light on the cake—the candles in very inconspicuous holders.

ST. PATRICK'S CHOCOLATE CAKE

One and one-third cups sifted cake flour.
One teaspoon baking powder.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Three-fourths teaspoon cinnamon.
One-half teaspoon cloves.
One-third cup shortening.
Three-fourths cup sugar.
Three eggs, separated.
One-third cup heavy sour cream.
One-fourth cup hot water.
One teaspoon baking soda.
Four ounces German chocolate, melted.
One and one-half teaspoons vanilla.

Mix and sift cake flour, baking powder, salt and spices. Cream shortening until soft. Add sugar gradually, beating after each addition until light and fluffy. Add egg yolks, beaten until thick. Add cream. Blend well. Add hot water and baking soda, then chocolate, beating until well blended. Add flour. Beat until smooth. Fold in egg whites. Add vanilla. Turn into two greased eight-inch layer cake pans. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 25 to 30 minutes. Frost with boiled icing, tinted palest green, and decorate with shamrocks.

BOILED FROSTING

One cup sugar.
One-half cup water.
One-eighth teaspoon cream of tartar.
Two egg whites, stiffly beaten.
One-half teaspoon vanilla.
Green vegetable coloring.

Combine sugar, water and cream of tartar. Boil until syrup spins a thread (230 degrees F.) Pour slowly over beaten egg whites, beating constantly until thick and cool enough to spread. Add vanilla and color as desired. Approximate yield: Enough to cover top and sides of two eight-inch layers.

CHOCOLATE ALMOND FILLING

One package chocolate pudding powder
One and one-half cups milk
One-half cup almonds, blanched, chopped and toasted.

Mix chocolate pudding powder with one-half cup of milk until a smooth paste is formed. Add remaining milk. Cook over medium heat 10 minutes or until smooth and thick, stirring constantly. Add nutmeats, cool, stirring occasionally. Spread between layers of St. Patrick's cake.

NOVELTIES IN FLOWERS

By Harriet W. Chandler

SOME flower novelties hold popular interest beyond their first season and win permanent places in the garden. These successes are usually members of old plant families with a heritage of generations of good breeding, carefully hybridized for health and color and popular appeal. They outlast the merely accidental novelties which usually develop weaknesses and are soon forgotten.

The recent newcomer which created the greatest sensation in its first season was the Golden Gleam nasturtium. Plant breeders everywhere pounced upon it as a semi-double advance over the old single sorts of nasturtiums, and have already begun to make it a forerunner of a beautiful new strain. In short order, Golden Gleam came on the stage in a host of different colors, which was a distinct innovation in the nasturtium family. These in turn were followed by the Golden Globe variety and then the scarlet globe, both with large semi-double fragrant flowers literally covering their sturdy little dwarf bushes. Last year an even more unusual type was developed in the super-doubles. With their 40 or 50 petals, these strongly suggest the carnation, and as they never make seed, are constant bloomers. With vigilant war against aphis, a starving soil, plenty of moisture and a normal season, these nasturtiums can be a joy in any of our gardens.

The Yellow Supreme Marigold is also high in the list of those novelties that have lived. It is a supreme flower in every way, enriching any garden in which it grows. The large shaggy heads of loose lemon-yellow petals also suggest the carnation and like that flower its lasting qualities when cut rank it among the best for decorative purposes. The strong marigold odor so objectionable in others of the family is hardly noticeable in yellow supreme but perhaps its best recommendation is that after three or four years in commerce it is still going strong.

Harmony, a dwarf sister of more recent introduction seems to be a close rival for popularity. It is one of the French marigolds with a deep orange center surrounded by a collar of maroon-brown. The flower suggests a scabiosa, makes a low, bushy plant and is a prolific bloomer. Guinea gold, the forerunner of these newer marigolds, should have its place with those who like these flowers, for it is as good as any of the others. Marigolds grow so easily here and add so much to our late summer and fall bouquets that they should be generally planted.

Another old standby, the zinnias, are available now in so many new forms and varieties that it is hard to mention any one more outstanding than another. A garden calling for zinnias of bright colors and large flowers will find what it wants in the giant dahlia-flowered and California giant varieties, which have blooms five or six inches in diameter. Oriole, scintillating orange and gold is a favorite, while other colors are found in Scarlet Flame, Purple Prince, Rose Queen and Canary Bird, a soft yellow. Then there are the Scabiosa-flowered types with large button-like centers surrounded by a single row of petals; the picotee zinnias, in which the petal tips are oddly marked, and last but not the least, popular, the meriad dwarf varieties.

MANY new petunias have come to crowd ahead of Rosy Morn, a bright, satisfactory little flower which is still able to hold its own, though born quite a few summers ago.

New bedding or edging petunias have come to the front, among which Pink Gem and Rose Gem are much used. Twinkle, a bright rose, with a white starred center is lovely for the rock garden. Martha Washington has been one of the most satisfactory of the petunia novelties. It makes a compact, spreading plant having flowers of flesh pink, with a violet throat and flower lovers are glad to hear that in a few years they are to have this plant in different colors.

Of the larger petunias, Flaming Velvet, a brilliant, velvety scarlet that came out last year, is a real beauty. Some have had better luck than others with this capricious belle as not all of the seeds come true. Dainty Lady, the first yellow petunia, was heralded with delight and eagerly reached for by garden enthusiasts, and though many were disappointed in it, those who got good samples in such a season as last year, feel that with more selected seed and better weather this novel shade in petunias will be a very welcome addition to our gardens.

Be Good to Your Linoleum

PLAIN linoleums in all colors of the spectrum have become popular for floor coverings, and combinations in two colors, or patterns with a center motif, border or banding are used in the modern homes. The care of plain or patterned linoleum is important but simple, given the proper equipment and wax.

A quality-grade linoleum should last a long time, but the new-looking finish can be preserved a longer time if it is cared for daily. When the linoleum is new, scrub with mild soap and very little water until it is clean, for strong soaps and alkilis are destructive to the linseed gum. Then rinse it thoroughly and allow it to dry. Next, apply one coat of wax and let it harden over night.

A small cloth wrapped around a dry brush or broom may be used to apply the wax, and a floor mop with a weight will effect a good polish. When there is a large surface to be covered, use a special buffer which will work up the shine faster and with the minimum of effort.

When you have gone this far in caring for your linoleum, you have gone only half way. Follow this first polishing by going over that now gleaming surface with a dry mop to remove any dust or foot prints. Then apply the second coat of wax. After the second polishing, the floor covering will be thoroughly protected with a good coat of wax. Frequent use with a dry mop will keep the linoleum spotless save for crumbs or foot prints.

If it becomes necessary to mop the floor often with soap and water, then apply the wax frequently.

There are several types of wax that may be used on linoleum, one paste, one liquid. Any good wax with a resin base may be the choice.

At the first sign of wear, remove all wax and dirt before you give the linoleum a coat of varnish. Once it crackles and cracks it becomes difficult to wax. Also, a break in the linoleum will allow water to seep underneath and loosen the seal of the felt and the linoleum. The protective coat of varnish will help to seal the breaks.

The attractive linoleum wall covering suitable—and increasingly popular—for kitchen and bathroom wall is easily cleaned with soap and water. In its care, waxing is unnecessary to preserve the surface finish. If, however, the fancy turns to a shiny surface, the wall covering may be treated with a wax that gives a high polish.

Some time ago linoleum came out of the kitchen and now it may be used in every room in the house either as a background for scatter rugs, as a rug, or as the only covering on the floor.

Cheese Dishes For Midnight Or Noontime

They Are Especially Popular During the Lenten Season.

By Irma S. Rombauer

HOUSEWIVES who have many luncheons to plan like cheese in the middle of the day, but most men prefer it as a midnight snack. Whenever it is served, it is overwhelmingly popular and as a Lenten ingredient, it works overtime.

Following is a simple—and good—recipe:

BREAD, EGG AND CHEESE DISH

Four servings. Cut into one-half-inch slices, white bread. Spread the slices lightly with butter. Cut two of the slices twice across, making eight triangular pieces. Cut the remaining bread into cubes. There should be about four cups of diced buttered bread. Place layers of diced bread in a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle the layers with one cup grated cheese. Combine and beat: Two eggs, one cup milk, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, a few grains cayenne, one-half teaspoon dry mustard (optional). Pour these ingredients over the bread and cheese. Place the triangles of bread upright around the edge to form a crown. Bake the dish in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 20 minutes. Serve it at once.

—o-o—

HERE IS another simple dish:

BAKED ONIONS WITH CHEESE ON TOAST

Four servings. Peel, slice crosswise and boil until nearly tender, six large white onions. Drain them well. Place in a baking dish four slices buttered toast.

Arrange on the toast the onions and one-half cup grated American cheese.

Beat well: One egg, one cup milk, one-half teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon paprika.

Pour this mixture over the onions. Dot the top with one tablespoon butter.

Bake the dish in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for about 40 minutes.

—o-o—

THE FOLLOWING recipe is well worth trying. You are apt to add it to your list of favorites. Serve it hot as a main dish, accompanied by a fruit or vegetable salad.

Prepare a pie crust. Use one cup flour, one and one-half tablespoons lard, one and one-half tablespoons butter, three-fourths teaspoon any baking powder, one-third teaspoon salt, three tablespoons ice water (or just enough to hold these ingredients together).

Roll the dough and line a small pan or baking dish with it (about eight and one-half inches in diameter). Bake the crust for 20 minutes in a hot oven, 450 degrees. Remove it from the oven, cool it slightly and fill it with the following cheese custard:

Scald one and three-fourths cups top milk or cream.

Reduce the heat and add one cup grated cheese. (This may be American, but use one-third parmesan or Swiss cheese, if available).

Stir until the cheese is melted. Add one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, a few grains of cayenne.

Remove the milk from the stove and beat in one at a time, three eggs.

Fill the pie crust and bake it in a slow oven, 325 degrees, until the custard is firm (for about 45 minutes). The size of the pan is not important, but the custard is best when it is about one and one-half inches deep.

—o-o—

TOMATOES FILLED WITH CRAB MEAT IN CHEESE SAUCE

(Six servings)

Good tomatoes are hard to get now, but parboiled onions or peppers may be substituted.

Hollow and salt, then invert and drain for 20 minutes: Six tomatoes.

Melt over low heat one and one-half tablespoons butter.

Add and cook for three minutes, three tablespoons minced green pepper, three tablespoons minced onion.

Stir in until blended one and one-half tablespoons flour.

Stir in slowly one and one-half cups milk.

When the sauce is thick and boiling add one and one-half cups crab meat, one-third teaspoon salt, a few grains of red pepper, two teaspoons worcestershire sauce, one cup grated American cheese.

Cook and stir these ingredients until the cheese is melted. Fill the tomatoes with this mixture. Bake them in a moderate oven 350 degrees, for about 15 minutes with a very little water to keep them from scorching.

—o-o—

HERE IS A fine Lenten luncheon suggestion:

CHEESE SANDWICH WITH HOT MUSHROOM SAUCE

Bread for this sandwich may be toasted or not. Lettuce, tomatoes, etc., may be placed between the bread in addition to the cheese. Add slices of hard cooked egg, pickles or olives, if you wish. Cover the sandwich with creamed mushrooms.

FIXING UP LIVING ROOM FOR ARRIVAL OF SPRING

By Elizabeth Boykin

"I FEEL like spring," announced Lucy. "But my living room doesn't. Oh, I do long for a really pretty room and I can't spend much. So what shall I do?"

We looked the room over—small, not very bright, with two windows placed together at one end. No fireplace, no interesting wall treatment to help—just plain cream walls and woodwork. The furniture was hodge-podge. An oak bookcase with a fancy top, a straight uncompromising sofa with a mahogany frame and a brown velvet cover, a domestic rug worn and faded, a rocking chair covered in black leather, old but not old enough lamps. The only nice piece was the mahogany desk.

"Yes, you guessed it! We took over Fred's sister's house when they were transferred. We got the furniture for a song as they didn't think it was worth moving."

We suggested taking the doors and fancy woodwork off of the bookcase and painting it warm mulberry color on the outside and eggshell on the inside. Yellow and blue pottery bowls replaced books on the top shelf. The sofa did look pretty hopeless until a well-fitted slip cover with box pleats around the bottom covered it. A glazed chintz with egg-shell background and large blue and yellow flowers. The rug had to stay as it was for the present and so the trick was to center attention elsewhere. One or two good reproductions of really fine pictures would help a lot, too.

The rocking chair had good lines and a nice mahogany frame so this was redone in the same material as the sofa. A foot stool that had been hiding under a carpet covering was re-covered in the same fabric and the rocking chair and stool became a unit and a very attractive one, too. We just threw away all the lamps and bought new but inexpensive ones. A pair of blue pottery ones for end tables on either side of the sofa, and an ivory pottery lamp with a blue linen shade for the desk. Draperies of blue glazed chintz with mulberry ball fringe over simple white point d'esprit tie-backs made all the difference.

The room looks like new and the bill for it all was microscopic which is a lovely spring song for a lady like Lucy.

JIM TOWNE always says he reaches for his wallet when he sees his wife around the house with a yardstick, a pencil and an abstract look. Because that means some kind of an investment in new curtains or bedspreads or chair covers or something. Maybe not expensive, but anyway you know how men are—they love to crab, but adore the effect of your spending.

But Molly does get more gaiety out of a few yards of cretonne than anybody we know. Now she's busy thinking about their dining room which has been the gathering place for the crippled chairs and handme-down rugs ever since they got married. But last fall they got around to buying new dining room furniture, walnut and rather modern, and for Christmas they got a new rug in a dull, dusty apricot color. This spring they're having the walls painted in a very pale version of this same dull apricot, and Molly is thinking about curtains.

She has in mind a lovely chintz that's mostly aquamarine with white, and she plans plain white glass curtains hung straight and tailored. The chair seats are a white leather, and she's considering putting a small love seat in the dining room with a slip cover of the aquamarine chintz.

But it will be the accessories that will give this room its final distinction. Molly has Japanese prints with mirror frames, and a fine mirror plaque for the table centerpiece. Crystal in modern design stands on the buffet and above it at either side Molly is having brackets of mirror to hold small crystal vases in nosegays of flowers or greenery.

Line the bottom of the kitchen waste paper basket with a piece of oil cloth. Nothing can soak through this fabric, and when it is soiled it can be wiped off easily.

MIAMIBEACH, Fla., Feb. 27.

THERE is a completeness of effect about Florida houses that makes them charming to behold and most interesting to study. On the other hand, to me at least, their very perfecton in time begins to pall a little, for many of them seem more like display rooms in a store than houses in which to live.

The reason for this is obvious. First of all, the people who have winter homes down here naturally have money enough to carry out their ideas to the last detail. Then, as the owners are here for only a short time, they usually put the furnishings of their homes into the hands of a competent decorator who has the house ready for them when they arrive for the winter season. And, finally, most of the decorations down here are done in a contemporary spirit which does achieve a spirit of freshness and newness, but which, on the other hand, pretty much precludes the use of the old treasured objects.

However, whether you would care for a typical Florida house in St. Louis or not, there are many unusual, attractive and effective features about the decorations of these houses which might well be used to advantage in your own home.

—o-o—

●COLORING HAS BEEN brought down to a fine art in the decorating of these houses. In fact, in many of them you feel that the colors themselves and their proportionate use in a room are selected with the same care that an artist uses in painting a picture. Due to the bright sunshine most of the colors used here are cool, receding tones and pastel tints which have a most refreshing quality. The names of the colors themselves give a pretty clear idea of their effect—seafoam green, turquoise, primrose yellow and seashell pink.

—o-o—

Usually the walls are tinted in one of these delicate tones and points up with more vivid colorings in the furnishings. One charming room I saw had walls of an indescribable blue gray cast with the fabrics in the tones of a deeper blue and an unusual dulled orange. Another had walls with turquoise with furnishings of yellow and a most unusual clear, light red.

—o-o—

●ONE OF THE cutest and most unusual little decorating tricks that I have ever seen was employed in one house where there is quite a large family. All of the bedrooms opened onto a long gallery which ran the length of the house, giving something of a dormitory feeling to the hall. Cleverly playing up this feeling, instead of trying to get away from it, the name of the occupant of each room was applied to the door with big wooden letters that projected about an inch from the surface. In St. Louis, where long halls seem a part of every apartment, this might prove an amazing treatment.

Bamboo, a material which has become a favorite with decorators all over the country, seems particularly suited to Florida, with its tropic vegetation, and the decorators here have been quick to utilize it. One lovely home that I visited, built on the ocean front, had a barrom featuring this material. The bar itself was made entirely of bamboo, which was also used as a dado on the other three walls. This dado was made of vertical strips of the bamboo and topped off with a rope molding to give it a nautical flavor.

—o-o—

In another house, bamboo was used in a most effective manner in the entrance hall. Here, on the wall opposite the entrance door, was a specially designed piece most ingeniously devised. In the center was a seat upholstered in a stunning deep blue chintz, patterned in a leaf design of apple green. The two end pieces of bamboo had rounded ends in front and the inner sides were left open, for concealing the telephone.

—o-o—

PLANTS ARE USED here in profusion, but as an integral part of the decoration, and it is amazing what life and interest they add to a room. This most unusual way they were used was, as I saw them, in the morning little morning room. This room was circular in design, with a series of windows taking up half the wall space. Under the windows was built a wall stand of the same plaster and color as the rest of the wall and following the same circular line. This wall stand was filled with plants and greenery.

The most unusual planting effect I saw was in a lovely bedroom where, strange as it may sound, the top of the headboard of the bed was built as a plant stand which was filled with growing plants. The wall in back of this headboard was lined with a mirror so that the plants were reflected in it.

And, incidentally, while on the subject of the beds, practically without exception, the ones I saw were huge affairs fully six feet wide, with no footboards and the headboards made of mirror, fabric, some modern wood, even wall paper or the planted effect I have just described.

LIVING HIGH on ZERO a WEEK

Or How to Be a Big-Town Playboy With Only Two Dress Shirts

By LEONARD HALL

NEW YORK, that strange, mad metropolis which clings perilously to the Eastern fringe of the United States, has always been the happy hunting ground of the world's parasites. There is literally something going on every minute which produces vast quantities of costly victuals and drinks, and most of them can be crashed with a pleasant smile and an affable nod to the man on the door.

As a result, the Greater City has always swarmed with thousands of young men, penniless put personable, with their hands out for cocktails and canapes. Free-loading, crashing the stag lines at debutante parties and edging carelessly into great semi-public cocktail parties have become a recognized profession in Manhattan during the height of the season. Veteran spectators agree that never has Gotham been so jammed and crammed with starry-eyed and eager youths on-the-make as it is in this year of no particular grace.

The scent of fresh green money and grapevined word of the Babylonian soirees it is being spent on, have brought thousands of youngsters and oldsters bustling into town to get their share of the social loot. Veteran connivers quickly teach them the elemental technique of the quaint trade—and they are off on a mad career of eating, drinking and making merry on practically nothing a week!

—o-o—

SOMETIMES they are lads just out of the better colleges on the Ivy Circuit, their only possessions a diploma, naturally wavy hair, a claw-hammer coat and two iron shirts. Every incoming liner dumps a small herd of dark, thrilling-looking young foreigners out of its third class, their baggage in their pockets. With speed and zest they head for a hall bedroom in the Forties and then for the stately homes of Park avenue. And within a month you will find them making pretty speeches to Mrs. Twombly-Pooh at her daughter's tossing-out party, munching the cakes, imbibing enormous quantities of bubbly and making mysterious gestures at a pretty deb behind one of the rented rubber plants.

The rarest and most precious commodity in the flossier uptown life of New York is Time, and that is practically all these amiable youths possess, outside presentable evening regalia and perhaps a dimple or two.

Let us see how a young Romeo, forced to leave his home town, perhaps, because he thoughtlessly scribbled the wrong name on a check, can struggle through a New York day without a bob in his jeans.

Lifting himself from the cot in his furnished room, he carefully removes his best day-time pants from beneath the mattress and arrays himself for the afternoon hours. He has been bidden to a jolly little luncheon at the charming bolte known as "Le Pauve Poisson," and thither he betakes himself at one, swinging his stylish malacca whangee. His sole duty is to look romantic, behave with all his native charm and grace, dish his share of the better grade of gossip, and be busy doing his nails when the bad news comes around.

"... NOT NEGLECTING TO SNAFFLE HIS SHARE OF THE EXCELLENT TIDBITS."

These nervous, shrill little luncheons usually last well into the late afternoon, and it is then time for our freebooting hero to saunter off to a nervous shrill cocktail party being tossed by a Mrs. Brown to meet a Balkan count of dubious

"A CLAW-HAMMER COAT, TOP HAT AND A HEALTHY APPETITE IS ALL THE MOOCHER NEEDS."

ess' sagging dinner party, it doesn't really matter. He is already stuffed to the ear-lobes with costly food and drink and he may be quite ready to catch a bit of sleep in his walk-up chamber in order to be at his prettiest for the ordeals of the night.

Once poured into his tail-coat and boiled shirt, the buccaneer may do several of many things. Perhaps he has ogled his way into a fashionable theatrical first-night, where he may mingle in the lobby with the ermines and sables and perhaps be introduced again to Miss Libby Holman, Miss Constance Bennett or any other of the leading Glamor Girls of the hour. He is, of course, prominent on all the "stag lists" for debutante parties, which run continuously in New York, like the corner movie-houses. If several of these social horrors are going on at once, our hero unerringly picks the one which scouts report will offer the best scoffing and sluicing. Or there is a night-club party for him to fill out, at which his picture will be snapped sitting beside one of the prettier Park avenue dolls, class of '31.

And so, by 4 o'clock, the languorous lad should be falling into his little trundle bed, having fought life toe to toe all day, and won by a knockout, without handling so much as cigarette money.

I here picture, of course, an ideal day. Often, of course, things are more difficult, and the boy may miss a meal. Then, too, the unusually large collection of overseas Dream Boys in our midst this year is said to contain an appalling number of culls, returns and Grade D stock in general, and even society is beginning to View With Alarm.

—o-o—

SO far I have only spoken of the high-strung "smart cafe crowd," but don't imagine for a second that New York's free-loading is all done on the proper side of the Grand Central tracks! Oh dear, no! There are literally hundreds of luncheons, teas, movie-star cocktail parties, semi-professional dinners and evening rackets going on all the time, and many thousands of New Yorkers of all sorts wander around town attending as many as they can daily, and thus staying extremely well fed and quite tight all winter without forking over a tuppeny bit.

To the Fourth Estate there is an unhappy side to all of this. Hordes of reporters are sent daily to cover these affairs, which means that every day they must attend one or more eating meetings of business groups or robber barons and listen to long and dreary speeches. This sad type of newspaperman almost invariably dies young of some obscoure digestive complaint, after a few years of drinking strong cocktails and poking gutta-percha chicken around his plate.

Yes—this is the greatest year New York's young moochers have ever known, and there are more of them cluttering up the scenery than ever before in the town's history. For this reason I strongly warn young men not to come seeking such a glamorous career among us.

Frankly, the saturation point for free-loaders in New York has been reached and passed. There are signs that the people who pay the score are rebelling. So be warned. Could there be a more heart-breaking sight than a beautiful gate-crasher and social fungus being given the boot by a Park avenue butler?

A Discussion Of Pneumonia By Physician

"Ten Different Kinds of Germs Capable of Producing This Disease."

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

A READER asks me to describe pneumonia so that the layman can have an intelligent idea of its nature. There are two or three different kinds of pneumonia, all caused by some kind of germ which lights on the tissue of the lung and causes an inflammatory exudate to form.

Broncho-pneumonia probably follows an infection in the bronchial tubes out into a number of small lung endings all over both lungs. Lobar pneumonia, on the contrary, is a mass infection of all the air cells in one lobe of the lung. What is generally called double pneumonia is involvement of more than one lobe.

There are no fewer than 10 different kinds of germs capable of producing pneumonia. Lobar pneumonia is usually caused by some form of the pneumococcus. These small paired germs have been divided into four types, as follows:

Type.	Per Cent Frequency.	Per Cent Mortality.
I	40	25
II	25	50
III	15	60
IV	20	10
	100	36 (average)

Broncho-pneumonia follows such infectious diseases as measles, and may be caused by the same germ which causes influenza or the same germ that causes streptococcic sore throat.

Pneumonia usually comes on suddenly with a chill, pain in the side of the chest, fever, followed shortly by the coughing of rusty sputum which looks as if it contained brick dust. It has been called "brick dust sputum." This appearance is due to the red blood cells coming up into the sputum from the exudate. There is no other disease except malaria which is so frequently ushered in with a chill.

—o-o—

IN UNCERTAIN weather, any of these symptoms, but especially the onset of a chill, should indicate immediate bed rest and the services of your family physician. In treatment, this rest is all-important. Fresh air, sensibly applied, is the next most important consideration. I say "sensibly applied," because frequently in severe weather the physician finds the pneumonia patient in bed with all the windows open, with so much air that he frequently is more shocked than benefited. However, it is a great advance to have air over the old days when a patient was shut up in a stuffy room, the oxygen of which was used by a stove or fireplace.

Doctor Northrup in New York, who started the open air treatment of pneumonia, used to say, "Why make the patient take five breaths when three will do the work?"

Pneumonia is a short, self-limited disease, and neither drugs nor diet are of paramount importance.

In serum, it has been found that Types I and II will respond to a serum, and these constitute, as you see in the table, 65 per cent of the cases.

Typing can now be done rapidly and accurately.

doffed her magnificent diamond and cabochon ruby necklace, a present from Queen Victoria to her grandmother, and checked it with the colored attendant at the powdering room. The maid had a fabulous time for the rest of the evening playing queen.

There was, too, the slight encounter between a noted producer and one of the actors present over a professional difference never entirely clear to the onlookers. The actor swung on the producer, who neatly avoided the blow, but in doing so contrived to slip to the floor, where he remained in a state of tranquil repose for the rest of the evening. "Omigosh," yelled the actor. "I hit too hard and maybe killed him."

Mrs. Nunnally Johnson did the honors by the Dalis since it was reported that she was familiar with the French language. Conversation was animated on both sides and continued for some hours to their entire mutual satisfaction, and it was not until next day that Mrs. Johnson volunteered the information that she couldn't speak a syllable of French. There also was the Murad provoking moment when Mr. Lloyd Pantages spilled a bit of salt on the table and threw his soup over his shoulder for luck. The next day Dali remarked that he felt that Hollywood would be receptive to the tenets of surrealism and, in fact, had apparently anticipated his own exposition of its gaudy mysteries. It was remarked also that the only major prophets of the era not yet in Hollywood were Mr. Hockaday, the feather man, and Tommy Manville. Everyone else seemed to have checked in.

Gadgets to Lighten Work of Housewife

KITCHEN fashions of 1937, displayed in the crisine, glass and housewares show in New York, stressed the practical angle.

Many gadgets displayed in the big exhibit were designed to lighten labor for the modern housewife. A trend toward assembling all kitchen articles in one color was manifest—the new shade being a soft delphinium blue.

New cooking tricks caught the eye of visiting housewives. Among them was a new electric food heater having three compartments in which the hostess—movie or theater bound—can place food to be kept hot and served later when she returns. Toasters browning three pieces of toast, unbreakable glass double boilers, pans marked off to show one, two and three cup measurements, and broccoli steamers were among other interesting cooking utensils displayed.

Outstanding new kitchen equipment included a wall bracket into which four gadgets fit, a can opener which cuts the lid off, a bottle opener which removes the top, a juicer and a knife grinder.

New irons turn off the heat at a certain temperature, preventing scorched linens. New sweepers may be adjusted to the nap of the rug, and new salt shakers have a rolling gadget inside, which is supposed to keep the salt dry.

CALLING ALL DOGS

By Albert Payson Terhune

IF YOU can go to the sales kennels yourself, don't be content with the breeder sending you a puppy, "sight, unseen." Get the pup YOU want. Sit quietly outside the puppy-yard, and use your eyes. Presently the youngsters will have become so used to your presence they will ignore it. And they will go back to their natural ways. That is the time to watch them.

One pup is timid, dull, scared, cringing. You don't want him. Rule him out, no matter what good physical points he may seem to have. You are buying a chum, not a work of art. Another sulks or broods in a corner or snaps spitefully at his comrades' rough invitations to play. Rule him out, too. You don't want him, any more than you would want a surly and sullen human pal.

Pick out, as a rule, the puppy that is full of life and of mischief and of initiative. Those qualities, later on, will simmer down into the ideal traits of a true comrade, if he be wisely trained.

On the physical side, choose the pup with the heaviest and largest bones and the widest and deepest chest and the strongest legs and forefaca. Not just the pup which is most eager to make friends with you. Such an over-friendly baby is likely to grow up into "anyone's dog," not yours, alone.

—o-o—

IF YOU HAD NOT been scolded when first you were taught to feed yourself, your table manners today would bar you from the society of decent people. Your dog has had lessons in table manners. He acquired them several thousand years ago. He retains them to this day.

Can you blame him for wolfing his food without waiting to chew it saintly? In prehistoric days, when a buck or a goat was pulled down by the famished dog-pack, the canine which ate slowly and with refinement was more than likely to find the whole menu gobbled by his greedier brethren before he had had half a meal. The dog that ate hoggishly and fast, gulping unchewed mouthfuls, lived longest and left most descendants.

So, too, a wild dog would rip off a section of the raw meat and would carry it far from the rest of the ravening pack; that he might enjoy it unmolested. Have you never seen your own dog grab up a morsel of food—usually a bone—and do that same thing? When a wild dog had eaten all he could, he buried the rest of his meal, until he should be hungry again; lest other dogs find and devour it in his absence.

Now do you understand your own dog's passion for burying bones and for bolting his dinner?

Courting Trouble

"PARDON—CAN YOU DIRECT ME TO THE MARRIAGE LICENSE BUREAU—AND IF YOU AREN'T DOING ANYTHING FOR FIFTEEN OR TWENTY YEARS, WILL YOU GO ALONG?"

"Take Children to Church; Do Not Send Them"---Patri

By Angelo Patri

"MY SON refuses to go to church any more. He says he doesn't see the good of it. He'd rather take a walk in the country or stay home and read a good book. His father and I do not go often. I have to get the dinner ready, and my husband is tired after his week's work and likes to rest and read his paper. Don't you think that a young man of 18 ought to go to church?"

How about an old man and an old woman, at least old enough to father and mother a young man of 18? Why don't they go with the young man they are anxious to train in righteous ways? Dinners can be prepared on Saturday, for the greater part, and so lighten Sunday's labors. Father could rest and read after church as well as before it.

The only way to get children to go to church and like it is to go with them. Sending children to church and Sunday school is not going to keep them going there. That is done by taking them, staying with them, sharing all that goes on there with the children and actually behaving as though it were a pleasure.

—o-o—

CHURCH SERVICE is a spiritual relaxation. At least that is what it is intended to be, and if one goes there with that idea one is likely to have it realized. There is a mood for church-going. It is induced by preparation which consists of meditation, prayer and faith. Go to church in faith-believing and you will find rest, a truer, more lasting rest and peace than any book or paper, read in the narrowness of an easy chair, can ever bring.

Young people who have been reared in the church habit seldom break away from it. If the routine is established early; if the whole family follows it carefully, no thought of breaking it enters their heads. It is the thing to do on Sunday morning and it is done.

The home background is what usually decides the children. If they hear church and church members spoken well of, respected, supported loyally, they follow in respect and loyalty. But—and this often happens—if they hear, "Hm! Charged us $25 for it, eh? Suppose he has to make up his church subscriptions some way. Fifteen would have been plenty, but he's a pillar of the church."

"Did you hear about Mrs. Gaby? What do you know about that? You might know. These goody-goody folk bear watching. I'll bet she hasn't missed a church service in 10 years. Right up in front and then she does this."

The idea seems somehow to be that if a man or woman attends church service regularly he is charged to keep himself unspotted from the world, and should he become even faintly smudged by his contact with his not-so-good neighbors, he is doubly damned. Children absorb all these implications, attitudes and actions, and behave accordingly.

Children go to church and profit by attendance there if they have been reared that way. Take them; don't send them.

sent him home to his wife. At which he swore a great oath and shouted, "I'll fix my wife."

THE DISTINGUISHED lawyers for the defendant, former Governor Charles P. Johnson, Nat C. Dryden, and Charles Noland, sought to prove that he had a "heritage of alcoholism," that he was a "victim of sub-acute hallucinatory paranoia," and in "a transitory frenzy" at the time of the crime. From the day he was locked up, he insisted, that he was not Duestrow at all, but Gen. Brandenburg, and that he had no connection whatever with the killings. The accounts made much of the fact that the prisoner smoked one cigarette after another, because nicotine was then thought to be harmful to the mind.

On a change of venue, Duestrow was tried first at Union in July, 1895. Over a period of three years the case was reviewed four times by the courts. He was finally convicted, and sentenced to be hanged. When appeal to the United States Supreme Court was denied, the date for the execution at Union was set. Feb? 16, 1897, at 1 p. m.

From his cell the murderer could hear the construction of the gibbet in progress. But he still defiantly contended that he was Gen. Brandenburg and that he was there to join forces with the General in charge of the western division. Not until dawn of the day set for his execution, did he break. Suddenly he flung himself on his cot and between sobs blurted out a confession. Later in the morning the Sheriff allowed him whisky in small doses, his spirits climbed, and he resumed his Prussian pose. Just before the trap was sprung, when he was asked "Arthur Duestrow, have you anything to say?" he replied, "I am not Arthur Duestrow. But I say we shall have war."

Two months after the crime was committed, Louis Blanke bought the house at 1724 South Compton avenue from Duestrow, and moved his family into it. It is still owned by the Blanke sons, but is rented to tenants. The only alteration the new owners made was in the great iron gate, at the front entrance through a brick and stone wall, eight-feet high. They changed the gold letters "A. D. to "B."

Tax On Bachelors

By Damon Runyon

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.

WILLIAM A. RINGLER, a member of the Delaware Legislature, has introduced a bill providing for a $50 yearly tax on bachelors more than 30 years of age.

Of course, the idea is not new. We believe a number of countries have a bachelors' tax. As a matter of fact, the United States has an indirect bachelor tax. The bachelors are denied the income exception allowed a married man for the good wife.

We had no thought of commenting on Mr. Ringler's bill, which we regard as sound enough in principle, until a friend of ours in Wilmington, that mightily pleasant little metropolis of Delaware, called us up and asked our opinion of the tax strictly as an economic proposition.

Our friend is a bachelor. He has never contemplated matrimony. But he is 31 years old, and would be subject to the bachelor tax if Ringler's bill becomes law.

Our friend asked us if we thought he would be saving money by marrying, and avoiding the tax. Or would it be more economical for him in the long run to pay the tax, and remain single?

—o-o—

● NOW WE WANT IT distinctly understood that we have no intention whatever of dropping in the zing on marriage.

We are in favor of it. We have nothing but boosts for the holy state of matrimony. We cannot understand the pessimistic thoughts of a chap like Montaigne when he asked:

"Is not marriage an open question, when it is alleged from the beginning of the world, that such as are in the institution wish to get out, and those who are out wish to get in?"

—o-o—

But a friend has asked us a fair question, and we feel duty bound to give him a fair answer. We must tell him that as an economic proposition, the $50 tax is the better deal of the two.

We are aware that in Delaware marriages are long enduring. By marrying now our friend, after 30 years of wedded bliss, will have avoided the payment of $1000 in taxes. We can see how that might sound tempting to bachelors.

—o-o—

● BUT LET US take the first "sling," as the boys say, of marriage. We will disregard the overhead of the courtship leading up to marriage as expense that a bachelor might have incurred anyway, if he had only been on a mild bat.

The first real item in marriage is the dentist's bill. This begin to occur anywhere from one to eight months after marriage, and ere the honeymoon has waned. The item may run anywhere from $10 up to $500.

We once agitated the passing of a law requiring parents to deliver the blushing bride to the happy groom with all her teeth fully repaired, and guaranteed to last at least two years before she had to see the dentist again.

Nothing came of our efforts. Parents are still palming off their daughters on unsuspecting young men as dentally sound, and the young man does not discover the truth until he gets his first bill from the dentist.

—o-o—

And we must tell our friend in Wilmington that this is an expense that carries on, not just a few weeks, or months, but across the years.

It is a fixed charge, and as permanent as the upkeep of the good wife's hair, after she has the color changed. This occurs within a year after marriage, as a rule. While the initial cost of the changing of the color does not exceed $15, the maintenance of the color becomes quite an item as time marches on.

—o-o—

● IT HAS ALWAYS been our contention that if a man marries a brunette, he should be protected by statute against her becoming a blonde some Tuesday afternoon when she does not happen to have anything else to do.

It is common sense that if a man likes blondes, he will marry them that way. But if he marries a brunette, and she turns blonde on him at a cost of $15, we say it is something like obtaining money under false pretenses.

The same thing applies, of course, to the blondes who turn brunette, though it has been our observation that this does not commonly occur. Blondes turn redheads more than anything else. We have no complaint against redheads.

At $50 per year as against matrimony our friend in Wilmington will be getting plenty the best of it. We mean as an economic proposition, of course. We are always glad to answer questions on problems of this nature.

Forehead Ringlets

Forehead ringlets are said to be next in the general trend of hair styles. They take the place of the high rolls which are worn so extensively at present and are reminiscent of the tintype days when a woman wasn't satisfied with her own hair, but added store ringlets to her brow. What the new style will do to our millinery one can only guess but even now the French milliners are thinking in terms of poke bonnets and off-the-forehead halos to give the ringlets a chance.

Glamorize WITH ANITA LOUISE

ANITA LOUISE IS A PERFECT PRODUCT OF HER PROGRAM.

By ALICE WADE ROBINSON

NOTED BEAUTY NEWS AUTHORITY

ANITA LOUISE tells me: "Immaculateness is the most important ingredient of feminine charm."

Just one look at Anita Louise and we know at once that she herself is the embodiment of the quality she stresses as a fundamental of woman's beauty. This exquisite young star radiates good health, vitality and such daintiness of person that the onlooker is gratified. Yet it's a comfort to know that it's no magical recipe that has given Anita Louise her smooth skin, her shining hair, her graceful, well-cared-for hands. It's nothing complicated.

It's "early to bed," of course. Lots of sleep in a room where lots of air comes blowing in. It's the eating of simply prepared food in generous enough quantities to take away hunger without the oppressive fullness. It's the slow sipping of from eight to nine glasses of cool but uniced water during the day. And it's the getting in as much exercise in the open air as a crowded studio day allows—a brisk walk, shoulders back, head high, or a sprint across the lot if time is short. Deep breathing before an open window helps.

She has no beauty secrets. The exception lies in a fondness for and a reveling in two things: in soap and brushes. Anita Louise could not retain that amazing skin-transparency unless she kept herself as immaculate as she does. Warm sudsy water bubbling with myriads of those fine cleansing globules which our American toilet soap produces is an investment in skin beauty, that's true, but it's an investment in health too. Vitality is direct heir to the rite of the bath. She adds other baths, too, to her daily schedule—a tepid shower followed by a cool one before dinner, a warm relaxing bath before bed.

. . . TALCUM OR DUSTING POWDER.

And she washes her face. But that's not surprising. It's a rare woman nowadays who has not gone back to the old "shining morning face" regime on which she was brought up. So Anita Louise bathes her face in warm water aided and abetted with the neutral suds of a good soap. Sometimes she uses a cleansing cream first, and ordinarily after many rinsings in water as cool as it runs from the faucet, she molds into face and neck a rich tissue cream (especially at night). Daytimes she guards her complexion with the thinnest possible film of foundation cream or lotion.

Bath brushes—large, fat ones that cling to the hand through a strap, long-handled ones that massage and cleanse at the same time. Hand brushes, a dozen tooth brushes, nail brushes, hair brushes of varying shapes and sizes, but all of the real bristle type which as they stimulate lend sheen and gloss to each individual hair strand. Anita Louise, following good hair health practice as the best salons teach it, brushes her hair up from the temples and forehead, up from the back of the head—always up. Up, up until the hair looks as wild as a Fiji Islander's. Up and out and down the full length of each hair strand. The incidental massage which the scalp receives from a daily methodical brushing—at least 50 strokes a day—increases hair strength and gloss and acts, so hair authorities tell me, as insurance against premature gray hair. What matter that you have a permanent? It will look the more natural, be more adaptable.

MOVIE DRINKING SCENES FROWNED ON BY HAYS

By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 27.

THE Hays office checks the still pictures as well as the moving ones for contaminatory content, and is conscientious about it. . . . The other day it returned a still of a Pretty Young Thing with the notation that the P. Y. T. was all right, but that a statue in the background would have to be retouched.

And a new campaign is on, from the same headquarters, against the movie scenes in which intoxicants are consumed unnecessarily and promiscuously. . . . If a cocktail is essential to the plot, it is all right . . . but a cocktail poured just to give an actor something to do with his hands gets the frown. . . . Character most likely to be hard hit by the veto is bibulous Nick Charles who (in the person of William Powell) solves murder mysteries between and during drinks. . . . But Nick already has an "out" . . . for "After the Thin Man" left him an expectant father . . . and what could be sweeter than a climb on the wagon for the bairn's sake?

Scribes Barry Trivers and Robert Andrews have written a mystery screenplay for the color cameras. . . . It has to be done in color because color solves it. . . . Josephine Dillon (Gable) is luring voice pupils by giving sound and screen tests right in her studio, with Max Factor doing the make-up. . . . The ex-Mrs. Clark spent many weeks studying sound and photography.

—o-o—

BASIL RATHBONE'S secret ambition is to play "Lafayette"—taking the story from the time of the hero's farewell to Washington. . . . It's a bad idea to set your heart on a role, however. . . . I remember Ralph Bellamy once picked out a story he said he'd give his right arm to play. . . . He was so keen about it he'd scarcely mention it for fear some company would discover it and cast somebody else. . . . Well, Victor McLaglen played it and the story was "The Informer."

I must ask Garbo, next time I drop in for tea, whether this current item is true: that she turned down "The Garden of Allah" as a vehicle on the grounds that no man would leave HER to return to a monastery.

—o-o—

CANDID STILL photography has given way to candid still photography to such an extent that even within the studio a gal's glamor isn't safe.

Sweetened portraits of monotonously beautiful goddesses used to be Hollywood's sole offerings to the public prints. These were calculated to build the illusion that a screen actress was somehow remote, superior and unlike the girl next door.

Then came the candid camera. Some of the results made it apparent that movie stars, far from being Olympians, are just exactly like the girl next door.

Glamor (or call it by what name you will) is what the movies have to sell. Inevitably, the moguls view with alarm. But with more alarm, apparently, they view the failure of their conventional portraiture to hit the public eye. A studio photographer tells me he expects soon to throw away his 8x10 camera, because everything has to be candid to get printed.

So, in studio restaurants and on sets, the shutters click. Occasionally a picture more interestingly human than flattering comes from studio sources. (I hear Joan Blondell was in, not long ago, to express her opinion of the fellow who let one of hers get by.)

If I were a studio photographer, I'm afraid I'd gloat a bit at the rise of candor in my trade—even though policy forbade my practicing it to any great extent. For these boys, making a living at a tough job, come in contact with stellar temperament at its best and worst.

Chintz draperies should be shaken out every few weeks and then brushed off with a stiff brush. It is best to shake them out-of-doors if possible.

Flowers Are More Subdued In New Prints

THE flowers that bloom on the retail counters, are becoming more subdued. The splash of color and the size of petals which characterized the first rush of after-winter prints has given place to shrinking violets, lowly buttercups and tiny wild flowers. Furthermore these fabric posies are huddled close together on their settings as though they were unable to compete with the brilliance of the background.

Prints, so any women who goes shopping will discover, make up the larger part of the displays in the fabric sections of the shops. Pattern and design of materials are emphasized this season and woolens follow the lead of silks, synthetics and cottons in the display of interesting motifs. The allover effects are noted most frequently as the season has advanced in contrast to those early widely spaced and very large designs. In addition to the flower designs there are various sized dots grouped together, romantic motifs that remind of the coming coronation and plenty of modern versions of fantasy.

ANOTHER interesting development in printed materials is the application of color over color, the background being deep red, for example, while over this is a blue mottled effect with the tiny designs in light tones scattered on top. The return of pussy willow silks to the realm of fashion indicates that old-fashioned foulards may not be far behind. Printed failles and grosgrains likewise are of daytime interest in the silks and synthetics while embossed brocades, flowered, starched net and embroidered taffetas add the influence of colorful patterns to the evening mode.

Woolens created for extremely tailored suits follow the lead of men's styles with pin stripes dominating. In the softer woolens there are porous materials with tiny raised patterns of a deeper or lighter tone, haircloths with light, feathery interest, and whipcords. Alpaca has been revived and there is indication of many plaid sports woolens.

—o-o—

THE EMPHASIS upon fabric ornamentation continues through the cottons with the result that old-fashioned muslins with allover designs in flower tints are advocated for evening dresses as well as for blouses and children's clothes. Many plaid lines are being used by the French designers, which may hint at the forerunner of a new trend. At present plaid ginghams and piques are shown here more extensively. Embroidered organdies and other sheer materials which combine crispness with surface design are introduced for late spring evening frocks and for blouses to wear now with first spring suits.

Sleeves Important

Sleeves continue to be important in spring evening frocks and there are as many new models that have the short draped sleeves as there are those with the strap decolletage. When the sleeves appear they are equally as long as those on many of the daytime dresses. A shoulder drape which gives definite width and height without the regulation puffiness of last autumn is a noteworthy change in the development of sleeve styles.

Tyrolean Knit Vestee

By Mayfair

THIS season, fashion turns to the Tyrol and this Tyrolean Knit Vestee will fill many needs. It is colorful, warm and serviceable as well as extremely becoming to everyone. We know you will want to make this in various color combinations

Pattern No. 200 can be obtained in sizes 12, 14, 16 and 18. Each pattern includes a tissue pattern for blocking the garment after it is knit, easy-to-follow working instructions without abbreviations, a chart for assembling, detail of finishing edge and a full-size diagram of embroidered spray, as well as a sample of yarn used on the original model. Send 10 cents, coin preferred, for this pattern to St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Needlework Dept., 121 East 24th Street, New York, N. Y.

Monograms in Home

IF you are monogram-minded, and what woman isn't, decide upon the type of lettering which suits you best and follow the same style throughout your home. The towels in your bathroom, the dish towels in your kitchen, the sheets on your bed and the linens on your table will become more impressive and individual if all display the same design of letters. Bold effects are modish at present, but that doesn't mean that feminine script should be discarded or that old-English lettering has lost its charm.

Cape as Spring Wrap

If you are looking for a spring wrap which typifies the new season consider the dramatic aspects of a cape. Not only are capes appearing as part of three-piece wardrobe suits but they are rivaling separate coats for popularity. Some of them are finger tip length but more reach to the knees. The tailored versions have a military aspect while those for dressy occasions are elaborately trimmed with fluffy furs and are made of softly finished materials.

DRAMA MOTION PICTURES MUSIC

Academy Plays Favorites In Picking Its Winners

Dark Horses Don't Have a Chance at Gold Statuettes in Annual Hollywood Event—Number of Stars Kept Down To a Glittering 23, in Estimate of Producer Lubitsch.

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 27.

AFTER seeing Hollywood's main sporting event of the year, the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, run and over with this afternoon, the film boys and girls can now get back to wondering who will capture the prizes—just little gold-plated statuettes—in the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Derby. The winners are to be announced this week with the blue ribbons, and the gold-plated ornaments going to the "best" actor and actress of the screen of 1936.

However, no new movie stars, no rank outsiders, will be uncovered by the awards. Five men and five women have been nominated and only they are under final consideration. Not a newcomer in the lot, unless you can call Luise Rainer and Gladys George newcomers, and both of them are already pretty firmly established with the cinema customers. Norma Shearer, Carole Lombard and Irene Dunne are the other three ladies to be voted upon while the men, Paul Muni, Gary Cooper, Walter Huston, William Powell and Spencer Tracy, have all been before the cameras for many years.

When it comes down to picking the best performer each year there is not much—or not many perhaps would be better—to select from if you happen to look for best performances only among the established stars for, in this funny picture business, there are just 23 electrically-lighted names of the first boxoffice magnitude. That figure, 23, is not ours, understand. At the Academy award dinner a year ago Ernst Lubitsch set the number in a pleasant little speech which gave offense only to all but 23 of Hollywood's actors.

There have been a good many Hollywood dinners since that evening. Not Academy dinners, to be sure, but dinners just the same, with speechmaking and the usual dinner conversation. So far as we know Herr Lubitsch's estimate was not disputed at any of them. We ran into him the other day on the Paramount lot where he is preparing, finally, to direct Marlene Dietrich in the often postponed picture, "Angel." Thought maybe he had revised his list and we asked him how many stars there were now.

"Twenty-three," he said. "Marlene Dietrich and 22 others. That makes 23, doesn't it?"

NOW, of course, Lubitsch might be considered biased in respect to Miss Dietrich, seeing as he is directing her new picture. Or maybe he just has a fixation on the number. Or even perhaps it is a law of nature for Hollywood to have just 23 stars whose names are sufficient to draw crowds into any movie theater regardless of what the film may be.

Since Hollywood grinds out at least 600 feature films a year, not one of which actually loses money, one wonders how they parcel out that handful of stars. If you leave out the Dionne girls you would have only a mere 18 to go around. Of course if you counted the Misses Dionne as one you could do a little better.

There are a lot of movie fans who consider that even 23 stars is too many. They would rather see a good picture, well played, any time rather than a star in a so-so production. A case in point is a sparkling little film called "The King and the Chorus Girl," which we saw previewed this week. Aside from its own merit as charming entertainment it serves to make, in one jump, a new star—maybe the twenty-fourth—of Fernand Gravet, a French import, who is going to crowd Clark Gable and Robert Taylor pretty close from now on. Mervin Le Roy, in making the picture, got away from the "name" fetish although he happened to create another name in doing it just as Wesley Ruggles did when he made "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie," and put Gladys George in the title role to find that he had not only a good film on his hands, but also another star. If Miss George should get the Academy Award this week maybe she will be Lubitsch's No. 24.

AND Leo McCarey is doing the same thing in "The Years Are So Long," based on Josephine Lawrence's novel with Beulah Bondi in the chief part—or in a part of equal weight with Victor Moore's. Miss Bondi, one of the most capable stock players ever to come from the stock theater, has no fragile talent. The most difficult roles are not beyond the scope of this player who has acted at least 250 parts on the stage. The point is that she is "starring" for the first time in her film career.

Perhaps McCarey is not so daring as you might imagine. "The Years Are So Long" is a drama, we are told, that stands on its own legs and needs the support of no ultra-reputation to bolster it up. It hasn't very much to do with young love or passion. It poses a universal question—what shall be done with the old folk? — and treats of it in a moving and homespun fashion, with the background of an ordinary American home.

Miss Bondi depicts an aged mother come to live in her declining years with her married daughter, and quite upsets the routine of the family. And what complicates the matter still further is that her husband, played by Moore, lives at the home of another child. It is all very poignant, but not doleful. For life is never wholly tragic, and the wry humor of Moore, who plays 73-year-old Barkley Cooper, was conclusive when we watched the shooting of one of his scenes. Miss Bondi exacts the last drop of comedy from the role of her bland, placid dowager, who fails to see that the world has changed.

Symphony, Chorus And Arthur Fear in "Belshazzar's Feast"

ARTHUR FEAR, noted English baritone, will be soloist with the St. Louis Symphony Chorus and St. Louis Symphony Orchestra in the presentation of William Walton's short choral work, "Belshazzar's Feast," feature of the week's symphony programs at the Municipal Auditorium Opera House on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. Vladimir Golschmann will conduct.

Offered for the first time in St. Louis, "Belshazzar's Feast" has already proved itself a popular work at music festivals elsewhere. It was first performed in Leeds, England, in October, 1931, has been done by the Philadelphia Orchestra, under the direction of Leopold Stokowski, several times, and at Ann Arbor, Mich., and Cincinnati, O. Based on the familiar Biblical story of the fall of Babylon, the work is intensely dramatic. Only one soloist is required.

Mozart's sacred choral composition, "Ave Verum Corpus," also will be given by the orchestra and chorus for the first time this week-end. The motet is from the Liturgy of the Roman Catholic Church, and is sung in adoration of the Blessed Sacrament at the Offertory of the Mass and the Forty Hours' Devotion. Mozart wrote the work, just six months before his death, for a choirmaster at Baden who had always been kind to the Mozart family.

Fear, well-known singer in England, has been popular in this country since he made his first appearance in 1934. He will be making his St. Louis debut with the Symphony Orchestra. He is a member of the Covent Garden Opera Company, London, where he sings leading roles and is the only vocalist who has ever appeared in the three principal bass-baritone roles at Covent Garden and with the British National Opera Company, namely Hans Sachs in "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," "Falstaff," and "Rigoletto." He also is the youngest artist ever asked to appear in the role of Hans Sachs at Convent Garden.

Besides his appearance in the Walton offering, Fear will sing the two "Hans Sachs" mondologues—"Wahn! Wahn!" and "Was Duftet Doch der Flieder"—from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger." The arias will be sung during the first half of the program, when only work by Wagner will be given.

Golschmann will present the prelude to Wagner's "Parsifal," and the same composer's introduction to Act III, Dance of the Apprentices and Procession of the Mastersingers, from "Die Meistersinger." The "Parsifal" prelude has not been played at a local symphony concert in nearly 10 years.

Only two regular pairs of concerts remain on the orchestra's schedule after this week's concerts. On March 12-13, Albert Spalding, American violinist, will appear as the final soloist of the season. He will play Bruch's violin concerto in G minor. Golschmann's program will include the overture to Smetana's comic opera, "The Bartered Bride"; Roussel's "The Spider's Banquet," and Tschaikowsky's Overture-Fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet."

The season's final concerts will take place on March 19-20, and the following week Golschmann will serve as guest conductor of the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra at concerts on March 25-27. He will return to St. Louis to rejoin his own orchestra, which, after a week's layoff during Holy Week, will complete its season with a tour of 13 Southern cities.

The complete program for this week's concerts follows:

Prelude to "Parsifal" — — — Wagner
Two Monologues of "Hans Sachs" from "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg"— Wagner
a—"Wahn! Wahn!"
b—"Was Duftet Doch der Flieder"
Introduction to Act III, dance of the Apprentices and Procession of the Mastersingers from "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg" — — — — — Wagner
"Ave Verum Corpus," Motet for mixed chorus and small orchestra — —Mozart
"Belshazzar's Feast" for mixed chorus, baritone solo and orchestra— — William Walton

Grace Moore, Good Sport, Sings for All Comers

By Colvin McPherson

GRACE MOORE'S new picture is as fortunate a combination of music, romancing and general nonsense as she has had since "One Night of Love." Not an operatic triumph, mind you, for if Miss Grace Moore, as the announcements respectfully call her, sang much opera this time, somebody forgot to put it in the shipment. "When You're in Love," at the Ambassador, is written and directed by Robert Riskin, who may be remembered as Frank Capra's writing Man Friday. It's more like Capra than the concert stage.

Miss Moore, in the present imagining as much alone in the world as Miss Mae West, is in Mexico, to which she has been deported because Uncle Sam has had enough Australians for the year, and Miss Moore is Australian. Since she wishes to return, in fact must return, to help Uncle Walter (Henry Stephenson) put over his music festival, she spends many a weary hour trying to figure a way out. Cary Grant, itinerant American artist, is the solution. For a certain sum of money, he agrees to become Mr. Grace Moore and help get her across the border. From there it's a series of ups and downs until both are domesticated.

The song program opens with Miss Moore singing "Siboney" in Spanish to the guests at a fancy Mexican hotel, continues with Jerome Kern songs for the lovers and kiddies, tries out "In the Gloaming" on the homefolks and the dog, does "Minnie the Moocher" for Cary's pals and the Schubert "Serenade" for those who pay, at the song festival. Notable for future repertory is the kiddies' song, "The Whistling Boy," as innocent and lilting little thing as Kern has ever written.

Slow in starting and revealing some awkwardness of direction, "When You're in Love" picks up a sense of humor and about halfway along has a homey quality that makes you smile all over your face. That Miss Moore is in good voice and knows something of acting will be taken for granted. Cary Grant, although alternately sounding like Ben Bernie and Lionel Barrymore, has an amusing way of doing things a wholesome boyishness and the right reactions to all situations. Next to him are Aline MacMahon and Thomas Mitchell. Luis Alberni has to eat crow.

Staging of musical numbers helps greatly to make them effective. The patio for "Siboney," and male chorus; the rehearsal hall and the youthful prodigies for "The Whistling Boy;" the festival amphitheater, which makes Municipal Opera look like a few friends over to sit on the lawn, all come into the film in natural consequence. Once, Miss Moore and Grant wander onto a game preserve number, and find all the folk of the forest ready to listen. That's a bit too plushly romantic, but can stand.

Borrah Minevitch and his Harmonica Rascals are headliners on the stage program. The act, part of which was seen lately in the film, "One In a Million," is probably the best-seasoned and best-timed on the road today. The tough little guy is still there, to help keep the fine balance between pantomime comedy and virtuoso playing on the mouth organs. The musical program includes "The Flight of the Bumble Bee." Even as some patrons may be glad that Grace Moore doesn't go in for a great deal of opera, so they may reflect that another thing to be thankful for is that Rimsky-Korsakoff didn't make an opera of "The Bee."

Green Light.

SOMETHING more has been done with Lloyd C. Douglas' "Green Light" than was squeezed out in his "Magnificent Obsession" last spring. In the place of a gushy love story and much time spent showing off Mr. Robert Taylor and Mr. Taylor's fine teeth, we have, in this instance, a plot that will hold water as well as tears, a cast that completely eclipses that of "Magnificent Obsession" and a clearer idea.

There was some talk of an idea in "Magnificent Obsession" but it is not merely talk in "Green Light." The sermon is this: Life at times gives up the stop signal, for no apparent good reason (exasperating even to a minister, it seems) and then tells us to go ahead. We realize it was all for a purpose and so on. This theme may be argued, as all themes may, but the picture at the Fox illustrates it in dramatic fashion, and sufficiently, I think, for the mass of moviegoers.

Getting back to cast: Errol Flynn is a young surgeon with a sporty-looking automobile, a nurse, Margaret Lindsay, in love with him, and a friend, Dr. Walter Abel, who is studying ticks and spotted fever. One of Errol's patients is the wealthy and devout Mrs. Spring Byington. Her spiritual adviser is Dean Cedric Hardwicke. Dr. Henry O'Neill is supposed to operate on Mrs. Byington, gets in late, bungles the job and the lady dies. Dr. Flynn, to use unprofessional language, has to take the rap. Stop signal, so far as his career is concerned, and as Dean Hardwicke tells him.

Mrs. Byington's daughter, Anita Louise, returns from Europe, meets Dr. Flynn, falls in love with him and then falls out again when she finds who he really is. Dr. Flynn runs off to Montana to help with the spotted fever, tries a serum on himself in the usual way, and traffic moves on again. A seven-fold amen in Dr. Hardwicke's cathedral ties up the finish.

Borrah Borzage's direction has not lifted "Green Light" far above the usual blends of life, death, hospitals, religion and splendid sacrifices, oh which the movies rely so much, but it has made individual scenes tense and highly meaningful. Hardwicke, known by all who saw his unforgettable Charles II in "Nell Gwyn," is beautifully benign in "Green Light." Flynn, in his first modern role, is personable and Walter Abel is standard. Margaret Lindsay does her work, Anita Louise, as colorless as cigarette cellophane, is not required to do much. And a line should be thrown to the dog, Sylvia, a handsome and animated creature.

The Jones family comedy, "Off to the Races," which the Fox also provides, deals with Slim Summerville, a sponging poor relation; his horse and the big race, where Dad rides the sulky and brings old Jerry B. home a winner.

The Great O'Malley.

HOW a hard-boiled cop learns to temper justice with mercy is told to the world this week in "The Great O'Malley," at the Missouri. When things start, Pat O'Brien (let's just call him O'Brien instead of O'Malley, if you don't mind), reads all the city ordinances to the last sentence and makes himself a nuisance by arresting people for a lot of silly things. Then he causes Humphrey Bogart to lose his job, Humphrey turns to crime, and O'Brien has committed a grave injustice. His superior officers, a little disgusted with him, put him to watching school children to break his spirit.

At school, O'Brien meets little Sybil Jason, Humphrey's crippled youngster, and Sybil in her too, too appealing way, wins him over. He gets an operation for her, has Daddy paroled and tries to straighten things up in every way. While Pat wrestles with Irish brogue, and Sybil drags a leg around the schoolyard, it is interesting to watch Bogart's performance. There, my friends, is a real actor.

"Breezing Home," the double-biller at the Missouri, may be described as another of those California dramas in which somebody sits on a fence, watching a race horse, clocks him at 1:15, 2:30 or any time before dark, and figures he'll win the Santa Anita Handicap, hands and feet down. Alan Baxter plays menace, continues to show great possibilities as such. The new issue of "March of Time" at the Missouri contains some surprising information on the liquor problem as it is today, reviews the career of Mustapha Kemal and goes into the origin of swing music.

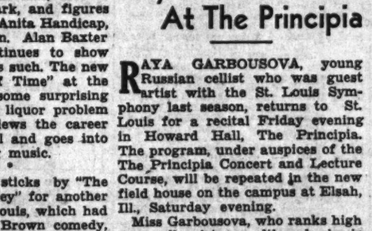
Loew's Theater sticks by "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" for another week, and the St. Louis, which had promised a Joe E. Brown comedy, plays only the second-run Lily Pons musical, "That Girl From Paris." With acrobatics, juggling, kid imitations and the like, the St. Louis stage show shapes up pretty well.

Chamber Music Premiere

The St. Louis Chamber Music Society announced yesterday it would present the local premiere of Vaughan Williams' "On Wenlock Edge," a group of six songs for string quartet, piano and tenor, at the final concert of the season, Sunday evening, March 21, at the St. Louis Woman's Club, 4600 Lindell boulevard. Poems of the songs are from the "Shropshire Lad" by A. E. Housman, one of the most famous of English lyric poets. The music is modal in character and derives, in spirit, from English and Irish folk music, but the harmonies are modern. The program will be completed with quartets by Beethoven and Smetana.

"Winterset" Performance

A special benefit performance of Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset" will be given for the Delta Delta Delta, sorority of Washington University and alumnae, at the Little Theater, 812 Union boulevard, on Saturday evening. The cast is the same that appeared during the regular repertory run. Two one-act plays, Percival Wilde's "Moving Finger" and John Drinkwater's "The Storm," will be played by the Little Theater laboratory group tonight and tomorrow night.



ABOVE, DONALD MACDONALD AND CLINTON SUNDBERG, MERRY WAGS, OF "BOY MEETS GIRL," AT THE AMERICAN; AT RIGHT, BETTY FIELD, THE GIRL.

BORRAH MINEVITCH, HARMONICA IMPRESARIO, AT THE AMBASSADOR

Raya Garbousova At The Principia

RAYA GARBOUSOVA, young Russian cellist who was guest artist with the St. Louis Symphony last season, returns to St. Louis for a recital Friday evening in Howard Hall, The Principia. The program, under auspices of the The Principia Concert and Lecture Course, will be repeated in the new field house on the campus at Elsah, Ill., Saturday evening.

Miss Garbousova, who ranks high as a cello virtuoso although she is only 26 years old, was born in Tiflis, where her father is still a professor in the Conservatory. She began cello lessons at the age of seven, with an uncle; was admitted to the Conservatory when she was mine, and was graduated at 14, with high honors. She then went to Moscow on a concert tour and later studied with the famous Pablo Casals. After many engagements in Europe, she made her first American appearance in December, 1934.

Her program at The Principia is:

Concert in C major — — — — — Haydn
Allegro moderato—Andante
Allegro vivo
Larghetto — — — — — — — — Nardini
Allegro spirituoso — — — — — Senaille
Allegretto grazioso — — — — — Schubert
Rondo — — — — — — — — Boccherini
Sonatina — — — — — — — — — Weber
Rocco Variations — — — — Tschaikowsky
Largo and Rondo — — — — — Weber
Nocturne — — — — — — — — — Chopin
Zapateado — — — — — — — — Sarasate
Wolfgang Rebner at the piano.

Holmes on Spain

Spain as it was before the civil war began, and as it is today, will be contrasted by Burton Holmes in his lecture, "The Glories of Spain," at the Municipal Auditorium Opera House at 8:15 o'clock tomorrow night. Holmes, who has lived in Spain and traveled extensively in the country, will discuss mainly its architecture and art, including, however, newsreel shots of the destruction at Irun, San Sebastian and Toledo. The lecture is the second in his current series.

'Boy Meets Girl' Returns; 'Ziegfeld Follies' Booked

American Theater Offers Additional Run of Comedy Seen Last November—Motion Picture Version of "Good Earth" Week From Tonight, Big Revue March 28.

BACK from a jaunt to the West Coast and cities en route, the Spewack comedy, "Boy Meets Girl," comes tonight to the American Theater, where it played for a week last November. On completing seven nights and two matinees, it moves Eastward to keep filling engagements until May.

Following next Sunday night will be "The Good Earth," road-show film starring Paul Muni and Luise Rainer, which will be an exception among its kind if it does not stay two weeks. Set for the week of March 28 is the Shubert "Ziegfeld Follies," with Fanny Brice, Bobby Clark, Gypsy Rose Lee, Jane Pickens, Harrison and Fisher, Cherry and June Preisser, Stan Kavanaugh, Cass Baley, Hugh Cameron, Marvin Lawler, James Farrell and Yost's Varsity Eight, which comes here directly from a 12 weeks' run in Chicago.

The cast of "Boy Meets Girl" is unchanged. Clinton Sundberg and Donald Macdonald play the two Hollywood screen play writers who turn everything topsy-turvy and make a waitress' baby the cinema hero of the hour. Betty Field is the waitress, and Frank Fenton, Nigel Blake, Larry Fletcher, Juan Varro, Sydney Andrews, Virginia Wallace, Stanley Gorham, Queena Bliotti, Horace Cooper, Charles Wagenheim, Edison Rice, Rhea Cook, Erskine Sanford, Patricia Palmer, John Koch and Craig Adams representatives of the various types Hollywood.

The affair about Susie's baby will be played in the style, and with the lines, that the cast found acceptable to St. Louis last fall. In touring, the actors have found it necessary to make changes in dialogue almost extemporaneously on occasions. Lines too pungent for smaller communities were at times dropped and those used for staid London audiences substituted.

Both Sundberg and Macdonald were in the London cast, as were several minor members of the company. Miss Field was for a time in the New York company last summer and others came from a Chicago cast of a year ago. The original "Boy Meets Girl" is still on Broadway, after a 15 months' run.

"The Good Earth," which has already opened in several other cities, is being hailed as one of the most important screen works of the year. The production dates back to 1933, when the late Irving G. Thalberg bought the screen rights to Pearl Buck's Pulitzer Prize novel of Chinese life. Thalberg assigned George Hill to direct and Hill set out for China with a camera crew. Some 200,000 feet of "atmosphere" film were taken, 398 properties collected, even draft animals crated up and sent back to Hollywood. When Hill died, Victor Fleming took over direction, chose location sites and started assembling a cast. He was forced to undergo a serious operation and Sidney Franklin, director of "Smilin' Thru," "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and "The Dark Angel," carried on.

Actual filming began last spring and was completed in August. A 500-acre farm, terraced to represent Chinese agricultural vistas, grew crops as the filming went on. There and at the studio all the available Chinese on the West Coast went through the events described in the novel. Major-General Ting-Hsiu Tu, technical adviser supplied by the Chinese Government, was on hand to give expert advice and when necessary, drilled the Chinese soldiers required in certain scenes.

The more familiar screen players, with Muni and Miss Rainer, are Walter Connolly, Charles Grapewin, Jessie Ralph, Harold Huber and Keye Luke. Muni plays Wang Lung, Miss Rainer O-Lan and Tilly Losch, Viennese dancer, seen in "The Garden of Allah" is Lotus. Reports from other centers were the picture has shown all regard Miss Rainer's performance as the outstarding one. She is also reported to have the inside track for the coming Academy award, on the basis of her work in "The Great Ziegfeld."

RAYA GARBOUSOVA, PRINCIPIA CONCERT ARTIST, FOR FRIDAY.

'Having Wonderful Time' New Broadway Comedy

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Arthur Kober, whose magazine pieces qualify him for the post of official folk historian of Jewish-American family life in the Bronx, now places his people in a heart-warming and winning comedy called "Having Wonderful Time." Most of these people were met in uptown tenements and coldwater flats in Kober's book, "Thunder Over the Bronx." Now in this play they are found in a summer camp in the Berkshires, and with them all their comical and heartbreaking woes.

Although Kober defers to the theater in writing in the form demanded by it, he doesn't bother much with story. His concern is with the people of the camp, his stenographers and small merchants and Communists and Casanovas, and it is a fond and sympathetic concern, all very good for the theater. The critics liked it and the public is responding.

It is a simple tale Kober tells of Teddy Stern and Chick Kessler, the anxious lovers of Camp Kill-Care. Teddy arrives in need of rest and peace. For three years she has lavished her stenographer's pay on "linens and other flat things" only to have marriage denied her until fiance Sam can finance a younger brother over the first perils of business. She wants to be where she can't "revive Sam."

Chick, with a useless law degree, is working as a waiter in the camp, until his career can crystallize into an actuality. The two form a quarrelsome "acquaintanceship," and for a week love and fight and argue endlessly in prim and fastidious language—in scenes so fresh and poignant that the old story grows bright and precious in Kober's telling.

For his helpless lovers Kober has written several scenes of tenderness and beauty, a sort of laughter-over-the-heartache awkwardness made entirely irresistible by the playing of Katherine Locke, as Teddy. Rarely is a role played with such complete richness as Miss Locke gives the little stenographer.

Jules Garfield is all the boy Chick should be, and it is hoped that in subsequent performances he will resist the impulse to mount the soap box.

Mrs. Martin Johnson In Two Travel Lectures

About 10,000 feet of travel film and animal pictures will be shown at the Auditorium Opera House Thursday afternoon and evening by Mrs. Martin Johnson, in connection with her lecture on "The Jungles of Borneo." All were taken by Mrs. Johnson and her late husband on their recent tour, the first they made to that particular part of the world in 18 years.

The Johnsons' main camp was at Abai, an hour's airplane flight from Sandakan, capital of North Borneo. The explorers traveled back and forth by amphibian plane and resided most of the time on a houseboat equipped with modern conveniences. Because of the extreme humidity, in the hottest and one of the wettest countries of the world, they encased the film in thermos containers, rushed it to the coast and sent it by air mail on its way to the United States. With the single exception of a sound engineer, Joe Tilton, the Johnsons were their own photographers throughout the making of the film.

Boyer Matches Napoleon

First make-up tests by Charles Boyer for his role of Napoleon Bonaparte in Greta Garbo's new film, "Madame Walewska," show that heads of Boyer and Napoleon are 98 per cent identical. The discovery was made by caliper comparison of a Napoleon death mask and Boyer life mask in plaster. Boyer is of French nationality.

EDUCATIONAL broadcast projects will be considered March 17 at a conference in Washington of which John Studebaker, U. S. Commissioner of Education, will be chairman.

Out of the sessions may come a plan for a country-wide survey of the possibilities of advancing education through radio. It is hoped that funds for the survey, and for launching whatever general project is recommended, may be supplied in part by the networks and the Rockefeller and Carnegie Foundations.

Public address systems have been installed in the minarets of some of the mosques in Iraq to send beyond the range of a voice the sundown call to prayer which for centuries has been a part of life in the Moslem East. Wires run from the minarets to horn-type speakers so placed as to extend greatly the area covered by the nightly summons.

WILLIE MORRIS, THE MISSOURI SINGER, WHO IS TO TAKE PART IN THE METROPOLITAN OPERA AUDITION ON KSD THIS AFTERNOON.

STUDIO GOSSIP

JOSEPH BENTONELLI, the Metropolitan Opera tenor, who substituted for Nelson Eddy last Sunday, had to fly from Texas to Chicago for the radio concert, then fly back again to keep a concert engagement. Eddy's physician says that he should be able to sing this evening. Eddy may head a program in the fall that will occupy the period now given over to the Do You Want to Be An Amateur Actor, acting as master of ceremonies as well as singing. . . . Michael Bartlett, the movie tenor, probably will be master of ceremonies and featured singer in a new series on the CBS chain planned to begin next week. He returned recently from movie work in Europe and will go to Hollywood for the new program.

Ona Munson, the stage and movie actress, is playing roles in the Wednesday night Cavalcade programs. . . . Elizabeth Lennox, contralto of the Friday Broadway Varieties, has been singing in radio for 10 years. . . . Harry Savoy, the "double talking" comedian, has been signed as a permanent member of Eddie Cantor's radio cast. . . . Shaw and Lee, the comedians on Jack Oakie's program, starred in vaudeville until 1929, made a tour of Europe, tried vaudeville again, then went to Hollywood in 1934 and got their "break" on a KSD and WEAF chain Chateau program.

JACK BENNY has a new radio contract extending through the summer of 1940 which also applies to his wife Mary Livingstone. It does not contain the usual clause giving the right to cancel after 13 weeks, but is a straight deal for the full three years. It covers all of Benny's radio time except for summer vacations. . . . The Wednesday People and Your Unseen Friend Sunday programs are likely to go into night spots before long. . . . Helen Jepson will go to Hollywood soon.

"Pretty Kitty Kelly," a new serial telling the story of a girl who sails from Ireland to New York and finds the going in a big city hard, will replace Renfrew of the Mounted, beginning Monday, March 8. Arline Blackburn will play the title role.

TOSCANINI'S radio concerts, which are to begin in December, will be carried weekly by the WEAF and WJZ networks, so should be broadcast in St. Louis. The time and day of the week have not been determined, but listeners generally are hoping that they will not be scheduled so as to conflict with any of the other major concerts. . . .

Gladys Swarthout's singing on her new KSD program at 9:30 Wednesday nights has been insured with a $50,000 policy against her

TWO addresses by President Roosevelt will be broadcast in the next two weeks. One will be a "fireside talk" . . . It will go on the air at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday night, March 9, presumably on all the chains. It is expected that it will be devoted, in part at least, to his proposals affecting the judiciary. The President indicated that it would be wide in scope.

His second address will be that delivered at the Democratic victory dinner in Washington. It will be carried by the WJZ and CBS networks at 9:30 o'clock next Thursday night.

THERE is more than a possibility that the Mexican border stations, which flood this country with advertising and mediocre programs and cause complaints because of interference with United States and Canadian stations, will be thrown off the air, the magazine, Variety, reports.

The present plan, Variety says, is to replace these stations with five of more high-powered Government stations which will carry programs subject at all times to control of Federal commissions and held to the same standards which obtain on the United States networks.

The clean-up is due within the next year to 18 months, Variety says, and will be motivated largely by a desire to cultivate goodwill among United States listeners and to attract motor tourists, as well as build a favorable attitude toward the world's fair which Mexico expects to hold a few years hence.

DELAY ON BIDS FOR CHARTER OF GOVERNMENT SHIP LINES

Maritime Commission Puts Off Opening at Request of Senate Committee.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27. — The Maritime Commission postponed today until further notice the opening of bids for the charter of four government-owned steamship lines. The bid opening had been scheduled for Monday. The commission said the action was taken in response to a request by the Senate Commerce Committee.

Under the new maritime law, the government must discontinue operation of ship lines by June 29, and the commission thus had called for bids to charter the lines.

The Senate committee requested a 60-day extension of the bid date, but the commission said this would interfere with sailing schedules. It added that a 30-day extension appeared practicable, but delayed designation of any specific future date.

NEW TRUSTEE APPOINTED FOR COTTON BELT MORTGAGE

Chase National Bank of New York Withdraws; Reasons for Change Not Given.

Withdrawal of the Chase National Bank of New York as trustee of the $39,557,500 general and refunding mortgage of the Cotton Belt Railroad became known yesterday with the appointment by United States District Judge Charles B. Davis of a successor trustee, the Chemical Bank and Trust Co. of New York. Reasons for the change were not set forth.

The appointment was made on the recommendation of Berryman Henwood, trustee in bankruptcy of the railroad, and of the railroad company. No interest has been paid on the mortgage since the Cotton Belt filed a petition for reorganization under the amended bankruptcy statutes. The Chase National Bank is a creditor of the railroad, holding a $3,500,000 note, and also is trustee under two small mortgages on property of a Texas subsidiary.

17TH CENTURY FRENCH ART TO BE EXHIBITED

Paintings of Georges de la Tour and Brothers Le Nain at Museum.

An exhibition of the paintings of Georges de La Tour and the brothers LeNain—Antoine, Louis and Mathieu—French artists of the seventeenth century, will open at City Art Museum in Forest Park tomorrow for a three-week period. The works, in the opinion of critics, convincingly represent the transition from medieval to modern thought.

In the paintings of both La Tour and the LeNains, the uses of light and color, the turn to interpretative subjects rather than precise historical reproduction, show the trend away from the old school.

The use of light, particularly indirect light, the sourse of which is sometimes not shown in the painting, is most marked in the canvasses of La Tour.

Strange Background.

The artist himself had a strange historical background. Before his death in 1652, contemporary records indicated he already had been accorded the title of "master" and had imitators, some of whom later received recognition for work less perfect than his own. Shortly after his death, he inexplainably was forgotten, his paitings laid aside or lost, and no mention of him is found until 1863, when a student published a pamphlet on his works. Not until 1914 were some of his paintings found and identified, and only about 12 authentic canvases now are known.

Seven of them are in the collection on display at the Art Museum, the two perhaps most noted being "Adoration of the Shepherds" and "New Born," both religious subjects. The artist's versatility is shown in the painting, in lighter vein, "The Sharper," portraying women at cards with one drawing an ace from a place of concealment in clothing at her back. His striving for the effect of light and shadow is shown vividly in "The Young Smoker," whose face and clothing are illuminated only in part by the glowing ember in his hand.

Work of the LeNains.

The brothers LeNain are represented by 15 paintings, although in the course of a collaboration of about 18 years many more came from their brushes. They were among the first, if not the first of the recognized masters, to turn to the ordinary scenes of life, to the peasant, the blacksmith and laughing children, for their subjects. One of the notable paintings is by Louis, "Portrait of a Man"; the subject is not otherwise identified. Among those of Antoine is "The Young players," a group of youngsters whose expressive faces show the pleasure of their game. A notable oil of Mathieu's is "The Dice Throwers," whose rapt attention is fixed on the white cubes one of them has tossed on the table.

Pictures in the collection have been lent by museums and private owners in Europe and America. Louis Carre, who organized the exhibition in Paris, will give an illustrated lecture on the paintings Tuesday at 3:30 p. m. in Gallery 32 at the Art Museum.

Odd Questions Raised By Income Taxpayers

Gambling Losses Deductible Only to Extent of Winnings—Fines Not Subtracted, But Damage to Auto in Accident May Be.

Questions reflecting the quirks of the revenue act are being presented daily at the office of Collector of Internal Revenue Thomas J. Sheehan by Federal income taxpayers, mindful of the March 15 deadline for their annual returns.

Two questions most frequently asked relate to personal exemptions and earned income credit. Fundamentally, the personal exemption is $1000 for a single person or $2500 for a married person or the head of a family, plus $400 for each dependent, but there are a variety of definitions of single person, family head and dependent.

Reduced to the simplest terms for the average taxpayer, the earned income credit amounts to 10 per cent of the amount remaining after charitable contributions, taxes paid, interest paid and other legal deductions are taken from the income actually earned in salaries and fees. Such income is distinguished from that received in rents, dividends and so on. However, if net income after deductions exceeds earned income, due to the presence of unearned income, the 10 per cent credit is figured on the earned gross income, as it must be on whichever basis is the smaller. Professional men, salesmen on commission and others able to prove they have business expenses not compensated by their employers may deduct such expenses from earned gross income, in which case the 10 per cent credit is figured on the remaining income.

Gambling Losses, Alimony.

After these basic questions troubling taxpayers come the odd ones.

Gambling losses, whether legal or illegal, may be deducted from income only to the extent of gambling winnings. Some St. Louis bookmakers habitually make deductions for losses. The Government receives reports on winnings in the Irish and Canadian sweepstakes, the Cuban lottery and similar gambles and expects the winners to make returns on these as income.

Alimony received by a woman is not taxable, but her former husband cannot deduct it from his income and he can claim only the $1000 personal exemption, unless he marries again or otherwise heads a family.

Dues to unions and professional societies are deductible.

If a corporation is wiped out in bankruptcy stockholders may deduct the full extent of their investment losses as a bad debt, in the year in which the loss occurs. But a voluntary liquidation amounts to a sale, for which stockholders may deduct any direct losses on a percentage basis according to the number of years they owned the stock.

If there is a profit on the sale, the taxable gain also varies with length of ownership on a similar scale.

Salesmen's Traveling Expenses.

A salaried salesman may not deduct traveling expenses unless he has a written agreement requiring him to pay them out of his wages. A salesman on commission may deduct traveling expenses, including tips, unless his employer agrees to pay them, which is unusual.

Husband and wife with separate incomes may make joint or separate returns, but in the latter case their incomes must be legitimately distinct, otherwise the opportunity to escape surtax by splitting up the large income of one spouse would present itself.

If a man puts his home in his wife's name, makes a joint return, then loses his money, the house could be seized to pay the income tax. Both husband and wife must sign a joint return and the one preparing it must swear to it.

Fines for violation of traffic laws are not deductible.

Bequests are not subject to the income tax; the inheritance tax covers them. Neither are gifts taxed as income, since the gift tax applies to them unless they come under the $40,000 lump or $5000 a year gift exemption. But income received from bequests or gifts must be reported for taxation.

Accidental damages to an automobile may be deducted, if not compensated by insurance; so may all other forms of ordinary property damage if uninsured.

Beauty Prizes Taxable.

A beauty prize or any other form of prize award is taxable income. So are tips, bonuses and retirement allowances, also executors' and directors' fees.

Fees given a clergyman for weddings, funerals, masses and so on are taxed.

Federal jury fees are subject to the tax, but not local jury fees.

Divorcees and married persons separated by mutual consent are classed as single persons.

Business expenses, to be deductible, must be necessary expenditures. Cost of current magazines and newspapers kept in physicians' and dentists' waiting rooms may be deducted as an expense; the regulations are silent as to out-of-date periodicals.

Value of stolen articles is an allowable deduction, if not covered by insurance, but the owner must be sure it is a case of theft, not loss.

Rise or fall of stock values on the market has no bearing on the tax return unless a sale is made.

Suburbanites may not claim their daily transportation costs to town as business expense.

A large number of taxpayers are making Federal returns this year for the first time in their lives or for the first time since the depression began. The Collector's office attributes this to the many salary bonuses and extra dividends paid in 1936. Corporations which paid bonuses may deduct them from income as a means of reducing or avoiding the new corporate surplus tax.

Collector Sheehan has shifted 15 revenue agents from other divisions to augment his office force in handling returns. There were 201 deputies in the office yesterday but many of them stood idle, evidently because inclement weather was keeping taxpayers away. A rush is anticipated this week and next.

Examination for Electricians.

Competitive examinations for electricians have been announced by the United States Civil Service Commissions. Applications must be on file not later than Wednesday at 627 Federal Building. The jobs pay $1860 a year.

3 LICENSES REVOKED AND DRIVERS FINED

Police Judge Ruddy Says Such Motorists Are as Dangerous as Machine Gunners.

In fining two motorists and revoking their driver's licenses yesterday for careless driving, Police Judge Edward M. Ruddy remarked:

"This sort of driving must be curbed. An irresponsible driver is as bad as an irresponsible person with a machinegun."

Jake Perlin, a laborer, 1426 Semple avenue, was fined $200 on evidence that he lost control of his truck, swerved to the wrong side of the street, hit a parked car and turned over in the 5200 block of Wells avenue last Jan. 15. His license was revoked for six months. Judge Ruddy said he disliked depriving Perlin of the use of his truck, but the circumstances made it necessary. Perlin appealed.

Theodore E. Weber, 4950 McPherson avenue, a hotel clerk, was fined $100 for careless driving, $150 on a charge of driving while intoxicated, and his driver's license was revoked for a year. Weber was arrested last Dec. 26 after an automobile belonging to an automobile agency, which he was driving, struck a curb and broke a wheel in the 2800 block of Belt avenue. Weber denied that he was drunk. He appealed.

Harold Greenberg, a used car dealer, 5634 St. Louis avenue, charged with speeding in Carondelet Park, refused to waive his right of appeal and was fined $200 and costs by Police Judge James Nangle, who ordered his driver's license revoked for a year. Greenberg, with a record of six arrests for traffic violations in 10 years, was offered a $10 fine, and revocation of his license for a year, if he would not appeal.

15 TRAINING COURSES FOR SCOUT LEADERS

St. Louis Council Arranges to Hold Series of Classes This Spring.

Fifteen courses of training for boy leadership will be conducted during the spring months by the St. Louis Council of the Boy Scouts of America. Three of them will open within the next two weeks.

Mothers having contact with cub scouts will be taught the psychology of understanding boys between the ages of 9 and 12 in a course opening Thursday at 9:30 a. m. in the music hall of Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney.

Instruction will be based on the need to understand the psychology of the boy when he is eligible for cub scout work and special attention will be given the achievements which can be reached by stressing the cub scout program.

Two other instruction courses will begin next Monday. The first, to be conducted at the Elias Michael School, 4568 Forest Park boulevard, will provide leadership trainng for men over 18 years old interested in scout work. Nine scheduled meetings will be concluded May 1 and 2, with an overnight hike.

Dr. C. E. Colgate, assisted by H. Max Nusser, will open a first aid course on the same night at the Washington University Medical School. Instruction in troop camping will be given in a series beginning March 16 at the Stix School and time of opening of the 11 other courses will be announced.

Troop Notes.

Arrowhead District has adopted a division flag consisting of an arrowhead in gold upon a background of white with a bar of red and blue running from the upper right to the lower left hand corner.

Troop 242 of St. Francis de Sales Church camped for four days last week near Maxville, Mo. Members walked five miles through a snow storm to attend church.

An American flag with 38 stars on its field of blue was found by members of Troop 332 of Maplewood in an abandoned building on the hills above the Meramec River in St. Louis County.

Troop 90 of Shaare Emeth Temple will hold an Eagle Court of Honor tomorrow night at which 225 merit badges will be presented.

Werner Kistenmacher, of Troop 74, Sherman School, will receive his Eagle Scout Badge next Friday. Herman J. Kistenmacher, his father, is scoutmaster.

Troops 315, Webster Groves, and 226, Harrison School, awarded advanced ranking to their members at recent courts of honor.

GIRL SCOUTS.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of girl scouting in America will be observed by the St. Louis Council at a dinner Friday evening, March 12, at the Coronado Hotel. Edgar C. Taylor, head of the Taylor School for Boys, Clayton, will be the principal speaker.

Other speakers will review the history of girl scouting and tell of its foundation. A group of 50 uniformed girl scouts will sing.

The first troop was formed March 12, 1912 at Savannah, Ga. Girl scouts of the St. Louis area will celebrate the anniversary April 23 with a birthday pageant in the convention hall of the Municipal Auditorium.

TEMPERATURE FOR 3 MONTHS OF WINTER ABOVE NORMAL

Average for Season Ending Today 34.7 Degrees; Windiest February on Record.

The average temperature for the three-months winter season ending today, was, up to yesterday morning, 34.7 degrees, one degree above normal, Weather Forecaster Roscoe Nunn announced. This was a welcome contrast to last winter when the temperature averaged 26.7 degrees.

Other figures on the three months were: Snowfall, 7.5 inches, as compared to a normal of 13.7; lowest temperature, 4 above zero Jan. 23, as compared to a low of 10 below zero last winter; highest temperature, 66 degrees on Dec. 30.

This month, which had an average temperature of 34 degrees for the first 26 days, one degree below normal, was the windiest February on record. The first 26 days showed an average hourly wind velocity of 15.6 miles, exceeding the previous high of 15.2 in February, 1918. The normal average is 11.8 miles. The maximum velocity for a five-minute period was 39 miles an hour last Sunday.

CHARGES AGAINST PARTNER OF M'ADOO QUASHED BY BAR

Ex-Client of W. H. Neblett Says He Made Complaint at Instigation of "Politicians."

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 27.—William H. Neblett, law partner of Senator William G. McAdoo, stood vindicated today of charges which a former client admitted he made at the inducement of "certain politicians." A State Bar administrative committee, unanimously dismissing disciplinary proceedings against Neblett, said the charges were "entirely without merit and untrue."

The complainant, Max Holtzer, had said Neblett failed to obtain a presidential pardon for his felony conviction 23 years ago which prevented him from becoming a citizen. Neblett testified he understood he was merely to file citizenship papers for Holtzer. He learned later that Holtzer was a former convict and wanted a pardon.

It received 93,817 members in 1936 through professions and 81,290 through baptisms, including both infants and adults.

ANOTHER SMART USED CAR BUYER

● "I didn't have a lot of money to spend for a used car, yet I had a certain model in mind," says Esther Olden, commercial artist. "So I kept my eye on the Dodge dealers' classified ads. I figured that was the best way to get the car I wanted because I knew that Dodge dealers were selling more new cars than ever and would naturally be taking in a greater variety of trade-ins.

"Well, it worked out just like I figured. I got a wonderful coupe for at least $40 below its actual market price. It's really gorgeous looking and it runs like a dream. I was truly amazed at the many other money-saving 'buys' I saw on the floor—cars of all makes and models."

"Eat Plenty of wholesome, nutritious food-stuff, such as MILK, EGGS and BUTTER"

These are not the words of a dairy man, nor of a poultry man; they're quoted from instructions issued by Dr. Joseph F. Bredeck, Health Commissioner, on how to ward off respiratory ills. Here are his complete instructions:

"Avoid heavy foods but eat plenty of wholesome, nutritious food-stuff, such as milk, eggs and butter. Go to sleep early and obtain plenty of rest. At the first sign of a sore throat or cold, consult a physician. Do not wait until you are seriously ailing."

Proper attention to diet will help ward off colds and kindred ailments. You will notice that fresh milk heads the list. Fresh milk always heads the list when preventive foods are named.

See to it that your family regularly gets the health insurance of nature's greatest food—fresh milk— a pint, at least, for each adult; a quart for every child.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.

SENATORS don't like being called demagogues. Most of them learn to expect it, but they never learn to like it. The shining exception to this rule is Henry Fountain Ashurst of Arizona, upon whose towering shoulders rests, nominally and substantially, the heavy burden of jamming President Roosevelt's Supreme Court-packing plan through the Senate.

Far from taking offense at the epithet which galls his colleagues so sorely, he seems to glory in it. It was Ashurst who, in the midst of a hot campaign for re-election, uttered the classic apothegm:

"My adversary is an excellent man, but fatally deficient in an important particular—he has yet to learn that, in politics, there are times when it becomes imperative for each of us to rise above every question of principle in order to achieve our ends."

Striking About-Face.

True to his word, no Senator ever rose more swiftly or to dizzier heights than did Ashurst when the President's court plan was broached. A year and a half earlier, in defending the Supreme Court's unanimous decision invalidating NRA, he had said:

"Among the unjust criticisms which have been uttered or printed about President Roosevelt, was that he intends, at some time by some legerdemain, to increase the membership of the Supreme Court, so that his policies might be sustained. A more ridiculous, absurd and unjust criticism of a President was never made. No person whose opinion is respected has favored attempting such a reckless foray and folly."

Last week, when he arose in the Senate to defend the President's attempt to do that very thing, Bailey of North Carolina quoted his earlier utterance, and asked if he had used that language. Quite unabashed, Ashurst replied:

"It is obvious from the rhetoric that it is my utterance.... When I was sworn in as a Senator, now nearly 25 years ago, I resolved that I should never try to be consistent. My faults are obvious. There can be no doubt that I have my full share of them. I suffer from cacoethes loquendi—a mania, or itch, for talking—and from vanity, if you please, and from morbidity, and, as is obvious to everyone who knows me, from an inborn, inveterate flair for histrionics. But there never has been super-added to these faults of mine the withering and embalming vice of consistency."

Quick-Change Artist.

Shortly before he appeared as the principal senatorial spokesman for the President's plan, he had also said:

"I have no sympathy with attempts to whittle or chisel, by indirection, circumlocution or periphrasis, in order to obtain power. The way to reach the desired objective is by bold frankness—by asking the people of the states to ratify the necessary amendments."

Confronted with this language, he promptly retorted:

"I never let what I said yesterday bind me today. No Senator can change his mind more quickly than I."

The Senator thus described himself with candor seldom encountered at either end of the Capitol—or, for that matter, at either end of Pennsylvania avenue. He is the champion quick change artist of Congress, and proud of the distinction. He will fight like a wildcat when cornered, but that seldom happens. It is like cornering an eel in a bathtub full of lubricating oil.

Ashurst is one of the most picturesque figures, and one of the shrewdest politicians in Congress. He has a technique all his own, and he has every reason to be satisfied with it. He was the first Senator elected from Arizona, after its admission to the Union of States. He was originally chosen by the Legislature, and since the popular election of Senators began, he has been returned with steadily mounting majorities.

A Political Immortal.

As he recently said in the Senate: "I have put on political immortality." To which Senator Bailey responded: "The Senator from Arizona is the only one of us who occupies his position without a predecessor, and, I might almost say, without the visible possibility of a successor."

In gorgeous apparel, ornate speech and elaborate manners, Ashurst is rivaled only by the dazzling, pink-whiskered James Hamilton

Defenders of Scheme to Remake the Court Complain of 5 to 4 Decisions but the Only One of These on a Vital New Deal Act Was Favorable.

Closest Vote Against Roosevelt's View of Constitution Was 6 to 3—Speculation as to Action of a New Court Is Confused by Unanimity of NRA Decision.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.

PARTISANS of President Roosevelt's scheme to remake the Supreme Court complain of 5 to 4 decisions of the Court as intolerable in a democracy. This ignores the probability that 8 to 7 decisions by an enlarged court would be even more objectionable; it leaves out of consideration also the obvious fact that majority rule is a primary principle of democracy and courts composed of more than one Judge can function only in that way. However that is argument and the field of this article is factual analysis.

More important than these considerations is the showing of the record of the Court that not one decision has gone against an Act of Congress which was vital to the New Deal by 5 to 4. Instead, the only decision by this narrow division—"one-Judge rule," as it has been called—in a test of importance to the New Deal went the other way and upheld the act. This was in the "Gold Clause" case where the Court sustained the canceling of gold obligations in private contracts.

This authority was absolutely essential to the carrying out of the President's fiscal policy, which included devaluation of the dollar. True, an equally necessary companion provision of the act, canceling the gold clause in Government bonds, was held to be unconstitutional by an 8 to 1 decision; true, also, the President's "managed currency" policy would have been wrecked by this decision if it could have been made effective, but enforcement was not possible because of "infirmities of procedure," as the Court observed. This fact is interesting principally as revealing a bit of Roosevelt luck, since it is beside the point of the 5 to 4 decisions.

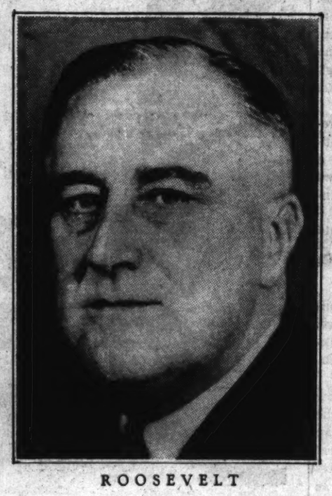
New Deal Cornerstones and What Happened to Them.

The essential part of the President's legislative program for carrying out the New Deal consisted of first, the National Industrial Recovery Act (NRA); second, the Agricultural Adjustment Act (AAA); third, the Guffey Coal Control Act (which rested on the same constitutional ground as the more far-reaching Wagner Labor Relations Act, now under consideration by the Supreme Court, and fourth, the Gold Clause Act.

A number of other New Deal measures which have been passed on by the Court are included in the analysis in the accompanying chart, but these four expressed in themselves the President's conception of the Constitution, and without validation of them the New Deal was doomed, as the President plainly implied in his "horse and buggy" interview in May, 1935.

The closest decisions against vital New Deal laws were 6 to 3, by which division the Court found both AAA and the Guffey Coal Act unconstitutional. (Chief Justice Hughes joined the minority in upholding the price-fixing provisions of the Guffey Act, but this phase of the law was apart from its use of the taxing power to regulate wages and hours and should be so distinguished.)

This 6 to 3 division was really two to one against the President's view of the Constitution. Incidentally, it was a stronger proportional majority against him than was the "mandate of the election" for him. His popular vote was 27,000,000, with 16,000,000 against him. In this connection it is amusing to note that many defenders of the court scheme prefer to state the popular mandate in terms of the electoral vote, 46 states to 2. But they decline the challenge of critics to go to the country with a constitutional amendment to legalize the New Deal on the score that opposition of only 13 states would be needed to beat it.



ROOSEVELT

The charge of usurpation of legislative authority by the Court, then, must rest on these two cases in which a majority of 6 to 3 found that the legislation was contrary to the Constitution, and on the NRA case where all of the nine members, the so-called "liberals" as well as the "conservatives," agreed that the act was unconstitutional. And likewise, if the President's legislative program is to be upheld by a changed court, a majority of the new court will have to overrule the six-Judge and nine-Judge decisions against the two fundamentals of the President's conception of the Constitution.

Federal Power Over Commerce, Agriculture and Industry.

One of the Roosevelt tenets is that the admitted power of Congress "to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states," can be stretched to permit regulation of wages and working conditions in business and industry of all kinds whether it is commerce or not and whether it is interstate or only local.

The second tenet is that the taxing power of Congress can be employed to compel agriculture and industry to accept regulation through the penalizing effect of special taxes. In the Guffey Act the tax could be avoided by compliance with regulation, and under AAA processors were taxed and the revenue thus derived was distributed as benefits to those farmers who complied with regulation.

The Guffey Act attempted to regulate the relations of labor and capital in coal mining by imposing a tax on the product of employers who failed to comply with the regulation. The Court held that the regulation sought to be imposed was beyond the power of Congress and found the act to be unconstitutional by the settled rule that what Congress lacks the power to do directly it may not accomplish by indirection.

The AAA fell by the same test and was held to be unconstitutional as, an attempt on the part of Congress to exceed its power by indirection.

The unanimous decision against NRA held that act, "the heart of the New Deal," as President Roosevelt described it, to be unconstitutional before coming to consideration of the President's fundamental as to the commerce clause, which it embodied. It was found to be a delegation of legislative authority by Congress to the President and others, and unconstitutional for that reason alone. The Congress cannot abdicate, the decision said. However the court went further and upset the President's conception of the power of Congress under the "commerce clause." Congress itself had not the power to do the things which it authorized the President to do, and the act was unconstitutional for that reason, too. This because the regulatory powers of Congress are confined to interstate commerce, and the NRA and its codes covered all sorts of activities which were neither interstate nor commerce.

Justices Eligible to Retire Occupy Position of Peculiar Importance.

It will be seen from the foregoing analysis that if the present Justices should retain their seats and President Roosevelt appointed six additional Justices who should join with the three of the 6 to 3 decisions, the new Court presumably would divide 9 to 6 in favor of acts turning upon the controlling points of AAA and the Guffey Act. Here the President would be sustained but by a vote of only three to two, whereas he is now overruled by a division of two to one.

Next, if another NRA measure were presented to the 15-Judge court it would certainly be held unconstitutional by a 9 to 6 majority, and possibly a heavier majority, for it is not conceivable that any of the present Justices would reverse himself.

But if, as many administration supporters profess to believe, or at least hope, the six eligible Justices should retire as soon as the Sumners bill providing for retirement on full pay becomes a law, speculation must take a different turn. These six are Hughes, Brandeis, McReynolds, Sutherland, Van De-

Broadcasts Used To Lure Deserters From Rebel Force

Voluntary Prisoners Say Spanish Fascists Are Ill Fed, Ill Clad and Forced to Fight Under Iron Discipline.

By MIKHAIL KOLTSOV,
Correspondent of Pravda of Moscow.
MADRID, January.

IT is a real charmed forest, especially at night. It is a very simple matter to lose one's way at night in Casa del Campo. Of course, it is human to lose one's way. But one is not recommended to do it in Casa del Campo in the spring of 1937. This forest, which formerly was a park where the inhabitants of Madrid used to go rambling, is now densely inhabited, and by a very mixed population. If she took the wrong path, Little Red Riding-Hood might within 50 paces meet the Grey Wolf in a German steel helmet, or a magnificent, slightly damp Moroccan in a bright fez carrying a hand machine-gun.

That is why the section commander examines the silhouettes of the trees again and again, and again and again makes sure of the road at each turning. The rain has washed away all the paths. The sign posts are lost in the fog, and no one can tell from which direction the infrequent shots come. The dum-dum bullets of the insurgents are particularly deceptive. We seem to hear them cracking from our side. It was just such a treacherous bullet which a few nights ago killed outright that brave and lovable young Capt. Arisa, the Asturian teacher, about whom I wrote in my description of life in the trenches outside Madrid.

Loud Speaker Propaganda.

Finally, on a hillock amid the trees stands a small lorry with a loud speaker, brought here in the daytime. An additional motor works the amplifier. Little Gabriela Abad, a propagandist from the War Commissariat, is the first to go to the microphone. She shouts into the darkness:

"Soldiers fighting under the orders of Franco, Mola and Cabanelas, hullo! Hullo!"

Quickly, clearly, and passionately Gabriela speaks of the women who are helping their husbands to defend Madrid, calls on the duped soldiers to leave their trenches and go over to the camp of the legal Republican government, and to return to their families who are awaiting them.

She is followed by the section commander, an officer of the old army. He particularly emphasizes his loyalty to his country and the people, and his confidence in the people's victory.

Gabriela reads the text of the appeal sent by Maj. Don Ricardo Belda Lopez, the famous Fascist commander and favorite of Franco, who was taken prisoner during the storming of the height Los Angeles. Belda urges the officers and soldiers to give up the struggle and surrender to the republic.

Fascist Deserters.

The listeners sit in trenches 300 yards away. The report of a mine-thrower is heard twice, but not in our direction—sounds are very much scattered here. We listen attentively to the darkness—perhaps somebody is coming toward us. But as yet no one has come. But the night before last, men from the other side appeared during the broadcast. They had time to go up to the microphone and to name themselves.

"We are here already; we are smoking cigarettes with the republicans. They received us finely. Come over to us!"

There are more and more prisoners and deserters from the other side. We are not flooded with them, but the fact remains that regularly, every day, on every section of the Madrid front, the republicans are capturing men, non-commissioned officers, and officers of the insurgent army. During the storming of Los Angeles nearly the whole battalion, together with its commander, was taken. And every day, and every night, a man appears before the trenches with his hands up and his gun pointing downwards. He shouts: "Don't shoot! I am coming over to you."

The insurgents hereabout take no prisoners.

Nervous About Prisoners.

The Government army treats its prisoners humanely; but one must not forget the actual moment when a man is taken prisoner. A fighter sees before him an armed enemy who, though he may have been taken unawares, still defends himself and is still dangerous. In the heat of the battle it is easier and safer to shoot an enemy soldier than to start disarming him and taking him away.

Even if a soldier or officer has surrendered, if he has given up his arms, it is still a risky and laborious matter to take him away from the battlefield; for if aid comes to the prisoners, they can immediately alter their

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Roosevelt Supporter Turns.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WE who supported Franklin D. Roosevelt despite his quite obvious evasiveness during the campaign might well pause now to reflect on the manner of man we elected to the presidency.

Heretofore, many of us have not taken seriously the charge of dictatorship against Roosevelt, but, in the light of his proposals relating to the Supreme Court, I begin to believe that he really has the disposition of a dictator. For although the Supreme Court, liberal and conservative members alike, unanimously declared some of his legislative measures unconstitutional, it is quite evident he intends to force his bills on the country, regardless of any opposition.

For a presidential aspirant to avoid discussion of the major issues in a campaign and deliberately to withhold from the country his real intentions until he has been elected to the office, can only be characterized as downright trickery.

Mr. Roosevelt may, and doubtless will, in dulcet tone and with much characteristic palaver, attempt to explain away his actions.

I feel sure, however, that henceforth Roosevelt's oratory is going to sound stale, flat and unprofitable to many Democratic ears. Any Senator or Representative who supports him on this Supreme Court issue should be sent into oblivion at the next election.

During the campaign, I did not think the Post-Dispatch was entirely right in its fight against Roosevelt, but recent developments have changed my opinion. I congratulate you on your courage and ability, so ably displayed in your recent editorials, and I hope that you will continue to fight with all the influence of your great paper.

DEMOCRATIC VOTER.

A "Mild" Suggestion.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IT is plain that a Supreme Court holding the views that prevailed 10 years ago can and will wreck any so-called New Deal program that may be attempted. The President's suggestion is mild, and certainly the least extreme that has been made. Why vote overwhelmingly for a New Deal and then support a court that everybody knows is sure to wrack it?

Lamar, Mo. ARTHUR AULL.

In Praise of Pie.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

EVERY cloud truly has a silver lining. Just when things looked darkest because of Supreme Court difficulties, new perplexities in unemployment and vote frauds, right then comes the story in the Post-Dispatch of the Vermont man of 74 years who has eaten pie three times daily for more than half a century.

This was a great country when pie was enthroned in every home, and no man thought of sitting down to a meal that did not have at least one helping in the dessert course. Mother used to bake pies twice every week—six on Wednesday, eight on Saturday, the Sabbath being especially given over to pastry enjoyment, because father was at home all day. But as the safety-razor brought the doom of whiskers on the face of the head of the house, so woman's suffrage sounded the knell of home-made pie. And the nation has been going to the dogs ever since.

Pie will swing our country back
In its old accustomed track.

FREDERICK R. BARKHURST.

Brazen and Unjust.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

YOUR editorial entitled "O'Malley Asks For It" is certainly timely. If a thorough investigation is made and if the press of Missouri will give it the front-page airing it deserves, that will be one of the greatest services the press could possibly render to the public.

This is the most brazen and unjust affair that has been pulled off in my day, and I have been here for a good many years, and in the insurance business for 34 years. INSURANCE MAN.

Homer G. Phillips and Vashon High.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I READ with much interest the editorial of Feb. 23, "Inspiration of the Negro Hospital Fight." The fight for the establishment of the hospital on the site that it now occupies was a very bitter one and was led by the man for whom the institution is named, the late Homer G. Phillips.

For reasons better known to those in charge of the dedication, nothing was said in the addresses about the leader in the fight. I challenge them to state their reasons.

If Homer Phillips were alive today, you would find him, with that same persistence, earnestness, thorough organization and lucid presentation of the case that won the day in 1930, fighting the proposal of the Board of Education to establish an elementary school on the already crowded grounds of Vashon High School.

WALTER LOWE.

Thinks Court Needs New Stimulus.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE Supreme Court has not marked time with the progress of civilization. It needs new stimulus. The people have not been betrayed by Mr. Roosevelt's plan. The Supreme Court in its present state has outlived its usefulness.

T. V. MAZE.

Goreville, Ill.

BRING IT INTO THE OPEN!

So they're going to investigate the O'Malley compromise behind closed doors.

There will be no outsider present to tell what was said or who said it.

Reporters will be barred. Policyholders will be barred. The public will be barred.

Just a nice little family gathering.

This is the arrangement announced in the news from Jefferson City.

The House committee is preparing to do what it was told to do. It is planning to carry out, in letter and spirit, the instructions received from Floor Leader Hamlin and Representative Taylor when they asked the House to blackjack Francis Smith's resolution for a real, honest investigation. Instead of the special committee, proposed by Mr. Smith, with authority to engage counsel and do a workmanlike job, the examination was detoured to the House Insurance Committee, which was informed that its first obligation was to "save the Democratic party."

That's the "sincere and thorough investigation" O'Malley bellowed for the other day in a column of rant. And that is what the whole precious pack wants—the custodians of the impounded insurance fund, and the lawyers they employed, and the lawyers whom the lawyers retained.

That is the kind of investigation the counsel for the State want, with their fat fees and the claims they have filed for still fatter fees.

That is the kind of investigation Boss Pendergast wants.

And they are all set to get it.

But when the purported investigation is completed and the findings are reported and the whole wretched affair has been whitewashed, and "the Democratic party has been saved"—when all this has been done, these questions will still have to be answered:

Who authorized O'Malley to dispose of the money of the policyholders of Missouri? To give the policyholders only 20 per cent of the almost $13,000,000 which the insurance companies had collected by excessive and unlawful rates, as court after court has pronounced those rates to be? To hand over 50 per cent to the insurance companies, who had had their day in court and lost? To give two citizens of Chicago—an attorney named Folonie and an insurance executive named Street—30 per cent of this money, a bigger share by 10 per cent than that set aside for all the policyholders?

O'Malley's authority to make the agreement with the insurance companies has been competently challenged.

Attorney-General McKittrick has challenged it.

On June 12, 1935, the Chief Justice of the Missouri Supreme Court, William F. Frank, repudiated O'Malley's authority in these words:

> The Superintendent of Insurance is a public official and represents the policyholders by virtue of his office and the laws defining his duties. His only authority in that behalf (of making refunds of excess premiums) was to get for the policyholders their rights under the law. Neither he nor the attorneys representing him (the attorneys were John T. Barker and Glenn C. Weatherby of Kansas City) had authority to stipulate away any lawful right of the policyholders concerning such refund, or to consent to the making of a court order that would have that effect.

It has been said that Gov. Park approved the compromise. On May 22, 1935, Gov. Park denied having approved it. Three days later, on May 25, O'Malley glowingly indorsed his own handiwork as "a fine settlement," and went on to say:

> I am not passing the buck to anybody and am willing to assume full responsibility for it.

But O'Malley was not alone in his joy. Boss Pendergast thought the agreement was a dandy. He said so to a Post-Dispatch reporter in an expansive moment as he was sailing for Europe on the Ile de France, where, far from the wrangling and importunities of his Kansas City throne room, he was to saunter leisurely through the Garden of the Tuileries, temple of another royalty and gateway to its tomb.

Turn now to the emoluments lavishly distributed to a select group acting as commissioners and custodians and the lawyers they engaged and the lawyers these lawyers retained!

Here is the list of gentlemen who ought to appear before an investigating committee and explain what they did to earn the compensation awarded them: L. H. Cook, H. P. Lauf of Jefferson City; Gilbert Lamb of Salisbury; Guy M. Sone and Thomas Speed Mosby of Jefferson City.

Here is what they have been paid to date, by order of Circuit Judge Nike Sevier:

Cook and Lauf have been allowed $52,000 each as commissioners and custodians, for services from December, 1934. They draw salaries of $500 a month till the conclusion of the proceedings.

Gilbert Lamb, as counsel for Cook and Lauf, both lawyers themselves, has been awarded $29,060, and is on the payroll at $500 a month. Lamb has not collected $20,000 of this, pending outcome of the objections filed by Attorney-General McKittrick.

Guy M. Sone, a Circuit Court clerk, has received $24,000 as custodian. He, too, is on the payroll at $500 a month.

Thomas Speed Mosby, counsel for Sone, has collected $48,000. And his name also is on the payroll at $1000 a month.

The State, through Attorney-General McKittrick, at one time sought to ascertain the nature and extent of the services performed for these extraordinary awards. The Court refused to permit the Attorney-General to examine them.

They should be examined. The policyholders of Missouri whose money was thus prodigally dispensed are demanding they be examined, demanding they be investigated as Representative Francis Smith proposed.

And the Kansas City lawyers, John T. Barker, Floyd E. Jacobs and Glenn C. Weatherby, should be examined. As counsel for the State in this long litigation, they doubtless did their work well and should be well paid. They have been well paid. But they have filed claims for further fees, approximating a million dollars, and those claims require examination.

And who is Thomas J. Pendergast to countersign, as it were, the O'Malley compromise and pass the word to the Attorney-General of Missouri "to lay off O'Malley" and morally join in the plundering of the policyholders?

Call Pendergast, too! Call them all!

No star-chamber inquiry, with its whitewash verdict, will be acceptable to the people of Missouri.

O'Malley has, in print, asked for "a sincere and thorough investigation." Let him have it. Let them all have it.

JUMPING FINANCE.

Yes, there is a Harrison Williams. Whether it has been a pleasure to meet him, we can't quite say for sure, but it has been an experience and something to think about. Of course, we all know Mrs. Harrison Williams, who somehow appears whenever there's a lull, as the world's best-dressed woman. To see her as we do, only in the camera's vibrationless groomery, is a happy event. In the living, pulsing—but the hero of this piece is Mr. Williams.

A hero? Every inch. Let us follow him, as best we can, from "the whiff of grapeshot" to Austerlitz. The year is 1906, when our bicycle maker plunges into utilities by organizing the American Gas & Electric Co. Six years later, in 1912, now become a syndicate, he buys 60 per cent of the Cleveland Illuminating Co. The purchase, valued at $5,720,000, is transferred to the Central States Corporation for $10,568,800, in notes and stock, preferred and common.

A decade of watchful waiting, but in 1922 he is in action again, buying 30,000 shares of Central States, and in 1924 he subscribes to 49,000 shares and actually buys 11,000 shares.

Now he is virtually owner of Central States, being possessed of 96 per cent control. And from then on up to 1929, the theme song is cumulation. Omitting further details, surcharged with drama though they be, Mr. Williams is now at apogee, crest, summit, top, and an original investment of $2,000,000 has floriated into $680,000,000.

Such is the chronology of the Williams epic as related to the Securities Commission. The commissioners seemed dazed. They well might be. It is a "dazing" yarn, the best tale of crescendo finance we have heard, next to the miracle of the Van Sweringens.

Only one thing is clear to us. Mrs. Williams could afford to wear good clothes.

WILDLIFE TO THE FORE.

The Progressive Education Association has concluded a meaty program of thought and action here. As a result, the St. Louis area has had its thinking greatly stimulated along the line of modern teaching practice in a modern world.

Another important conference opens here tomorrow—one that is also worth the close attention of the community. This is the four-day North American Wildlife Conference, which will bring together several hundred professional wildlife management workers from all parts of the United States and Canada as well. A year ago, preliminary steps were taken to organize wildlife workers on a continental basis. The St. Louis meeting will see that organization complete and in operation and so bids fair to be a significant event in the history of the conservation movement.

While acting as host to the wildlife workers of the country, Missouri can take special pride in the overwhelming majority by which it voted last November to take conservation out of politics. A number of other states have enjoyed the benefits of non-political, expert management of wildlife for a decade or more. None of them, however, has written into its Constitution the specific provision that administration shall be directed by a bi-partisan commission, so created as to protect wildlife management from political control. Missouri leads the rest in this important respect.

A PROMETHEUS UNBOUND?

The appalling inertia of Russia oppressed two Americans. From their car windows they had looked upon a land that was as a dead sea. They were trained observers, both widely traveled, one a professional scholar, the other awarded the academic degree by his political associates. Each was capable of assessing the evidence, drawing a conclusion, epitomizing a judgment. Both were steeped in Russian literature, in the tragedy brooding forever on the pages of Tolstoy, Turgenev, Dostoevsky, Gorky.

Now they had looked upon the massive stagnation, invulnerable to progress, in which evolution was suffocated. Later, in St. Petersburg, they were told, officially, that Herculean efforts and enormous expenditure had not quickened a pulse-beat.

To the Senator, Henry Cabot Lodge, it was quite hopeless. Would three generations be required to swing the Russian people into the Western movement? Rather more, the Senator thought. His companion, Henry Adams, dissented. Beyond the facts, he searched into the "infinite relations" of facts and beheld a vision, a probability. "Very likely," he mused, "Russia would instantly become the most brilliant constellation of human progress through all the ordered stages of good. . . ." The year was 1901.

Before Adams, there was another who perceived the destiny of the Colossus and dramatized it as only the pictorial genius of Walter Savage Landor could. Just a glimpse at the canvas:

> The creeping murmur of the world is her footstep, the pouring dark her veil. To the sentries of the nations peering across their borders comes ever the same reply.
> "Who goes there?"
> "Russia!"

For good or ill, the roads of many emotions lead to Moscow.

PROBLEM OF MISSOURI SCHOOL FUNDS.

Gov. Stark is giving serious consideration to the proposal that the schools' large proportion of State revenues be reduced, and sentiment for the change is growing in the Legislature, says a staff dispatch from Jefferson City. It would be a sensible and logical step. The reduction of the schools' shares from one-third to one-fourth of total revenues would still give education its largest budget in the history of the State, whether or not the sales tax is raised from 1 to 2 per cent. It would release a considerable amount for other pressing needs of the State.

It would be unfortunate for the cause of education if the school lobby, recently described as "the most powerful group that ever appears before the Legislature," made good its threat to fight the change. This newspaper has always advocated generous funds for the schools. However, in view of Missouri's urgent financial needs, in view of the greater revenue the schools will receive in the coming biennium, it would be sound policy for the Legislature to reduce their share from one-third to one-fourth, and for the schools to agree to the change.

HITCHED ON.

Justices Older, But Do More Work

Record of Supreme Court shows that, while average age of members has been rising, it has been handling steadily growing number of cases; volume of work has more than doubled since '80s; more efficient methods speed judiciary's business; authorities agree delays are slight and time for argument and deliberation is adequate.

From the United States News; Reprinted by Permission.

The Supreme Court is laboring under a heavy burden. . . . It seems clear, therefore, that the necessity of relieving present congestion extends to the enlargement of the capacity of all the Federal courts. A part of the problem of obtaining a sufficient number of Judges to dispose of cases is the capacity of the Judges themselves. This brings forward the question of aged or infirm Judges. . . . A constant and systematic addition of younger blood will vitalize the courts.—From President Roosevelt's message on judicial reform.

RECORDS of the Supreme Court show a constantly increasing volume of business disposed of despite an increase in the average age of the Justices.

Today, although the average age of the Justices is greater, more than twice as many cases as during the years from 1880 to 1910 are being considered and disposed of by the court.

John Marshall, the famous fourth Chief Justice of the United States, presided over a Supreme Court which disposed of only eight cases a term during the first three terms after he assumed office in 1801. Charles Evans Hughes, eleventh Chief Justice, presides over a Supreme Court which during the last three years has considered and disposed of an average of 983 cases a term.

Thus, from the earliest days of the court, until the present, there has been more than a hundredfold increase in the amount of business transacted. Just how much the business of the court has increased during the last half century is shown by the pictogram.

Size of the legal volume needed to record the average number of cases in the terms from 1880 to 1889 is only two-fifths that of the volume needed for the cases in the terms from 1933 to 1936. The increase in the bulkiness of the volumes was gradual up to 1920, but in the following decade, there was a one-third gain in the cases handled. Another substantial increase took place during the succeeding six years.

No corresponding increase has occurred during the last 50 years in the average age of the Justices. During the seven periods shown, there is a maximum range of five years in the average.

But, compared with the period before the Civil War, there has been a decided increase in the average age of the Justices. Until 1862, the average age of Justices at appointment was 48.9 years, but since that year, the average has been 55.8 years. Appointment of older men in more recent years is ascribed to the need for men with enough experience to handle cases arising out of the complex modern legal structure.

Despite the pressure of increased business, the docket of the court has been kept more up-to-date during recent years than at any time in nearly a century. Fewer cases were left on the docket at the end of the last four terms than at the end of any other terms since 1845, when only about one-twentieth as many cases were considered by the court.

How has the court expedited its transactions to keep its work current despite the increase in the number of cases?

Beginning in 1875, a series of changes were made in the judicial law to expedite handling of cases. In 1891, the first permanent modification in the Federal judicial system since its creation 100 years before was made by introducing a system of discretionary review of certain types of cases. This principle of selective or discretionary jurisdiction was extended by the Judiciary Act of 1925.

Under this law, only certain classes of cases can be carried to the court as a matter of right, although the court still has power to decide every type of case which could have come to it before passage of the act.

Prof. Felix Frankfurter of the Harvard Law School, writing in the Harvard Law Review, commends the procedure of the court under the 1925 act: "Never before, it may be ventured without invidiousness, have the standards of the court been higher than since the Judiciary Act of 1925."

In another article in the same publication, he says: "In effect, for the first time since the early years of its institution, the court is hearing and disposing of all litigation brought before it without delay and without sacrifice of any of the guarantee of argument and due deliberation which the effective exercise of its functions demands."

At one time, the court was accustomed to hear lengthy arguments in which lawyers appearing before it had an opportunity for oratorical display. Nowadays, the court frequently stops arguments when it decides it has adequate information for a decision, even though the attorney has not yet used up the time allotted.

The court also expedites business by refusing to indulge counsel in continuances, by insisting on enlightening briefs, by enforcement of adequate initial consideration of cases by the lower Federal court, by penalizing frivolous appeals and by a strict attitude on rehearings.

A large part of the sharp increase in cases during the 1920s is attributed to the swifter procedure under the 1925 law, which has eliminated many oral hearings and opinions which formerly were required of the court.

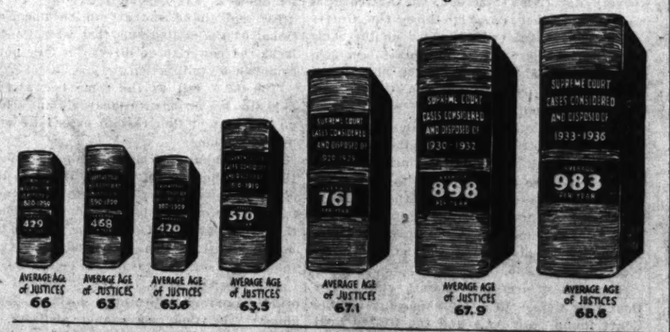
The decline in this phase of the court's work is shown by the record of opinions handed down since 1921:

1921	173	1926	199	1931	130
1922	236	1927	175	1932	108
1923	212	1928	129	1933	138
1924	232	1929	134	1934	156
1925	209	1930	168	1935	143

The Supreme Court hands down many cases without written opinions, as, for instance, when it considers cases coming up from lower courts in which an application for a review is presented. All decisions in applications for review are decisions made by the entire bench, and the affirmative vote of four Justices is sufficient to grant a review.

For the past six years, the court has kept abreast of its docket. Solicitor-General Stanley Reed, in his last annual report, says: "The work of the court is current, and cases are heard as soon after records have been printed as briefs can be prepared."

Record of Cases Disposed of and Justices' Ages Since 1880



Sticking the Taxpayer

From the Baltimore Sun.

SOME days ago, in reference to a supplementary registration in St. Louis, which followed one held five months earlier, it was pointed out that permanent registration would have saved this unnecessary expense to enroll comparatively a few voters. The registration has now been held, and it is shown that it cost $3.50 per vote enrolled.

It is strange that taxpayers have not revolted long ago against this sort of extravagance. True, they have rebelled in a number of states, but in the majority of them, as in Maryland, the old system of periodical registration is adhered to.

In St. Louis, where a long fight has been waged to obtain authority to adopt permanent registration, appeal is again being made to the Legislature now in session to gain the economies and the convenience to the electorate made possible by permanent registration. But the political machines in the State have been hostile to the proposal, and they exert powerful influence at the capital.

Had such a system existed in St. Louis there would have been no difficulty in getting new eligible voters on the poll books without throwing open all city precincts for registration purposes. It could have been done at a central office created for the purpose and operating throughout the year. Voters who had changed residence could have filed notice of the fact by post card. But the plan is too simple and too economical to please the politicians.

If the permanent registration bill which has been introduced at Annapolis is defeated, or is not acted upon, it will be due to the same influences—political unwillingness to surrender patronage or to simplify the election laws.

GANDHI JOINS PARLEY ON PARTY COURSE IN INDIA

Presence of Government Opposition Leader Who Had Retired Is Considered Significant.

WALKS SEVEN MILES TO CONFERENCE

Believed to Favor Taking Seats Won by Congress Party in Provinces in Recent Election.

By the Associated Press.

BOMBAY, India, Feb. 27.—Mohandas K. Gandhi walked seven miles from his home to Wardha today to attend a special meeting of the working committee of the Congress party.

That party, which demands complete independence from Britain and opposes the British plan for a federated government in India, won 715 of the 1585 seats in the lower houses of India's provinces in the recent elections. Only eight places remained undecided in the latest returns.

Gandhi led the Congress party until October, 1934, when he retired. His attendance at the meeting of the working committee, called to discuss formation of ministries in the provinces where the party gained control of the lower houses, was considered to be significant.

Congress candidates gained lower house majorities in the central provinces, the united provinces, Madras, Bihar and Orissa, and just missed a majority in Bombay by one.

In the upper house elections, the party was defeated in all the provinces.

The Congress leaders at the Wardha meeting appeared equally divided on the party's future course. Some held that acceptance of the places to which the candidates were elected would offer the best chance of wrecking the whole new constitution plan, not yet made effective. Others argued that refusal to form cabinets in the states won by the Congress party would be more likely to bring about that result.

Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, president of the party, opposed acceptance of the positions.

Gandhi was believed to favor taking the posts, but his attendance at the parley, some believed, might increase the growing tendency in the party to adopt revolutionary means to win its points.

SENATOR ASHURST

Personal Sketch Of Senior Senator From Arizona

Lewis of Illinois. With that lone exception, no Senator appears so often in a cutaway coat. Even when he shows up in tweeds, it is noted that his coat is a foot longer than the average, hanging well toward his knees. His magnificent pince-nez is secured by a black silk band that would serve as a leash for a Great Dane.

When he gestures, no Senator's nose is safe within a radius of eight feet. When he bows, he almost bumps his forehead on his desk. His favorite posture is with one arm outflung, and the fingertips of the other hand resting delicately over his heart.

Polysyllabic Eloquence.

Not for Henry Fountain Ashurst is the language of the street. He never stoops to a monosyllable when a 10-letter word can be pressed into service. Speaking in the Senate last year, apropos of nothing that can be discovered by reading the record, he said:

"In all our jurisprudence there is no other principle that has been more definitely put into position, or more joyously accepted by Americans, than the principle of the fourth and fifth amendments. They are intimately related, and, notwithstanding their apparent nonchalance, they sustain and protect the very essence of constitutional liberty and security. . . .

"A gentleman calling upon me once asked: 'Did you ever read Lord Coke's famous maxim in Semayne's case?' To wit: 'The house of everyone is to him as his castle and his fortress, as well for his own defense against injury and violence, as for his repose.' I replied: 'Sir, I am, indeed, familiar with Coke, but that was law 1000 years before Milord Coke adorned the bench.'"

And he concluded: "Sheltered and defended by the radiant standards of the fourth and fifth amendments, American liberty becomes visible and vocal, audible and actual."

No one could reasonably deny that any subject expounded by the Senator from Arizona becomes vocal and audible.

Shrewd Psychologist Nevertheless.

On the other hand, let no one suppose that he is a mere windbag. Behind this ornamental facade, enveloped in this farrago of words and gestures, is a quick mind, and a keen understanding of mass psychology. In the 1928 campaign, he was quick to pronounce Al Smith's brown derby campaign a "grave mistake." Said he:

"When I am campaigning, the deeper I go into the back country, the more careful I am to wear a silk hat. The American voter is reasonable—he does not insist that his elected officials be statesmen, but he demands that they look like statesmen."

A few years ago reporters interrupted Ashurst in the act of making a notation in a memorandum book. He explained that he was putting down the name of a constituent whose death had just been reported to him, and added this explanation:

"Earlier in my public career, gentlemen, when my knowledge of politics was even less adquate than it is today, I had an unfortunate experience which taught me a lesson. During one of my campaigns for re-election, I encountered a very old acquaintance, a man who had always supported me for office. Wringing his hand warmly, I inquired: 'How are you, my good friend, and how is your good wife?' To which he replied: 'Senator, I'm all right, but my wife is still dead, as you will recall from that beautiful letter of condolence you sent me after the funeral.' I have endeavored, gentlemen, to save myself from a repetition of that mistake."

Disarming Frankness.

Such seeming frankness is obviously intended to have a disarming effect on actual or potential critics, and often succeeds in that purpose. Prior to the 1934 election, Ashurst received a letter from the Phoenix Chamber of Commerce, objecting to his vote on several measures, and warning that he might expect stiff opposition. He replied:

"I believe you are correct in your conclusion that a number of candidates, all excellent gentlemen, will seek to displace me, but it is beginning to appear that I shall be re-elected, nevertheless, not through any merit which I may possess, or through any political sagacity or activity on my part, but solely through the folly of my opponents."

He was right—at least about being re-elected.

His chairmanship of the Senate Judiciary Committee, to which the court bill has been referred, is a result of seniority. Concerning his knowledge of law and jurisprudence, one guess carries as much authority as another, although a suspicion exists in some quarters that it is spread too wide to go very deep. In the course of one brief speech last year he alluded to Hengist and Horsa, King John and Magna Charta, Edward I and the Confirmatio Chartarum, Entick vs. Carrington and Three Other King's Messengers, Camden and Coke, Washington, Madison, Patrick Henry and the geographical boundaries of Schleswig.

A Matter of Roller-Skating.

As for his devotion to principle —to what he had already said about rising above it, he recently added, in a letter to an inquiring constituent: "I should be lacking in frankness, and deficient in courtesy, if I failed to tell you that I shall support President Roosevelt all along the line."

The picture is reasonably complete when to it is given this final touch, in his own words:

"In the Senate, you are on roller skates. You go partly where you like to go, and partly where your skates take you."

FRED ENGLISH TO HEAD SYMPHONY CAMPAIGN

Will Direct Raising of Funds to Meet Next Season's Deficit.

Former Circuit Judge Fred L. English has been selected as general chairman of the campaign, March 10 to 18, to raise funds to meet the operating deficit of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra during the 1937-38 season. Expenses of the season are invariably greater than income from box office receipts. Announcement of his appointment was made by Oscar Johnson, president of the Symphony Society Board of Control.

Preliminary preparations for the campaign are under way and headquarters have been established at Hotel Mayfair, where it is hoped that 600 volunteer solicitors will be enrolled before the opening day. The workers will be divided into five groups for the canvass.

In accepting the chairmanship, English said he considered the orchestra one of St. Louis' most valuable assets.

"I am deeply conscious of the fact that, aside from the obvious cultural value, it is one of the most powerful character building agencies in the community," he continued.

"The orchestra belongs to all of the people in St. Louis. It is a civic institution and must more and more be supported as such. It is providing a musical appreciation education for our children through its matinee concerts and high school educational series. It sets the standard for all musical expression in St. Louis. Through tour concerts, it is one of the city's most powerful advertising mediums, and, incidentally, is a $200,000 payroll industry, all of which is spent in St. Louis."

MISSOURI CHILD LABOR COMMITTEE'S VIEWS

Reasons Given for Considering Amendment; Kinney Bill Inadequate.

The Missouri Child Labor Committee issued a statement yesterday of its reasons for considering the proposed amendment to the Federal Constitution as the only solution to the problem of child labor and for considering the Kinney bill, pending in the Missouri Legislature, as inadequate.

The proposed Missouri regulation, the committee said, would not be effective unless every other state had a child labor law also. Otherwise, it was said, Missouri enforcement officials would find it almost impossible to determine what products shipped into Missouri were manufactured by child labor. Moreover, it was pointed out, the Kinney bill did not protect children employed in the so-called service trades, but applied only to employment in productive industries.

Although the Kinney bill would give Missouri children better protection from exploitation, the statement continued, the apparent impossibility of uniform action by the 48 states made it clear tthe only way to abolish child labor was ratification of the proposed Federal amendment.

Members of the Executive Committee, which issued the statement, are Mrs. Roscoe Anderson of the League of Women Voters, Charles Stoetzer of the American Legion, Joseph P. Clark, president of the Central Trades and Labor Union; Miss N. Ruth Wood, president, Missouri Women's Legislative Committee; Bishop William Scarlett of the Episcopal Church, Rabbi F. M. Isserman of Temple Israel, Prof. Ralph Fuchs of Washington University Law School and Mrs. H. H. Muchall, Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs.

CRYSTAL LAKE HOLDING CO. MEETING OBLIGATIONS, IT SAYS

Hearing on Order to Show Cause Why Property Should Not Be Sold Is Postponed.

Hearing on an order to show cause why property of the Crystal Lake Holding Co., which operates a fee golf course in St. Louis County, should not be sold at public auction, was postponed until March 30 by Federal Judge Charles B. Davis yesterday when an attorney for the firm stated that obligations were being met. It was expected that dismissal of a voluntary bankruptcy action, filed for the purpose of reorganization, would soon be sought.

Attorney John C. Dyott said creditors of the company would be paid within the next 10 days, at which time he would ask for dismissal of the proceedings. Fred Essen and Victor H. Essen "were interested in the proposition," he said. Land owned by the company has been appraised at $46,000. A first mortgage of $35,000 and second deed for $4300 are outstanding.

38,322 STRUCK OFF REGISTRATION ROLLS

Of 38,924 'Not Found' Only 602 Satisfy Board of Right to Vote.

Of 38,924 registered voters reported "not found" at the addresses from which they had enrolled in September, in a revision canvass by precinct clerks Feb. 19 and 20, only 820 appeared at the Election Board headquarters to prove their right to vote.

This condition reflected a heavy shifting of population. Most of the "not found" group were in wards inhabited by persons in lower economic levels, many of whom move frequently.

Notices were left by the canvassers and additional notices mailed to the addresses of registration last Monday for all of the 38,924 "not found." The board was in session Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to pass on cases of those who offered proof of their right to vote, although listed as unfound.

The proof was satisfactory in the case of 602 persons, but was not accepted from the remaining 218. Hence, out of the 38,924 "not found" the board scratched 38,322 from the voters' rolls.

In the supplementary registration preceding the canvass, which was held in preparation for the municipal primary of March 12 and election of April 6, there were 23,701 new voters enrolled.

The general quadrennial registration last September, preceding the presidential election of November, put the record number of 425,671 voters on the books. Following the recent supplementary enrollment and the revision, the registration for the municipal election was reduced to 411,050. This is the second largest number ever on the St. Louis books.

However, in the last four comparable primaries, in the years of mayoral elections, only about half of the eligible voters have cast ballots.

Roosevelt, Constitution and Court

vanter and Butler. Their retirement would leave Cardozo, Stone and Roberts. The first two of these later were among the three of the 6 to 3 decisions.

If the six new Justices shared the views expressed by Cardozo and Stone as to the Guffey Act and the AAA, the vote on duplicates of these bills would, of course, be 8 to 1, in favor with Justice Roberts the lone dissenter.

At Least Three Against New NRA.

What would happen to a new NRA measure is problematical, but on the basis of the record there certainly would be at least three votes against it when it reached the Court, those of Cardozo, Stone and Roberts.

While President Roosevelt's purpose has been plainly stated by himself and Attorney-General Cummings to be to bring about validation of his legislative program by infusing "new blood" into the Court, it will be seen that the success of this aim is not assured. The barrier in the President's way is the unanimity of the NRA decision. The three Justices whose dissent in the AAA and Guffey cases is the principal reliance in the effort to justify the scheme to remake the Court, agreed in the NRA case with their six associates in holding that Congress was absolutely without power to regulate wages and other elements in the relations of employers and employes in local activities which were neither commerce in nature nor interstate in character.

Nor did the decision leave it to be inferred that wages paid to persons engaged exclusively in interstate commerce could be regulated by Congress. One thing which made the decision devastating from the New Deal point of view was the fact that Justices Cardozo and Stone (of the significant three) joined in a separate concurring opinion which was even stronger than the principal decision in its dissent from the Roosevelt view of the Constitution as expressed in the so-called recovery statute.

Not So Simple or Practical.

President Roosevelt said of the Constitution in his first inaugural address that it was "so simple and practical that it is possible always to meet extraordinary needs by changes in emphasis and arrangement."

In the NRA this change of emphasis and arrangement was attempted by asserting in the preamble of the act that the purpose of Congress was to remove "obstructions to the free flow of interstate and foreign commerce," and to promote the general welfare by increasing purchasing power (wages and income) and improving the standards of labor. Thus the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce was to be used to raise wages, shorten hours, increase employment, and increase profits so employers could pay the higher wages.

The declaration of policy in the act argued that the unemployment and disorganization of industry existing were burdens on interstate commerce, diminishing the amount thereof, and so were subject to the regulatory power of Congress. This was intended to make the act reach the whole body of business activity and employment, however far removed from interstate commerce.

The Supreme Court said no, by nine to nose.

Taxing Power Theory Denied.

In the AAA, which provided for subsidies to farmers under certain conditions and taxed processors to raise these subsidies, the change in emphasis and arrangements was attempted by declaring an emergency that affected the national public interest and again asserting that the conditions which existed burdened and obstructed the flow of commerce. The taxing power was resorted to to effectuate control of production.

The Court said no by a majority of two to one. What was being attempted was regulation of agricultural industry which was outside the power of Congress.

In the Guffey Act it was again attempted to employ the taxing power to promote the general welfare, and it was declared that the production of coal "directly affected" interstate commerce in the commodity, and the purpose to remove burdens and obstructions to interstate commerce was asserted. Again the Court said this was an indirect attempt to do what Congress had no power to do directly; that is, regulate wages in the coal mining industry. And again the Court divided—two to one against the act.

In the fourth case vital to New Deal policy, the cancellation of the gold clause in private contracts, as has been pointed out, the President's view was upheld by a 5 to 4 decision.

Collateral New Deal Measures Restricted in Scope; TVA and Others

The cases which follow related to measures which, while expressing the New Deal philosophy, were not integral parts of its legislative program and were restricted in scope.

Broad powers to make and enforce regulations of industry in a limited field were delegated to the President and agencies under his control in the "hot oil" section of NRA. Here the court said, by 8 to 1, that these powers were legislative in character, belonged to Congress, and under the Constitution could not be delegated.

Only two acts of Congress which have been described as New Deal legislation were killed by 5 to 4 decisions, both being a secondary importance and limited in their application to special circumstances. The original railway employes' retirement pension act was one. The railways, which as public utilities are particularly susceptible to regulation, are admittedly subject to Congressional control as instrumentalities of interstate commerce, and the Court has even upheld regulation of labor conditions on them where safety of operation is concerned. But the retirement act which taxed all railway payrolls for pensions to be paid to retired employes under conditions prescribed by Congress was held by a majority of the Court to amount to an unconstitutional taking of private property.

Municipal Bankruptcy Act.

The other 5 to 4 decision invalidated the Municipal Bankruptcy Act which authorized political subdivisions such as drainage districts to compose or write down their debts. In the majority view this infringed on the rights reserved to the states and was in effect the countenancing of an act which the Constitution forbids the states to do, that is, to impair the obligations of contract. Obviously this had little relation to the broad "planned economy" program of NRA and AAA.

There were two subsidiary decisions, however, in which the nine Justices joined in holding unconstitutional the Frazier-Lemke farm-mortgage moratorium law and the act for issuance of Federal charters to building and loan associations chartered under state laws.

The Frazier-Lemke act permitted a mortgagor in default to retain possession of his farm by paying a rental and ultimately to discharge the debt by paying an amount fixed by appraisers. This amounted to a public taking of private property (the mortgagee's security) without just compensation, the unanimous Court said.

The building and loan association provision, which was in a section of the Home Owners' Loan Act, also was found by unanimous vote of the justice to violate states' rights in that it undertook to authorise the discarding of a state charter by a financial institution for a Federal charter without the consent of the state authorities having jurisdiction.

In still another case all nine justices voted against the President, this in connection with an executive action and not an act of Congress. They overruled his dismissal of the late William E. Humphrey as a member of the Federal Trade Commission on the ground that he exceeded his authority and that his act was illegal. The act of Congress creating the commission provided that the President, who had the appointment of members, could dismiss them only for inefficiency, neglect of duty or malfeasance. The dismissal was for none of these but so the President might make his own selection and better serve the purposes of his administration, that is, the New Deal.

Besides the cancellation of the gold clause in private contracts, the Court has upheld three other New Deal acts of Congress, each having a bearing on the Roosevelt program but not having the fundamental importance of NRA. The decision in favor of the Ashurst-Sumners Act, first of these, was unanimous, that is all eight justices sitting voted for it and there was no doubt that Justice Stone, absent because of illness, would have approved it.

This act, indorsed by organized labor, prohibited the shipment of convict-made goods into states forbidding their sale, and also required the factual branding of such goods when shipped in interstate commerce. Its purpose was to limit the competition of prison labor with free labor. The decision followed the much earlier one upholding the Webb-Kenyon law which prohibited liquor shipment into dry states. The commerce clause application was clearly recognized.

In upholding the 50 per cent tax on profits in silver trading the Court also was unanimous under the same circumstances as in the Ashurst-Sumners case. Justice Stone again being absent. An act providing for the purchase of silver for monetary reserves at a price above the then market price, imposed the tax and made it retroactive for some months preceeding the enactment of the law. The Court held it was valid as a special income tax and not violative of any constitutional rights, as the retroactive period was only that in which profits might have accrued in contemplation of enactment of the law.

TVA a New Deal Victory.

The New Deal won a victory also in the TVA case where the court by 8 to 1 confirmed the authority of the Government to sell and distribute electricity produced at Wilson Dam on the Tennessee River The sale was approved on the ground that the electricity was produced incidentally in exercise of the constitutional power to control navigable streams. Because the Court specifically limited its decision to the particular case, this was not construed as a blanket validation of whole New Deal program for water-power development.

Three other decisions on Congressional acts are sometimes included in considering the New Deal and the Court. One was the unanimous ruling in favor of refund of processing taxes under the AAA. This necessarily followed from the decision invalidating AAA. The second was the 7-to-1 opinion upholding the power given by an act of Congress to the President to place an embargo on shipment of arms intended for the Chaco war in South America, in no way concerned with New Deal policies. The third was a 6-to-3 ruling that the Securities and Exchange Commission could not compel a witness to testify before it after he had withdrawn a securities registration statement upon which it was proposed to examine him. Only an administrative action was at issue.

New York Minimum Wage Case.

The Court has been criticised also for its 5 to 4 decision holding the New York minimum wage law was unconstitutional. Although this was a state measure and not part of the New Deal, it was in sympathy with the Roosevelt program. The act provided for minimum wages for women and children in New York State, and the Court held that this deprived persons of freedom of contract, a property right, contrary to the guarantees of the Fourteenth Amendment. Justices Butler, Roberts, Van Devanter, Sutherland and McReynolds made up the majority, and on the other side were Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Brandeis, Cardozo and Stone.

Two other state laws in sympathy with New Deal objectives have been sustained by the Court by 5 to 4 decisions against attacks on their constitutionality. One was the Minnesota mortgage moratorium, which did not go so far as the Federal Frazier-Lemke Act. Here Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Brandeis, Cardozo, Roberts and Stone made up the majority.

The other decision was on the New York law for controlling the price of milk at retail. In its limited field this followed the purposes of NRA as to stabilizing business. The same five justices who sustained the Minnesota moratorium law also voted in favor of this act.

Justices' Ages Not a Factor.

Examination of these decisions fails to show any relation between the ages of the Justices, to which attention was sharply drawn by the President's proposal to provide for retirement at 70, and their respective votes on New Deal legislation. For example, Justice Brandeis, now 80, was one of the three who dissented to the decision invalidating AAA and the Guffey Control Act. Two of the younger Justices, Cardozo, 66, and Stone, 64, were frequently with Brandeis but not always. The youngest member of the Court, Justice Roberts, 61, and one of the older members, Chief Justice Hughes, 74, have sometimes been together in a decision invalidating a New Deal act and in other cases have been together on the other side.

The other four Justices, Van Devanter, 77; McReynolds, 75; Sutherland, 74, and Butler, 70, constituted the minority which held the cancellation of gold clauses in private contracts to be unconstitutional; but they have joined the others in upholding the Ashurst-Sumners Act concerning convict-made goods. They also joined in sustaining TVA.

Persons who confidently divide the Court into "liberals" and "conservatives" have been stumped by these variations.

CLOSER UTILITY REGULATION IN PROSPECT, SAYS M'NINCH

Head of Federal Power Board Tells Harvard Class Obstruction Only Delays Sound Control.

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 27.—Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Power Commission, said today that administration of public utilities in the future would be subject to closer scrutiny and more rigid measures of control by public regulatory bodies.

Speaking before a Harvard class in public utility management, McNinch said the problems now facing management of this industry would not be solved or the responsibilities of the times met "by resorting to obstructive litigation."

"Vigorous Federal regulation, a militant demand in many regions for municipal ownership, the definitely established policy of the National Government to utilize the nation's natural resources of water power in the public interest—these are only some of the major problems now facing the management of private industry," he said.

"No one can justly criticise recourse to the courts for legitimate purposes of protecting constitutional or property rights against arbitrary or unlawful action," McNinch continued, "but we know only too well, from observation and experience, that the result of much obstructive litigation has been only to delay and paralyze, for a season, sound public regulation."

GERMANY NEXT TO BRITAIN IN GOODS SALES TO PALESTINE

Purchases by Jews as Result of Plan to Salvage Emigrant Capital.

By the Associated Press.

JERUSALEM, Feb. 27.—Palestine buys more goods from Germany than any other nation except Great Britain. Most of the goods are purchased by Jews.

The explanation is to be found in the activities of "Haavara Trust & Transfer Office, Ltd." It was established in November, 1933, to salvage some of the capital of prospective emigrants by converting their resources in Germany into goods which were sold to Palestinian importers. Money received by Haavara was turned over to the German emigrant upon his arrival here.

Because of regulations limiting free operation of the Haavara plan, the emigrant loses at least 50 per cent of his capital in the transfer. But the Haavara scheme has been indorsed by Jewish organizations as the only feasible method of salvaging Jewish capital.

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY JOHN G. NEIHARDT

FIRST ENGLISH VERSION OF A HEBREW MASTER

THE BRIDAL CANOPY. By S. J. Agnon. Rendered into English by I. M. Lask. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., Garden City, N. Y.)

IT IS said that Samuel Joseph Agnon is the foremost man of letters writing in Hebrew today. His work has already been translated into many languages, and he is spoken of as a candidate for the Nobel Prize.

This novel, his first work to appear in English translation, justifies the respect in which his name has been held, and gives unmistakable evidence of his stature as novelist. Mr. Agnon is obviously a man of enormous learning, in the spiritual traditions as well as the external history of his race. In "The Bridal Canopy" his erudition and broad human sympathies produce extraordinary richness and power.

In its general lines, the story that Mr. Agnon tells is scarcely more than an anecdote. The protagonist, Reb Yudel, is a devout Jewish scholar, well versed in the lore of his people, and inordinately fond of the simple pleasures of life. His three daughters, Gitelle, Blume and Pessele, are all between the ages of 17 and 20, and are therefore marriageable; but, because of their poverty and the absence of a dowry, no suitors present themselves. His wife upbraids him: "Why, the girls have all but wept their eyes away and the hair on their head is all but turning white, yet there you sit like a lump of clay in the form of a man, without lifting a finger to marry them off." With the encouragement of his Rabbi, Yudel acquires a team of horses, a wagon, a driver named Nuti, and a pillow which, worn under his clothing, he hopes will give him an air of sleek, well-fed prosperity. With these Yudel sets forth on a long journey through Galatia, in search of bridegrooms for his three aging daughters. At the very end of the book, and after a long series of vicissitudes, Yudel returns successful, and his daughters are brought under the bridal canopy, according to tradition.

But this is not the material of the novel. Mr. Agnon's real subject matter grows about and within this plot, by a process of accretion. For at every turn of the road Yudel and Nuti come upon innkeepers and other travelers, of all kinds and conditions, who have one thing alone in common: their delight in telling or listening to a good story. There are literally hundreds of anecdotes in this book. At one point even the horses exchange reminiscences. It is out of these stories, and stories within stories, which are heaped upon the reader in good-humored profusion, that the spiritual tradition of the Jewish people emerges. Their heroism is always implicit in the narrative, and the reader is moved by their constant loyalty to one another, the wry cheerfulness with which they face the prospect of oppression, exile, or death.

Somehow, it seems unnecessary to speak of "craftsmanship" in this novel. Craftsmanship is here, in the form of a fully perfected narrative technique, but this (as it should be, and rarely is) remains always below the surface. As a result, "The Bridal Canopy" is not memorable for technical virtuosity; instead, what will remain in most readers' minds will be Mr. Agnon's naive exuberance, or his intoxication with the meanings of words, in which he is comparable with Rabelais, or his humanity, which is peculiarly his own. There is reason to believe that the work has greatness and will endure.

Foremost Novelist Writing in Hebrew

S. J. AGNON

HE LOST AND FOUND HIMSELF

AS OF THE GODS. By Rollo Walter Brown. (D. Appleton-Century Co., New York.)

THE attainment of spiritual maturity through the loss of self in a regenerating sense of the whole is the theme of Rollo Walter Brown's latest story here noted. It is at least as old as the Upanishads, and yet the psychological phenomenon involved, according to those who have experienced it, is said to seem overwhelmingly new with each recurrence—as though the world had just been seen for the first time.

Giles Dabney, a famous architect and city planner, suddenly realizes in the course of a morning walk that he has lived rather more than half the normal life-span. He has never been convinced of personal survival, but heretofore his unconsidered attitude has been that of youth; he has never thought of death as occurring to him within a definite time. Now the thought of dying within a few brief years appalls him. He seeks to learn what convictions, if any, others may have about survival, but is unable to find anyone who is utterly convinced. The universe seems a vast desolation and man's life no more than a brief and meaningless pain. He is loved by his family and honored by the world, but he is bedeviled increasingly with the question that perhaps every intelligent person has asked at one time or another: "What's it all about?" Nobody seems to know.

It is the intention of the author to suggest in his story something of the process by which Giles Dabney found a regenerating answer. His difficulty, the reader is made to understand, was that which characterizes spiritual adolescence—the egocentricity of his worldview. Religionists of one type would say that he had not yet achieved salvation; those of another and more ancient type would explain that the self was lost in illusion; psychiatrists would employ scientific terms in describing his trouble. An electrician might say that his personality was short-circuited, and so produced more heat than illumination.

What Dabney apparently achieves at last has been described as cosmic consciousness—an overpowering realization of universal identity, the individual life being conceived as one manifestation of a single cosmic reality. In the author's words: "He might project himself wherever he would and encounter only variations of the essence of his own life. The staggering desolation! It was only the rest of himself out there signaling to the part of him that was here."

As the result of this realization, he experiences "the peace that passeth understanding," "the serene life as of the gods."

Without intending to disparage, it may be noted that the story as told is hardly to be described as distinguished fiction. It is not well integrated, lacks dynamic pattern, and as the presentation of a psychological process is less than convincing. But the state of consciousness realized by the protagonist is beautifully presented, and this, the vital idea in the book, may be likened to a precious stone, it's living light undimmed by any setting.

THE TRUE RABELAISIAN SPIRIT

THE BOYS IN THE BACK ROOM. By Jules Romains (Robert M. McBride & Co., New York.)

HOMERIC drunkenness is this book's theme. Seven good companions are drinking, were drinking, have drunk together. One of their number stumbles upon a map of France. Out of the map stare insolently two circle-inclosed dots. The boys conceive them to be eyes and are offended by their unblinking gaze. On closer examination the eyes prove to be the dots locating Ambert and Issoire, two French provincial towns. Issoire and Ambert! Sodom and Gomorrah! "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." Fearful is the vengeance the boys will wreak upon the offending towns. Like seven heroes before another Thebes they plot the downfall of Ambert and Issoire. First a visit to the oracle. Truly Delphic is the vaticination of their somnambulant seer. The oracular response, however, being interpreted, augurs success.

Finally, concrete plans of action emerge. By different paths, afoot, on bicycle, by train, the heroes come to the determined battle ground. It is not possible to summarize the cataclysm that shakes Ambert like Priam's Troy, to suggest in scant epitome the sermon that transforms her Holy Mass into an orgy of Astarte. Presumptuous would be any attempt to picture the resurrection of Vercingetorix, a miracle that rocks Issoire upon her ancient foundations.

Serenely pastoral is the final picnic scene. After their epic labors the heroes "wreathe the bowls with wine, and no heart lacks its equal share of the feast." They have spent a day of sublime omnipotence, Olympian irresponsibility. At last, in the evening, their laughter is unquenchable like the laughter of the blessed gods.

This book authentically recaptures an attitude that has almost ceased to exist in literature. Most modern attempts to body forth the Rabelaisian spirit end by being merely enervating and nasty. "The Boys in the Back Room" is the real McCoy. Its horse-play is magnificent, its prose vigorous and colorful, its dialogue sophisticated. One thinks of Sterne or Petronius.

Higher Education For the Able

THE AMERICAN STATE UNIVERSITY: Its Relation to Democracy. By Norman Foerster. (The University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill.)

A SYSTEM of higher education that will produce men and women rather than slaves or human calculating machines has been a dream for long. The finest Greek thinkers argued for it in the interests of citizenship. The medieval university, with its "studium generale," worked toward it, though often perversely and in opposition to progress. It was the design, at least, behind the founding of the early American colleges, and tribute is still paid to it, in most universities, by the existence of a college of liberal arts. "The key to educational reform," writes Dr. Foerster, "is the college of liberal arts"; and he is concerned, in this book, with the elevation of these arts to their proper place in the colleges, and with the reasons why, in our state universities, they have come to be neglected and despised.

A higher education for every citizen, without distinction of ability, was not Jefferson's idea, Dr. Foerster observes. It was an inevitable corollary of the leveling "democracy" that came when Andrew Jackson's followers rioted in the White House. "Jeffersonian democracy is . . . government by a natural aristocracy based on the consent of the people." For the education of this natural aristocracy, already equipped with brains and the capacity to benefit from education, colleges are needed; while, for the mass of citizens, mediocre in ability and capacity to grow, a more practical training must be supplied in vocational schools.

Unfortunately, as the author indicates, the state colleges in the Middle West were not founded on Jeffersonian principles. They opened their doors to the masses, who demand an education that prepares them for jobs. With a belief in the vocational purpose of a college went the other belief in "scientific" subjects, from which the value of human personality disappeared under an avalanche of facts and denials.

Dr. Foerster gives frank and hearty encouragement to return to the old ideal of humane learning. Even for the sake of democracy, he insists, it is wise to train only those who are fit to learn, and to insist that the purposes of education be personal and not statistical. "Wisdom and virtue," he contends, with Newman and Montaigne, are the worthy ends of a free man's education; and they can be attained only when that education is liberal and humane.

And of Course There Was Shooting

SADDLE MEN OF THE C BIT BRAND. By Hart Thorne. (Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.)

"MORE grass" was the cry of the Dakota cattlemen as they were pushed out of their grazing country by the advancement of civilization. Sam Clay decided to leave the country. He had found more grass in the Santa Theresa Valley, and while there he had seen a woman of the same type that had stirred the blood of the C Bit Clays since they had first packed a gun. Sam bought an option on the ranch of Felix Le Donne, but when he arrived with his herd of 3000 cattle Le Donne returned the money and refused to sell. Felix also was interested in cattle and a woman—the same woman and Sam's cattle.

Of course, there was shooting. Sam was not the type of man who would back out of trouble, and even had he wished to do so Le Donne had made it impossible for him to leave the valley, for Le Donne controlled the waterholes in the Sandrock desert.

There are some surprising revelations and an ex-crook who is a lawyer and quotes Shakespeare. There is also an Ei Gallo celebration that turns the tide of events.

The book requires no effort to read and when finished the reader can lay it aside and go to sleep.

THREE-DIMENSIONAL PICTURE OF SPAIN AND HER TRAGEDY

THE SPANISH TRAGEDY. By E. Allison Peers. (Oxford University Press, New York.)

SPAIN IN REVOLT. By Harry Gannes and Theodore Repard. (Alfred A. Knopf, New York.)

BEHIND THE SPANISH BARRICADES. By John Langdon-Davies. (Robert M. McBride & Co., New York.)

THE causes and issues of the Spanish civil war are being warmly debated all over the world; everywhere, that is, where debate is still permitted. Each of these books is in its own way a valuable guide to what has happened and is happening in that bitter conflict, as well as what led up to it.

The varied qualifications and approaches of the writers make the three books complement one another. Viewed together, their various angles form a three-dimensional picture of the subject, as may be seen from a brief statement of the writers' backgrounds.

The author of the book first listed is professor of Spanish at the University of Liverpool. In the last 20 years, he has spent more than a fourth of his time in the peninsula, and has come to know its people and history well. The second book is by two newspaper men whose work for five years has included watching the developments in Spain. They have studied material in five languages and synthesized it into a factual record. The last writer is a British journalist and scientist, a former Labor M. P., who has visited Spain numerous times both before and during the war.

The most vivid writing by far has gone into Mr. Langdon-Davies' book, the last named, and his picture is the most intimate of the three. His knowledge of not only the Spanish but the Catalan tongue has been of great value in getting facts at first-hand. He has mingled on familiar terms with Spaniards of all classes, ridden over the war-torn country by motorcycle. Thus he is enabled to describe the conflict in terms of human beings, those at the front and those at home, with little reference to documents, statistics or past history.

The underlying details are fully supplied by Messrs. Gannes and Repard. Their book (of which this is the second and revised edition) is a political, social and economic history of Spain from the reign of the Bourbons up to and including the reign of terror. The volume supplies clarifying background material for both the daily news and such a close-up account as Mr. Langdon-Davies has written.

Prof. Peers' book is a more leisurely and objective piece of writing than the others. Begun almost a year before the conflict broke out, when the writer became convinced that the Republic was "doomed to disaster," his work tells in detailed fashion the story of Spain beginning with the De Rivera dictatorship, with two final chapters on the war. To the writer, "The immediate outlook is almost indescribably dark."

Here are four writers of contrasting antecedents and political thought. They agree in asserting that both sides had made mistakes prior to the war. Langdon-Davies, of strong loyalist sympathies, says: "There is never a war between angels and devils." Peers gives a balanced account of errors by the Government and its opponents. Gannes and Repard, while ardently defending the Government cause, are bitter in indicting the Republic for its shortcomings and unwise policies.

The three books agree, however, on other vital points. They condemn forcefully those who committed the overt act, who, in Langdon-Davies' words, "let loose the supreme horror of civil war." They agree that the Government was a democratic one, legally elected; that, contrary to the wild radicalism charged, it included only a tiny fraction of extremists; that reactionaries played a large role in the months of violence preceding actual war.

These are, of course, the sticking points for apologists of the Fascist rebels. They are presented by the detached scholar as well as the partisans among this group of writers. They are facts that cannot be dodged in appraising the conflict launched by the feudal and militaristic elements, that have plunged Spain into chaos.

A VARIETY OF ENTERTAINMENT

A ROOF OVER THEIR HEADS. By Ethel Hueston. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

NOT ALL RIVERS. By Adriana Spadoni. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., Garden City, N. Y.)

LUCIFER IN PINE LAKE. By Samuel Rogers. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

THE QUIET SHORE. By Walter Havighurst. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

OUT OF THIS NETTLE. By Mary Gates. (Thomas Y. Crowell Co., New York.)

SHINING RIVER. By Joan Sutherland. (Coward-McCann, Inc., New York.)

LIGHT fiction, as a rule, since its primary function is to entertain, confines itself to what people choose to regard as fundamental problems—love, marriage, success—and ignores those situations which arise from small, niggling aspects of the environment which are depressingly mundane and unconquerable. For obvious reasons, few novels of this type, dealing with the depression, have been successful. With "A Roof Over Their Heads," Ethel Hueston, a practiced writer, has entered this hitherto unpopular field. Although the novel belongs to the "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew" school of writing, the author tells a lively human story arising from the conflicts and needs of the sons and daughters who return to the ancestral roof with their husbands, wives, and children. It is the story of the Merediths, once important people in a small community, their falling upon evil days, and the working out of their problems. The humor and sympathy of the characterizations make this tale more entertaining than one might suppose. There is no attempt to explain the economic causes for the Merediths' situation; this is a simple chronicle of how they were affected by it. Dorothy Thomas in "The Farm" did the same thing for highbrows.

Another novel which makes use of present day situations, is "Not All Rivers." It is strictly in the contemporary mood, dealing with problems of personal integrity and purpose in the modern empirical manner. It concerns the childhood of Rhoda, her college life and marriage to a chemistry professor whose handsome profile and detached introspection conceal an incapacity for effective action. Rhoda, a person of sensitivity and energy but no specialized talents, thinks that she has found her destiny in her marriage because she can provide the love and respect her husband needs to become a great scientist. After the failure of her marriage, she goes through a series of adventures and adjustments until she finally finds herself and her place in society. The author gives a vivid, thoughtful history of one personality, with many expertly drawn minor characters, the prototypes of numerous figures familiar in present-day society. As in many novels which take a character through childhood into maturity, the first part is more interesting and individualized than the last. Perhaps this is because adulthood involves standardization; and that, after all, is not the author's fault.

"Lucifer in Pine Lake" is a story of a personality and its effect on others. Actually it is a character sketch in novel form and suffers from anemia of plot and a too recent reading of Marcel Proust.

"The Quiet Shore" is the story of a family feud in Ohio. The family includes the children of Roger Bradley by his first wife, who remain farmers, and the children of his second wife, who become business men. The depression and the love between two young half cousins heighten the conflict, so that when gas is discovered on the farm, no amicable settlement seems possible. Much "My country 'tis of thee" business and only passably interesting.

"Out of this Nettle," laid in the badlands of South Dakota, swings from circus to ranch to rodeo, and is not a typical Western story. It concerns a girl circus rider (who becomes a herd boy on a ranch), a shell-shocked aviator, a thoroughly detestable villain, an equally execrable villainess, and some good local color. It ought to make an average Class B Hollywood motion picture.

"Shining River" is one of those English novels that are crowded with people, all of whom are related to each other. The one character who at first seems not to be related, turns out to be the illegitimate daughter of one of the nicest members of the family.

Tale of Oklahoma Oil Region

MADNESS IN THE HEART. By Edward Donahoe. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

LAID in the northern oil region of the author's native Oklahoma, this first novel begins on a Sophoclean theme. The gentle Antigone of the Greek drama was immured because she sprinkled earth on the body of her brother, for whom such rites had been forbidden. The far from gentle Timothy Wilson, of the present story, buried by night, in consecrated ground, the body of a neighbor who had hanged himself. For such defiance of the church's decrees, Timothy was cursed from the altar.

Sympathize as the reader may with Timothy's action in this case, yet the curse appears to have worked. He is shown in later years as a Freudian father, who so resents his favorite daughter's marriage that he smashes her piano with an ax, and drives out his protesting wife.

Around the Wilsons, and the profanely gossiping Mrs. Regan, there develops a lively social chronicle of the Tulsa-Pawhuska-Ponca oil country in its early boom years, a generation ago. Details of college life, at a boys' school in Kansas, are related in such detail, and the teachers, members of a religious order, are so unlovingly pictured, as to suggest that this part of the book is autobiographical. However, a general disclaimer, prefacing the story, states that it is all "to be regarded as fiction." —C. F. Hurd.

He Contributed Much To Our Nation's Making

THOMAS PAINE

The Moon Came Over the Mountain

THE MOONS RIDE OVER. By Carl Zuckmayer. Translated by Moray Firth. (The Viking Press, New York.)

THE guests who came to the Tyrol castle of Firmin Stries, most of them concerned in one way or another with the new play that he was writing, spent much of their time telling each other that they were living on the boundary between time and chaos, between one world and its opposite, between the death of one millennium and the birth of another. They talked about it very beautifully and with deep understanding, but they did not always agree. Sometimes they quarreled quite violently without knowing exactly what they were quarreling about. That was because they were poised precariously there between one millennium and another, with chaos impending, and didn't know what to do about it. They took refuge in mysticism and fatalism and, when last heard from, they were still talking beautifully about it up there at the Tyrol castle, and the world was wagging along about as usual.

Firmin had a sister, Magdalena. By day she was all that a girl should be, but when the moon came over the mountain she was bewitched. She communed with the spirits and the birds of the air. There was a strange bond between her and her brother which transcended Firmin's relations with his wife and frustrated the devotion of the men who were drawn to her. One of these men was the artist, Thomas, who came as a guest to the castle and tarried at an inn in the neighborhood, strongly attracted to Magdalena of the Moon but, because she was pledged to Mario, comforting himself with Mena, waitress at the inn.

But Magdalena was not for Mario or for Thomas. Mario found it out when he trespassed upon her mood and received a blow in the face, and Thomas found it out when he took her in his arms while the moon spell was upon her and fell back under her blows when the spell passed.

It is a tale that is told in beautiful prose, but told to no practical purpose; for when the guests at the castle have said their all, the world is still in a plight and nothing has been done about it. Magdalena, bride of the Moon, set apart from mortal lovers, goes to her death because there is no place else for her to go and because the poet-author who created her doesn't know what to do with her. Clumsily contrived tragedy and the theatrical climax of Thomas and Mena meeting and parting in the church bring the fantasy to an end.

Skillful Summary Of Year's News

"IN 1936." By Alvin C. Eurich and Elmo C. Wilson. (Henry Holt & Company, New York.)

TEN, fifteen, or twenty years from now it will be interesting to have this book convenient for reference, and so see what of today's importance will have become tomorrow's insignificance. Certainly all of today's importance will be found in "In 1936," for the authors have summarized in essay form the news of the past year.

Surprisingly enough, what might have been merely a dull compedium turns out to be a well-written and clear synthesis. Where necessary, as in dealing with the now tacitly scrapped naval treaties, the authors give the background essential to an understanding of the news of last year. Where events have not clearly indicated definite trends, the authors have not attempted to be prophets merely for the sake of prophecy; they have refused to guess, for example, how long the present business boom will last or how fast the fastest human being can run. But they have not hesitated to point out trends where trends have been evident, even in such a minor matter as furniture styles.

The complicated situation presented in the part on international relations leaves the reader dazed. But from the almost as complicated national scene there seems to emerge one fact: whether we like it or not, the United States is moving slowly but inevitably toward a more socially integrated life. In spite of the many adverse court decisions in 1936, for instance, much of the social security legislation weathered the storm. In spite of what future decisions may be on the Tennessee Valley Authority, as Wilson and Eurich point out, the ideals of these plans have been accepted as good by the majority of voters. The majority has been shown that old-age pensions and cheap electric power, to cite only two examples, are entirely within reach, and what the American majority wants seriously enough it usually gets eventually.

Elections, strikes, wars, education, moving pictures, art of all kinds, books, prize fights, all are recorded in "In 1936." Even now some of them have been forgotten. Yet it seems hardly possible that the Duke of Windsor's story will be, as Eurich and Wilson indicate by making it the finale of their book, "the biggest story of the year." This reviewer will bet on the Supreme Court decision which gave the TVA the right to sell its electricity.

THE WORLD WAS HIS COUNTRY, TO DO GOOD HIS RELIGION

TOM PAINE: FRIEND OF MANKIND. By Hesketh Pearson. (Harper & Bros., New York.)

THE importance of Tom Paine's contribution to the making of the American nation is a historical fact. Unhappily, however, short-sighted persons, most of them acting with the best of misguided intentions, have kept him from receiving the credit that is his due.

The book at hand, which is brightly written and intended for a representative audience, in the year of Paine's bicentennial, should aid in correcting this error in popular judgment.

Being popular, the "life" which Mr. Pearson gives us is not definitive. It does, nevertheless, begin at the beginning and end at the end. We start with Paine's birth to a Quaker stay-maker of Thetford, England, and his somewhat socially superior wife. Seventy-two years later, we bid the shunned and harassed old man farewell at New Rochelle as his French friend and housekeeper, Madame Bonneville, stands at one end of the grave, and her son at the other.

After an unfortunate experience in, and discharge from, the English excise, Paine landed in the American colonies to find "the country set on fire about my ears." The growing ferment was greatly to his liking and he could no more stay out of it than he could intentionally be unkind. January of 1776 saw the publication of "Common Sense," and in July was signed the Declaration of Independence which that historic pamphlet urged upon the colonists.

Next came service both as soldier and penman, after which Paine returned to England and published "The Rights of Man," in which he replied to detractors of the French Revolution. Prosecuted for "libels," he fled to France, where he served as a deputy of the National Convention and framer of the Constitution of 1793. There he wrote "The Age of Reason," his attack on superstition and blind formalism in religion which turned thousands of former admirers against him. In 1802, he returned to the new United States, with the mechanical contrivances that had always occupied him, more or less. Practically ostracised, his last years were full of troubles.

To read the story of his poverty and struggles in three countries, benefactor of all, citizen of none, is to realize how badly Tom Paine has fared. Mr. Pearson is critical of his subject's habits and mode of life, but it is plain that his sympathies are with the generous, indiscreet, brashly honest man who knew what it was to be both fawned over and spat upon.

One of the virtues of the book is the generous quoting from Paine's own writings. Many persons will here read his stirring words for the first time and through them feel the intellectual climate of those times that tried men's souls. But the book is more about the man than about his times. And who, when the wide field is canvassed, has had a finer resolution for living than this friend of mankind? "The world is my country, and my religion is to do good," he said calmly when the intolerants were pouring out their hatred upon him.

Mr. Pearson's book has its shortcomings, but these are made inconsequential by his human presentation of one of the great spirits of history.

PURITANS IN LIVING COLORS

PARADISE. By Esther Forbes. (Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.)

SURE knowledge, based on research, and instinct unfettered by the traditional black-and-white Puritan picture are responsible for this vivid, vigorous, sensuous and wholly credible novel of New England a century before the Revolution. The colors (and they were bright), the customs (including bundling as well as branding), the sounds (of both cursing and praying) are all woven into the sumptuous fabric. To read is not only to see and hear, but also to understand the relationship of white man and Indian and the dissolution of the English caste system before the exigencies of the frontier. Most of all, to read is to enjoy a deep-running, lustily dramatic story.

Jude Parre, gentleman, accompanied by yeomen, artisans and tradesmen, moves in 1635, for want of enough meadow in Boston, 20 miles west on the Catacoonamaug River near a settlement of friendly Indians. Here he builds a large, dark manor house and calls it Paradise, after his ancestral halls, a name which echoes and re-echoes magically throughout the story. Beneath its roof live Jude and his sons, Fenton, dark young Indian trader, and Christopher, rebellious scholar; his daughters, the elegant Agnes, the wild and lovely Jasan, and the fanatically pious Hagar. Servants there are in cheerful numbers who dine with them at the groaning supper boards, and among them is Gervase Blue who loves Jasan.

Love is indeed the serpent in Paradise. It strikes first at Fenton when he brings home Bathsheba as wife. For this beautiful harlot-at-heart seduces Christopher and furnishes a holiday for Boston when together they ascend the scaffold on the Commons to be branded with the letter A. It is Foresight Fearing, eminent young divine, who, believing it better to marry than to burn, weds Jasan and breaks her heart with his love which he cannot reconcile to his religion.

The background against, or rather within, which these roles are played blends the wanton English gaiety of Robert Herrick and the sinister New English seriousness of Cotton Mather. Blue-smocked bondsmen and plump Cornish kitchen maids sport about the hay-sweet meadows and mingle with the family in the great smoky hall of Paradise. The young ladies of the house wear lavish low-cut gowns and run barefoot through the fields. And yet all must suffer three-hour sermons in a meeting house, warmed only by threats of hell-fire, or perhaps repent of minor errors in the village stocks.

Miss Forbes' style, though less smooth than in her earlier novel, "O Genteel Lady," is well suited to description of this rougher era which, with her "focusing power of the imagination," she has seized upon accurately and completely. Her vocabulary is stored with homely words long forgotten, but still breathing strongly of that particular past.

Let those, then, who have wandered desolate since closing "Gone With the Wind" open the covers of "Paradise" and once more dwell for a space in other times and among other customs.

—Sophia Fox Kenamore.

FOR COMPLACENT CITIZENS

HERE'S TO CRIME. By Courtney Ryley Cooper. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

ONE often hears it said that "crime doesn't pay," and for the petty criminal, no doubt, this is true. But Courtney Ryley Cooper here proves conclusively that crime is very remunerative indeed to the criminal with the right political connections.

According to records, there are now 3,500,000 active criminals in the United States, ranging from the master minds of gangdom to the petty shoplifter. Cooper states that because of corrupt politics, these criminals are allowed to ply their trade. Chain-store methods are used by counterfeiters in the passing of "queer" money; organized gangs of bank robbers operate with immunity; vice syndicates are allowed to flourish in every metropolitan city; rackets, while momentarily stifled in a few instances, spring up anew before investigating grand juries have left the courtroom.

Cooper's picture is not a pretty one. Brushing aside all consideration of delicacy, he cites instance after instance of corruption. The list is a long one and the exposures are shockingly frank.

Regarding the solution of these problems, Cooper remains vague. He points out that more stringent laws are not enough, since, in many cases, the law-enforcing bodies are directly responsible for lawlessness. This same local condition would preclude the establishment of a Federal police organization, owing to the reluctance of local authorities to surrender their petty powers.

Honest and fearless grand juries can do much, he says, if they follow the job through with the greater task of seeing that courts make convictions, and go even a step further and insure the proper administration of prisons.

"Here's to Crime" deserves reading by thinking people. Parts of it have appeared serially in a popular magazine, but the complete story could not be told there, because of the brutally frank character of its revelations. Despite its sensationalism, the book is sincere, and Cooper acknowledges his debt to Attorney-General Homer S. Cummings and J. Edgar Hoover for their aid in preparing this picture of criminality in America.

LITTLE CHANGE IN BONDS AT WEEK END

Industrials and Utilities Close About Abreast Low of Week.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Quiet trading today failed to alter appreciably the price standing of most sections of the bond market. The levels at which domestic corporate loans traded all week were held or slipped slightly further. Rails, in particular, found the going rough and many settled to new low ground for the year. Industrial and utility issues closed about abreast their lows registered earlier in the week.

In the carrier section, New York, Ontario & Western liens lost ground sharply, the general 4s closing 12 lower at 26 and the refunding 4s off 2¾ at 32½. Today's breath followed heavy reversals Thursday and Friday after the road announced it would defer March 1 interest payment to conserve cash.

Although only minor changes were registered in the utility and industrial quarters, losses were the order of the day in the Government list. Setbacks ranged from 1-32d to 5-32ds of a point.

Little of interest occurred in the foreign sector. Scattered transactions brought more setbacks than gains, although the former were mostly fractional. Among the widest swings were gains of a point each by Chilean 7s and Cubans 5½s.

The Associated Press averages for 20 rails receded 1 on the day to a new 1937 low at 96.5 and the 10 foreign lost .3 of a point to 73.2. The other group were unchanged on the day. Turnover for all bonds totaled $6,770,000, face value, against $8,255,000 a week ago.

Of greatest importance in week's events was Secretary Morgenthau's announcement Thursday the Treasury would not essay any new financing in March. Much of the market's nervousness had been blamed on expectancy the Government would borrow about $300,000,000 next month. News the department's needs would be met through offerings of bills was greeted with increased activity in Federal bonds at higher prices. The following day, however, they gave ground a bit.

Confused Price Movements in Various Stock Groups and an Uneven Trading Pace Mark Week

Financial Circles Interpret Activities as Index Of the Community's Hazy Sentiment—Quiet Week-End Trade.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—The stock market slumped irregularly lower this week.

Uneven pace of trading and confused price movements in various groups was seen in financial circles as an index of the community's hazy setiment.

Bringing spasmodic pressure on shares were fears current outbreaks of labor-in some industries might retard recovery.

A speculative flavor was imparted by booming metal prices, led by wild buying in London early in the week partly attributed to Great Britain's mammoth armament program and arms building plans of other nations.

At times occasional unrest was in evidence owing to the opnion purchases of American securities from abroad might be cut off.

Selling Not Aggressive.

At no time, on the other hand, was selling of shares dangerously aggressive from domestic sources, while some brokers with foreign connections reported buyers abroad more numerous than sellers.

Brisk buying of steel shares attested to a rise in operations to a new recovery high. Rails got a boost at the close of the week from a more than seasonal expansion in freight loadings. Motors showed comparatively little enthusiasm over a rise in output to the best weekly total for any February since 1929. Utilities lacked resistance despite a modest gain in electric power output and a continued wide upturn over last year.

In the bond market, rails, utilities and foreign issues moved irregularly lower, while industrials were generally steady. United States Government obligations moved ahead Thursday when Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau indicated no new money would be asked on March 15, the next Government finance operation date.

The average price of commodities shot ahead to a new recovery peak, led by metals.

Sales during the week (five days) amounted to 9,959,230 shares, compared with 13,114,810 last week and 12,278,542 corresponding week last year. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 108,919,746 shares, compared with 128,086,137 last year and 34,734,953 two years ago.

Selective Week-End Trade.

Buyers hitch-hiked with the specialties in the week-end market.

While selected issues pushed up fractions to a point or so, the list as a whole milled about within a restricted area.

Most attention was centered on the merchandising group, but a few motor trucks, steels and electrical equipments received their share of support.

News of an especially stimulating nature appeared to be lacking and many traders were inclined to stand aside and await further developments in labor and legislative fields.

The generally apathetic attitude exhibited toward the market was reflected in the total two hours' turnover of 1,003,570 shares, which compared with 1,484,730 last Saturday. It was the smallest volume since Jan. 2.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks edged up .1 of a point at 72.2. Only 759 issues changed hands. Of these 318 advanced, 253 declined and 188 were unchanged.

Indications that pre-Easter shopping will set a record for the past several years stirred demand for retail shares. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York estimated department store sales in the metropolitan district in February recorded a substantial increase over the same 1936 month.

Some packing company stocks brushed up to new recovery tops in lively dealings on the belief meat prices are due for further boosts. Broadening profits were envisaged for those packers with large inventories.

Some of the Gainers.

One or two electrical equipments leaned forward as principal manufacturers in this line were reported to have bookings on hand and in prospect sufficient to keep operations at a high level well into the summer.

Bethlehem Steel wiped out its loss of Friday, holding a net gain of 1¾ points at 93. U. S. Steel was ¾ improved at 111¼. Bolstering this group was the belief mill activities will continue at a peak mark for some time to come and that the corporations and Government will compromise soon on bids for Navy materials.

Several rails kept step with the advance, but most were indifferent in view of the current controversy over wage demands. Utilities failed to attract much attention either way.

General Motors moved up 1 to 86¼ in the final few minutes, but Chrysler was off ⅛ at 125¾.

Copper prices in the unofficial London market were sharply lower, and leading red metal issues gave ground. Among these were Anaconda at 63¾ and Kennecott 62¾.

COMMODITY PRICES BEST SINCE EARLY '30

Opposite Courses Are Being Traced by the Two Main Staple Groups.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—With rampant metals holding the bit in their teeth, commodity prices swept to the highest level since early 1930 in the latest week.

Price movements again emphasized the opposite courses being traced by the two principal staple groups—products of the farm and industrial raw materials. The former have been drifting lower for the past fortnight; the latter, paced by metals, have jumped to new peaks for the recovery swing.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 important wholesale commodities inched ahead to 90.83 per cent of the 1926 average from 90.49 a week ago, and compared with 76.33 in the same period last year.

In the short span of two months the non-ferrous metal index has rocketed 20 per cent. Last week prices maintained the same trend; antimony, tin, lead and copper rising under heavy demand.

Some hesitation was noticed in the headlong boom, however, as commodity men pointed out substantially increased shipments could be expected from mines in a few months. Meantime the shortage in certain items acted to buoy quotations.

Climbing Steel Scrap.

Climbing steel scrap prices have resulted from the fast tempo of mill operations and limitations to the amount of pig iron companies can get for fabricating steel. A shortage of coke is partly responsible, as is a dearth of furnaces.

Other industrial staples—rubber, bituminous coal and lumber—concurred in the advance.

Farm products, on the other hand, yielded to the pressure of larger supplies and a hesitant demand. Agricultural staples led the decline; corn, wheat, oats and rye losing substantially. Cotton alone breasted the tide, responding to bullish reports regarding mill activity.

Foods fell back. Eggs weakened as supply continued large despite Government buying for relief distribution. Sugar, coffee and flour were also lower, while cocoa and lard managed to eke out small gains.

Livestock and textiles were mixed. Cattle and wool improved, lambs and silk slipped.

FEBRUARY STOCK AND BOND SALES ON THE EXCHANGE

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—February stock sales on the New York Stock Exchange were 50,250,970 shares, compared with 58,671,416 shares in January and 60,884,392 shares in February, 1936.

Bond sales were $285,427,000 face value in February, against $342,687,000 in the preceding month and $370,581,000 in the like month last year.

February Canadian Bond Issues.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Offerings of new Canadian bond issues in February amounted to $93,427,492, exclusive of $25,000,000 of Dominion of Canada Treasury bills. This compares with a January total of $150,950,000, including an issue of $85,000,000 Dominion of Canada bonds.

Chicago Stocks Quiet.

CHICAGO, Feb. 27. — Chicago stocks were comparatively quiet today, fluctuating in a narrow range. Scattered issues pointed upward with gains of fractions to a point or more.

FOREIGN MARKETS AT A GLANCE

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 27.—Wheat futures closed 1d to 1½d higher today in a narrow one-way market which moved up on firmness at Winnipeg and Buenos Aires yesterday. Demand for Argentine wheat continued good on the continent and in the United Kingdom.

Local buying and good trade calling in cotton futures absorbed March liquidation and some profit taking, and closing prices were 3 to 6 points higher. The market's firmness largely reflected action of overseas trading centers.

U. S. JUDGE CRITICISES C.P. NOELL SUSPENSION

Cites Failure of State Courts to Grant Hearing on Lawyer's Exceptions.

Adoption by a state court of a special commissioner's report in a disbarment proceeding without a hearing on the accused lawyer's exemptions to the report is such failure of "due process of law" as to prevent a Federal Court from giving full faith and credit to the State court's judgment, United States District Judge Davis held yesterday in an opinion dismissing a petition to disbar Charles P. Noell in Federal Court.

Noell was suspended from practice of law in State courts for two years last June 30 by St. Louis Court of Appeals, which adopted the report of its special commissioner and overruled Noell's exceptions to the report. The petition to disbar Noell in Federal Court, filed Jan. 8 by United States Attorney Harry C. Blanton, was based on the judgment of the Court of Appeals.

In entering its judgment, the St. Louis Court of Appeals approved the report of its Special Commissioner, B. H. Dyer of St. Charles, who heard the testimony and before whom Noell presented his defense to the charge of the St. Louis Bar Association that he had acted unethically in making large cash payments to employes of railroads for information used in obtaining damage claims.

Judge Davis' opinion, however, said that the Court of Appeals entered its judgment without a hearing on exceptions filed by Noell to the Commissioner's report. The proceedings before that court, the opinion said, constituted the trial of the cause.

Stating that judgments of State courts usually received full faith and credit in Federal courts, Judge Davis went on to cite an exception, quoting from an opinion of the United States Supreme Court that such credit should be accorded "unless from an intrinsic consideration of the State record it appears that the State procedure, from want of notice or opportunity to be heard, was wanting in due process."

Admission to practice in Federal court, Judge Davis continued, constitutes a valuable right of which an attorney might be deprived for cause "but not in reliance on an order entered without notice and opportunity to be heard."

The question of due process was raised by Noell's counsel, Patrick H. Cullen, in answer to District Attorney Blanton's petition. Oral arguments were heard last month.

Judge Davis' ruling does not affect Noell's suspension in State courts, as the order of the St. Louis Court of Appeals became final last November when the Missouri Supreme Court denied Noell's application for review.

Broadcasts Used to Lure Deserters From Rebels

behavior and kill their convoys. Obviously, at such a moment the convoys will not, nor are they obliged to, stand on ceremony with their prisoners. At Majadahonda we saw a group of young republican soldiers who were taking part in a battle for the first time. They participated in a counter-attack and took three insurgents. They were no less nervous than their prisoners.

Questioning Poorly Done.

The prisoners are questioned for the first time in the staff of the battalion or brigade. This is not yet done with great skill. The enemy soldier is questioned at length as to his birthplace, when he was mobilized, what the feeling is in Morocco or in Galicia; instead of finding out immediately where the machine guns stand, what the battle plans of the Fascist "bandiera" are, and where its staff is concealed. Lately the military reconnoitering service has done something to improve this work; they gave instructions on how prisoners are to be interrogated. As to military reconnoitering, this is a fairly weak spot in the work of the republican army.

Deserters come over mainly at night, in the dark. They come from the most diverse units. The decisive factor here is the lie of the land: the presence of a gap in a hedge, or a path along which one can pass unnoticed. Soldiers of different successive combinations came over to the republicans at one particular place. They came from other units as well, when they learned that there was a crossing place here. The latest deserters told us that at some points the Fascists had fenced themselves in with barbed wire, not as a means of defense, but with the purpose of preventing their soldiers going over to the side of the republicans. This was very consoling news, but it requires confirmation.

Getting Information.

There are splendid types of soldiers among the deserters. Most of them are workers and firm revolutionaries who deliberately joined the insurgent army with the sole aim of going over to the republican camp in this manner. Such, for example, were two men who came over yesterday. They made thorough preparations for their flight and did not come empty-handed. They brought a great deal of important military information, very precise and fresh; and in addition, took with them a nice new German machine gun complete with equipment, including the tripod, spare magazines and cartridges. They were well rewarded, of course, sent to their families, who were in the rear of the republican troops, and given a month's leave.

The prisoners give less information as a rule, but what they do give is also correct on the whole. It depends on their rank and title. Sergeants and officers give information on a wider scale, but with much greater reserve; though Maj. Belda Lopez, for example, was extremely willing to talk when he was interrogated. Correct information about the enemy is best of all obtained by comparing the evidence of a large number of prisoners and deserters from the other side, who have been questioned at approximately the same time but separately. What does this information tell us?

German Guns at Front.

The immediate intention of Franco is to carry out another attack on the Madrid front, this time on the right flank of the Fascists, in order to cut the connection between Madrid and Valencia, and thus definitely isolate the capital and starve it into surrender. Lieutenant-Colonel Asencio, one of Franco's closest assistants, has been appointed to take charge of this new operation. The officers and men highly approve of the direction to be taken by this new blow, since they consider that otherwise it will be quite impossible to capture Madrid; the sad experience of every previous attack has proved this.

The insurgents are giving their close attention at the present time to anti-tank and anti-aircraft defense. The whole Madrid front is equipped with the newest German tank defense artillery. The guns are placed at intervals of 200 or 300 yards. At the same time 50 new German gun-tanks for the new operation are awaited from day to day.

Military supplies to the army (cartridges and shells) are arriving quite regularly. Nevertheless, no energy is being spared in teaching the soldiers to be economical with their cartridges.

Discipline Rigid.

For the new attack Franco is raising a considerable force, though at times it costs him a great effort. In addition to the German and reformed Moroccan troops, men have been recruited in the districts seized by the Fascists. The quality of these new levies, from the point of view of Fascist morale, has sharply deteriorated. The great scarcity of soldiers forces the insurgents to enlist obviously unreliable people. Sometimes they even take republicans and Socialists straight out of prison. The prisoners are given the choice of execution in prison or service in the Fascist army. Not a few of the deserters from the Fascist side belong to this category of former prisoners.

The Fascists make up for this low state of morale and political reliability by increased severity and a regime of iron discipline at the front. The soldiers are forbidden on pain of the most severe penalties to hold any political conversations. Every section and every trench at the front is completely isolated.

Food and Supplies Bad.

The soldiers are fed irregularly and abominably. Disturbances and movements of protest started on several sections of the Madrid front, after which the food improved, but only for a few days. Clothing and boots are worn out in the insurgent army, but no new supplies are forthcoming. This can be seen in the clothing of the prisoners and deserters; they look like real ragamuffins, in torn summer clothing, canvas shoes, and without the blankets that are used here as greatcoats. Very often the republican soldiers make a collection among themselves of tobacco, cakes, oranges, socks and scarves for their prisoners. The Fascist leaders have given their soldiers permission to undress the peasants in the villages and take their clothes and boots.

Weariness, cold, hunger, bad food, the failure to take Madrid, and the general dragging-out of the war have given rise to fairly widespread demoralization among the insurgent soldiers, and an undoubted tendency among part of them to go over to the side of the republicans. The fight in the Fascist camp between the bourgeois Spanish Phalanx and the religious kulak fanatics of the Navarre villages, weakens the Fascist front still further. But on no account must one conclude from this that the fighting capacities of Franco's army have decreased.

Forced to Fight.

A soldier, who was a workingman and Socialist, who had been taken by the Fascists straight from prison to the front and had gone over to the republicans three weeks later, was asked:

"And did you shoot at the republicans?" He looked down. "Yes."

"Often?" "Often."

"And probably killed some?" "Possibly. I couldn't help shooting. The sergeant watched every step we made. Whichever way you turned, there was the sergeant with his revolver in his hand. There were not so many of these sergeants, and yet there seemed no end to them. And to tell you the truth, we were more afraid of them than of Franco himself."

This is perfectly true. These non-commissioned officers and old service men play an important role in the insurgent army. They cement it. They insure the fighting capacity of the petty subdivisions, from the company down. Whether of Spanish or foreign origin, the Fascist N. C. O. rogue, brute and skinflint domineers over his platoon like a jailor. He is hated, but feared and obeyed. He forces laggards into the fray with kicks, sticks and revolver shots.

When Troops Get Out of Hand.

But when a Fascist unit receives a shattering blow, when there can be no doubt of its definitely offensive character, when the N. C. O. loses, if only for one minute, his influence over his voiceless soldiers, they rush headlong, throw away their rifles, their guns, everything on earth, and nothing can stop them. So it was during the republican counter-attack at Las Rosas; so it was at Guadalajara; so it was during the storming of Los Angeles.

For the organization of a blow such as this, the popular army does not, and cannot possess N. C. O.'s of the old regime, masters in the art of punching and kicking. But there are the commanders and commissars, coming partly from the best, the most idealistic and honest officers of the old army, and partly from the best, the most progressive, and revolutionary elements of the Spanish people.

The whole army, from top to bottom, will soon believe in its ability to attack and defeat the enemy. This faith in itself will give the republican army the necessary preponderance and superiority over the army of Franco and Hitler. It will help the defenders of Madrid to leave their trenches and chase the Fascists far away—so far that they will never be seen again. This alteration in the military psychology of the well-armed Spanish people, who are defending themselves against foreign intervention, will be the beginning of a new stage in their struggle for freedom.

A. D. BROWN TRUSTEES FILE ACCOUNTING

Report Estate Shrunk $2,072,851 in Value—Except to Court Ruling.

In accordance with a decision by Circuit Judge Frank C. O'Malley, an accounting was filed yesterday by the St. Louis Union Trust Co. and Alanson C. Brown as co-trustees of the estate of the latter's father, Alanson D. Brown, shoe manufacturer.

The accounting is in connection with a recent finding by Judge O'Malley in which he surcharged the two trustees a total of $1,312,433 for their failure to dispose of 97,218 shares of Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. stock within the period prescribed by the elder Brown's will. Three of the elder Brown's daughters, Mrs. Jane B. Collins, Mrs. Vesta Tittmann and Mrs. Ruth Obear, had asked for the accounting.

The report shows that when the trustees took charge of the estate in 1914 its estimated value was $3,781,784. During the administration of the trust they collected income totaling $4,588,795. All of the income was distributed among the beneficiaries except $24,407, which was held, and trustees' fees and other expenses.

In addition to the income so held, the trustees have real estate belonging to the Brown heirs exceeding $1,000,000 in value, and personal property amounting to $139,000, consisting principally of stocks. The accounting discloses there was a net decrease of $2,072,851 in the value of the estate, due principally to a depreciation of the shoe company stock and other securities.

Judge O'Malley found that the trustees were guilty of a breach of trust on the ground they had not complied with directions contained in the will providing for the sale of stock. The stock should have been sold, he found, not later than June 3, 1928, which was 15 years after the death of A. D. Brown. The decision requires payment of interest at 4½ per cent on the amount surcharged. The trustees filed exceptions to the court's ruling, contending that the finding was in error. The three complainants also have filed exceptions, asserting the judgment was inadequate.

In their report the trustees ask for authority to pay counsel fees to James T. Blair, Richard C. Hart and the law firms of Bryan, Williams, Cave & McPheeters and Nagel, Kirby, Orrick & Shepley. They represented the trustees in the litigation.

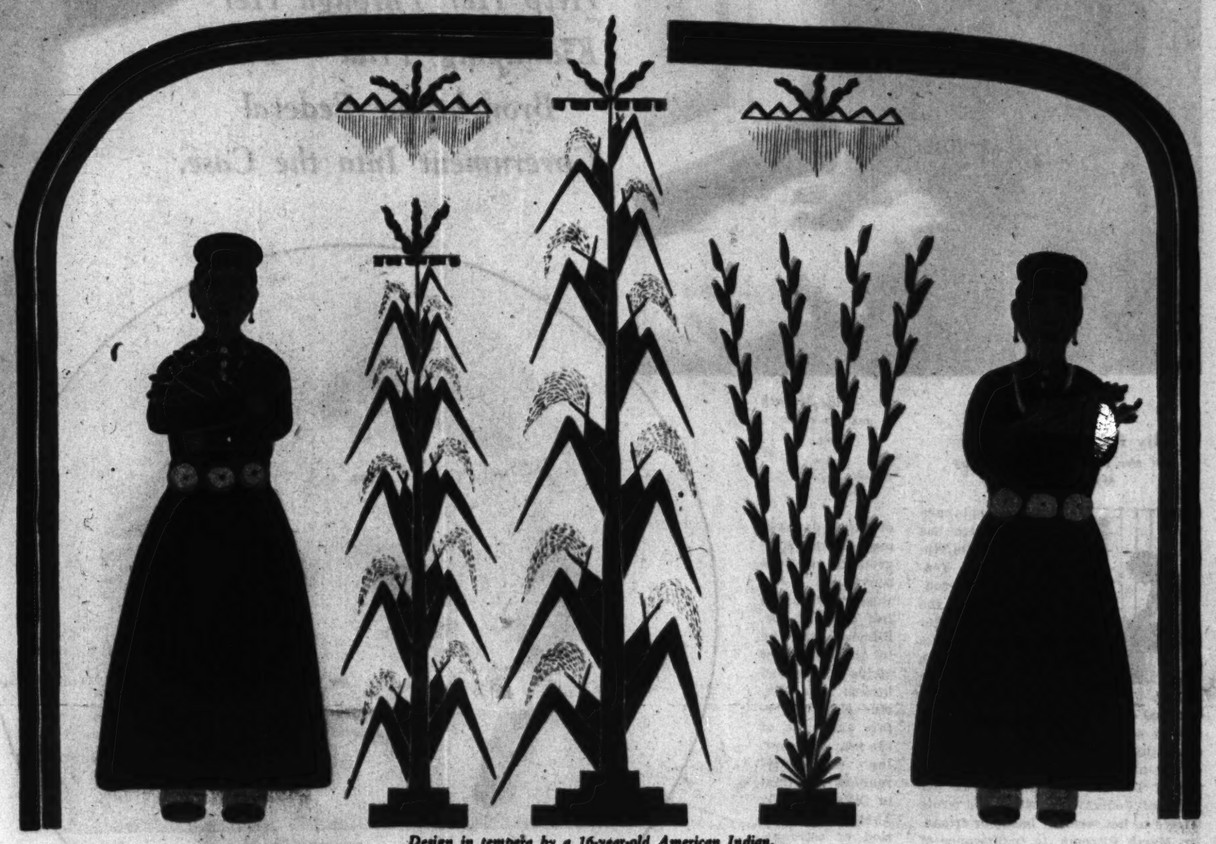
CHILDREN'S ART FROM ALL OVER the WORLD

Drawings and Paintings Which Show the 'Self-Directed Responsibility of the Individual.'

Portrait in charcoal from an Italian school.



Design in tempera by a 16-year-old American Indian.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

WHEN confronted with certain types of modern painting, the average onlooker has been quick to observe disparagingly, "Any child could paint that!" And now attention is here called very strongly to the way some children do paint. The international exhibition of children's art held during the past week (through today) at Hotel Jefferson serves this purpose. Collected originally for a world congress of educators at Cheltenham, England, last summer, it is being shown here as a feature of the conference of the Progressive Education Association.

The show, examples from which are reproduced on this page, gives the observer telling insight into the various teaching methods that produced it. Of more general interest is the way these methods characterize the political and cultural ideals they derive from. "It is interesting to note," writes the executive secretary of the P. E. A., Frederick Redefer, "that the art from Mexico, the United States, Canada and Soviet Russia, has more in common than that which comes from Poland, Bulgaria, Italy and Panama . . . It is particularly interesting to note the comparison between the art products of Japan and China." Even more suggestive, from the point of view of one primarily interested in the capacity of art to excite and stimulate, is the promising quality of some of these paintings. Some aim at self-expression, others at decoration, still others at skill.

Even in the last, there is frequently a freshness and a freedom from self-consciousness which promises well for the future of painting. The accompanying illustrations give only a fractional notion of the collection as a whole, for it is far too varied to be characterized with a handful of examples. One notices the strong patriotic feeling conveyed by the scroll from Shanghai and is captivated by the elements of Chinese classical style which are retained by the strong, original young student who painted it. One recognizes neat craftsmanship and disciplined skill in the highly finished portrait from Italy, a piece that inherits a good deal from its stylistic ancestors. The contribution of an American Indian student is somewhat unexpected in effect. Persia would seem to have had more to do with its origin than the United States. Yet the nice sense of balance and design it achieves are clearly related to the ornamental genius of the race it represents.

But the sponsors of the show say that it must be studied in its entirety for a balanced impression. A helpful cue to its spirit is the statement from P. E. A. headquarters that the art committee which selected these paintings from schools in some 20 countries "sought material which would bear the impress of genuine self-directed responsibility of the individual. The committee sought an art exhibit that showed the child's freedom in choice of subject and at the same time indicated his awareness of the world in which he lived."

The thing that stands out in relation to the whole show is that it proves the superiority of teaching methods which allow the child to discover for himself that system of draftsmanship, color arrangement and composition best suited for the expression of his own attitude toward the environment in which he lives.

How NELLIE MUENCH was CAUGHT in HER OWN TRAP

It Was the Gratuitous Baby Hoax—So Cagily Designed to Help Her Through Her Kidnaping Trial—That Brought the Federal Government Into the Case.

Nellie Muench (nee Tipton), as a baby.

By KEITH KERMAN
Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

IT WAS an ironic turn of events which has made Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench a Federal prisoner, convicted of using the mails to defraud. Her imprisonment results from a trick which she devised primarily to help her "beat the rap" in another criminal case. The pretense of having a baby so that she might win public sympathy when she went on trial on a charge of participating in the kidnaping of Dr. Isaac D. Kelley ran her afoul of Federal law when she wrote letters to her wealthy bachelor friend, Dr. Marsh Pitzman, in furtherance of her efforts to make him believe he was the father of the child and to obtain financial aid from him.

And, as it turned out, Mrs. Muench did not get to use the baby at the kidnaping trial as she had planned. By the time she came to trial the Post-Dispatch had exposed the purported birth as a hoax, and the disconcerted defendant elected to appear in court without the company of the infant. Her acquittal made it evident that the spectacle of her tenderly holding a baby in her arms was not needed on that occasion.

Furthermore, the trickery has brought on her a severer penalty than the prosecution expected if she had been convicted in the kidnaping case. Knowing that juries are disposed to be lenient toward women, Prosecuting Attorney C. Arthur Anderson of St. Louis County (now Congressman) would have been satisfied with any penitentiary sentence from two years up in the State case, whereas the sentence imposed for the mail fraud was 10 years and a $5000 fine.

The foundation for Mrs. Muench's ill-fated imposture was laid in the spring of 1934. In March she was indicted for the Kelley kidnaping, and immediately afterward started an affair with Dr. Pitzman, who, by the end of the year, had furnished at least $10,500 to be used in her defense.

In October, 1934, Angelo Rosegrant was convicted at Clayton in the first of the Kelley kidnaping trials and was sentenced to 20 years in prison. In January, 1935, Felix McDonald, the second of those accused to be tried, was convicted, and he got 60 years. Mrs. Muench was next on the list. Her trial was set for February.

But Mrs. Muench managed to postpone her day in court by hiring Edgar J. Keating of Kansas City as one of her attorneys. She already had nine, but Keating had the special qualification of being a member of the State Legislature, which was then in session. It has become the practice in Missouri, following an appeals court decision, to grant a continuance until after adjournment of the Legislature to any legislator who has a case docketed during the law-makers' session. That legislative session was a long one; it was not until June that her case was called.

In the meantime there had been eventful developments in the background. After the conviction of Rosegrant, in the fall of 1934, Dr. Pitzman, yielding to the entreaties of his family, had broken with Mrs. Muench. Just before the close of the year, however, there was a brief reunion — a tryst in O'Fallon Park. Then another period of estrangement, which ended in April, 1935, by Mrs. Muench's sensational announcement to Dr. Pitzman that she was going to have a baby and that he would be its father—thanks to that O'Fallon Park episode. Mrs. Muench, unhappily mindful of what had happened to two of the men indicted with her and grimly seeking a way to aid her own cause with a jury and to obtain more defense funds, had conceived her desperate, fantastic hoax.

Dr. Pitzman believed her. Principally a research worker, who had practiced little as a physician, and a man of quite limited "worldly" experience, Dr. Pitzman accepted the word of the woman, past 40, who had been married 20 years, that she was going to have her first child. And his check book again was opened in her behalf. He gave her thousands of dollars more.

WHEN Mrs. Muench's case was called at Clayton in June, 1935, she was still not ready to face a jury; "her" baby would not arrive until August. Anyway, she didn't want to face a St. Louis County jury. A St. Louis County jury had given Rosegrant a severe jolt, and another had practically "thrown the book" at McDonald.

So her attorneys argued that Mrs. Muench could not get a fair trial at Clayton and got a change of venue to Mexico, Missouri, where the trial was set for September 30.

The baby, a boy, arrived at the Meunch home in Westminster place the night of August 17. Mrs. Muench spoke of it soulfully as "a gift from God." Her husband, Dr. Ludwig O. Muench, signed a birth certificate attesting that the child had been born to his wife. Dr. Pitzman saw the infant and accepted it as his own.

As a matter of fact, the baby was the new-born child of Miss Anna Ware, an unmarried servant girl who had come here from near Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, for her confinement. It was obtained for Mrs. Muench by Lawyer Wilfred Jones.

Less credulous than Dr. Pitzman, the Post-Dispatch, because of the public significance of this new development in the career of Mrs. Muench, promptly began an investigation of the purported birth, and the St. Louis County grand jury was soon seeking to learn what had become of Anna Ware's baby. This newspaper learned that in July the baby of another unmarried mother — spoken of as "the Price baby"—had been taken by Jones to the Muench home and then to the Jewish Hospital, where it died. It was for the same "clients," Jones had said, that he obtained the Price baby and Anna Ware's baby.

To meet skepticism as to her motherhood, Mrs. Muench handed out statements signed by Dr. Pitzman and Dr. Maurice Thompson of Kirkwood, supporting her claim to have borne a child. After publication of these statements the two doctors admitted they had signed them through friendship for Mrs. Muench and had not actually obtained medical proof of the birth. Dr. Pitzman realized now he had been deceived and definitely abdicated as Mrs. Muench's behind-the-scenes champion.

Health Commissioner Joseph F. Bredeck called on Dr. Muench to substantiate the birth certificate, and Dr. Muench naturally failed to do it.

Anna Ware, convinced that the baby in the Muench home was hers, brought a habeas corpus action in the St. Louis Court of Appeals to regain possession of it. Although, in opposition to her suit, counsel for the Muenches denied that the baby was Miss Ware's, it was stated in a defense motion: "There is no pleading before this Court wherein Nellie Tipton Muench claims to be the mother of any child."

This was the situation—the habeas corpus hearing pending, the baby still in the custody of Mrs. Muench, but her maternity exposed as phony—when she went on trial at Mexico on the kidnaping charge.

That was a remarkable trial. It was held in a setting where the defendant was favored by political conditions and by her respectable family connections.

In this region her family had lived years ago; her father, a Baptist clergyman, was still remembered and her brother, Judge Ernest M. Tipton of the State Supreme Court, was well known. At Bowling Green, in the next county, Mrs. Muench had spent most of her girlhood, and in Columbia, in another adjoining county, she and Dr. Muench had been married when she was attending Stephens College and he was a student in the University of Missouri. Persons said to be relatives and old friends demonstratively greeted her in the courtroom. There was a sort of homecoming atmosphere about the trial of the woman accused of having "put the finger on" Dr. Kelley for his gangster kidnapers.

Thirteen lawyers, including seven practicing in Mexico, served the defense without pay because of their regard for Judge Tipton. Sheriff E. S. Hayeraft selected from his personal acquaintances the panel from which the jury was drawn.

The baby accompanied Mrs. Muench to Mexico, but it was not taken into the courtroom. Nor did the defense mention it in the trial. The prosecution tried to get the hoax into the record when cross-examining Mrs. Muench, but the witness was too wary. Associate Prosecuting Attorney John J. Wolfe asked her: "Does anyone else reside in your home besides yourself, Dr. Muench, Mr. Auer (Carl Auer, a lame musician) and the domestics?"

"No," replied Mrs. Muench.

"That constitutes your family?"

"My family."

"You are quite sure about that?" Wolfe persisted.

Defense objections halted the questioning on this point.

The defense persistently sought to place Mrs. Muench in the role of a home town girl persecuted by the metropolitan press—sought, in fact, to give the case as a whole the aspect of a contest between bucolic simplicity, represented by the defense, and slick city ways, represented by the prosecution. But it did not offer evidence as to the character and reputation of the defendant, thus preventing this issue from being raised. The State, accordingly, was unable to introduce a mass of evidence it had prepared—testimony of policemen, hotel detectives and others concerning various picaresque episodes in Mrs. Muench's St. Louis career.

The volatile defendant was exuberant when the verdict of acquittal was announced. She kissed Sheriff Haycraft and called him "a dear." Later she told the Sheriff: "Well, you told me the truth!" And the Sheriff grinned, "Didn't I, though?" Dr. Muench told reporters: "She's the finest woman in the world."

Not long did the Muenches have to enjoy their Mexico victory. Soon after their return to St. Louis they were unpleasantly engaged with the habeas corpus hearing. Both refused to testify in that case on the ground that to do so might incriminate them. The Court of Appeals found that the baby Mrs. Muench was keeping in her elaborately furnished nursery was the son of Anna Ware and restored the child to its real mother.

Legal complications continued. Lawyer Jones and Helen Berroyer, who had aided the Muenches in the baby deception, were indicted on charges of perjury because of their testimony in the habeas corpus case. Jones, Mrs. Berroyer and the Muenches were charged with conspiracy to take custody of an infant without authority of the Juvenile Court, a misdemeanor. The conspiracy case was taken on a change of venue to Kahoka. A mistrial was declared because one of the jurors said an attempt had been made to bribe him, the case was reset, and last August all four defendants were found guilty and fined. In her testimony in this case Mrs. Muench committed herself as to the baby; she said the child taken from her and given to Anna Ware was hers.

Before this court reverse, the Muenches and their accomplices in the baby hoax had suffered another blow; they were indicted by a Federal grand jury on the charge of using the mails to defraud Dr. Pitzman. Last November they went on trial. Dr. Pitzman told of his affair with the red-haired, brown-eyed, plumpish Mrs. Muench and told of giving her money totaling more than $13,000; Jones and Mrs. Berroyer denied having procured the Ware baby for Mrs. Muench; Dr. and Mrs. Muench did not testify.

The prosecution, conducted by District Attorney Harry C. Blanton, sought to show, among other things, that after the Ware infant had been taken from the Muenches, an effort was made on their behalf to get another child from Chicago to be represented as being the real son of Anna Ware; if Mrs. Muench could have regained possession of the baby taken from her by the Court of Appeals that would have strengthened the defense of Jones and Mrs. Berroyer against the charge of perjury and Dr. Muench's defense against the accusation of signing a false birth certificate and it might have given hope that Dr. Pitzman's faith in the birth of a baby to Mrs. Muench would be renewed.

THE trial dragged on for 21 days, but it took the jury less than five hours to find all four of the defendants guilty.

Before sentence was pronounced Mrs. Muench contributed one of the most sensational incidents of a notably sensational case by making a confession to John T. Rogers, a reporter for the Post-Dispatch, and authorizing its publication. She admitted at last that she had never had a baby. She said the hoax was merely a desperate expedient to hold Dr. Pitzman's love. She declared she had "bedeviled" her husband into signing the false birth certificate, and that Dr. Muench had not known of her relations with Dr. Pitzman until she confessed her infidelity to him after the Federal Court conviction. The ostensible purpose of her public statement was to exonerate her husband.

After this the imposition of sentences by Judge George H. Moore—10 years and a $5000 fine for Mrs. Muench, 10 years for Jones, eight years and a $5000 fine for Dr. Muench and five years for Mrs. Berroyer—was almost an anti-climax.

Making PETS of the WORLD'S MOST POISONOUS SNAKES

Grace O. Wiley is director of the Museum of Natural History of the Minneapolis Public Library. She attended Kansas University and the University of Minnesota. For some 15 years she has been a student of herpetology and for almost as long has been taming snakes, making pets of them. She now has 31 of these pets, of which six are venomous. She has been bitten, but points out that accidents happen in all fields of activity. "I am not," she takes occasion to remark, "a snake charmer."

By GRACE O. WILEY

I HAVE tamed more than 200 specimens of 32 different species of the world's deadliest snakes. When tame I have found them to be both gentle and likeable. They all learned to know me as a friend and to trust me. Even the king cobra, said by leading authorities to be the world's most dangerous serpent, has made an exceptionally gentle pet.

My first experience with poisonous snakes started when I began as a field collector for the museum of a Mid-Western university. I was then an entomologist and took this up as a sort of side line, because that particular institution needed this material. I became tremendously interested in reptiles as a result. Later when I became head of the Museum of Natural History, Minneapolis Public Libary, we decided that people needed to know something about snakes, so they would not be so frightened of them.

Several large diamond-back rattlesnakes were obtained from Texas. These were as wild as animals could possibly be. They became my first rattlesnake pets. It was from a pair of these snakes that my first litter of captive-bred rattlers was born—the first in the world. Since then, three other captive-bred litters have been born, one being the second generation—the young of captive-bred parents. All this was made possible only by kindness and patience. The snakes were treated with gentleness and were never teased or frightened.

My technique in taming poisonous snakes is very simple. I use a stick about three feet long with a pad of soft cloth at one end. This is used to gently stroke or pat the snake on its body and head. It is the same as patting an animal with one's hand, and strange as it may seem, a snake soon begins to enjoy this attention. Many of them will hump or arch their backs like a cat when stroked. Just as soon as these animals understand that one has no intention of hurting them, it is safe to actually use one's hand. I am careful not to make any sudden movements, since such actions will frighten almost anything. Giving them good care by feeding and keeping them clean no doubt hastens the taming. My charges, though kept in cages, are not jailbirds, they are friends—wild folk that have come to stay awhile that we may learn something worth while about them. They have every right to humane treatment and kindly consideration.

It is surprising to not how quickly snakes understand a friendly, sympathetic attitude, and soon become docile and gentle. It is unbelievable the things they will then patiently submit to. When ill, they are never irritable, even when the treatment for their ailments is unpleasant.

Many of the rattlesnakes I have tamed were very easily won. Some of them were so placid that within a few days I could safely pet them with my hand or lift them up carefully, and place them in a clean corner, while cleaning the cage.

Big Ben, a six-foot diamond-back rattlesnake, was exceptional, and was the most difficult of all the poisonous snakes I have tamed. When anyone stopped at his cage, he immediately assumed a defensive attitude, rattling loudly and holding himself in readiness to strike. This of course is not unusual for one of his species when first brought into captivity, since the Western diamond-back is by far the most nervous and excitable snake of all the rattlesnakes. They usually settled down in a short time, became accustomed to their new quarters and rattled only on occasions when actually disturbed.

Ben could not be won by the usual tactics employed with other rattlesnakes. He meant business the moment the door of his cage was opened, quickly throwing his body into a striking coil. Because of his large size, he was exceedingly dangerous, since he could strike far enough to reach a person standing at the cage door. Rattlesnakes strike with lightning-like speed, so it was necessary to keep out of his range.

Like many of his kind, Ben refused food of any kind and it soon became evident that I would have to forcibly feed my big pet to keep him from starving. I of course had had experience with this sort of thing. These little beasties often had to be coaxed into eating voluntarily by repeated force feedings, which sometimes extended over a period of several months. However, these were snakes that had calmed down and made no attempt to strike.

Big Ben was such a beautiful big fellow that I could not bear to let him go hungry. It was believed that the feeding might be the means of taming him once he realized what we were about. With the help of an assistant, two long stout sticks and a wooden shield, I succeeded in getting him by the neck and quickly forced a piece of raw meat far into his mouth. I stepped hurriedly back to safety the moment I let go of him. We hardly dared to breathe and did not move for fear he would not swallow the food. After several moments that seemed like hours to us, standing so tense and motionless, Big Ben began slowly swallowing the beef.

Noiselessly, deliberately, so that his attention was not attracted, we faded out of his sight. This was actually an experience so nerve-racking that it left me weak and trembling. The following week I again fed the snake, using the same method as before. Naturally, I believed that with repeated feedings, he, like all others I had known, would soon become less frightened and eventually become a nice, gentle pet. But it was not so; he remained wild and unapproachable. I feared to press my friendship.

SEVERAL months passed, a year went by and still this remarkable snake did not change his attitude. At the end of 18 months of captivity Big Ben was still a wild and dangerous snake. Every feeding was just as exciting as the first, but I had, on several occasions, not hurried to let go of his neck, supporting it for a moment with my hand while he swallowed, then had slowly taken it away. I almost despaired of taming him. Visitors felt sure that he was untameable. This I could not believe and finally decided to find out at once.

I realized that I would have to take some chances, but I relied on his intelligence and my caution, and determined not to take too great a risk at any time. Critically I watched his attitude, every expression was carefully noted, and the flicks of the tongue I had grown to know so well were observed with the keenest scrutiny. Several times a day I went to his cage and proceeded to do the things I had done when he was fed. Only I did not feed him or open his mouth. To my great surprise and delight he began to respond—the old rascal had a real "poker face" and I had been slow to read him. It was a happy time when I really knew I was making progress. One of the biggest moments of my life was when I picked him up and held him for the first time. He soon became perfectly tame, permitted me to tie a ribbon around his neck, bathe him, show his fangs to visitors many times a day and would pose for his picture in almost any position I wished. However, he remained very shy and was always afraid of everyone but myself.

Perky, a pet cottonmouth water moccasin, the only poisonous water snake in the United States, was a gentle creature. We made much of him, because he was our only specimen of his kind at that time. He surely enjoyed the attention we bestowed upon him.

He would carefully take minnows from my fingers, never grabbing at them nor showing any haste while being fed. We posed and photographed him with many of our other pets and he never offered to harm them. A young wild rabbit brought in by a visitor was later placed beside him. I petted them both when they were first introduced and the bunny even put both front feet on the moccasin, without causing the least concern on the snake's part. Then we took motion pictures of this snake with a little crippled nighthawk sitting on his back and two collared lizards scampering over him during the interval. The bird and the lizards were not afraid of the snake. They frequently enjoyed the warm helpful rays from a sun lamp together.

Some of the astounding things these poisonous pets good naturedly submit to: They do not resent anything I do, although sometimes it takes a little time and patience to make them understand just what I wish for the first time. I handle them so gently and carefully that they have no reason to be afraid or any desire to get away. For example, all of them permit me to give them a nice warm bath and wash them with a soft cloth, then bundle them up in a big soft towel to rest. They seem to enjoy this attention and will lie for an hour or two contentedly resting just where I place them, with only the tip of the nose sticking out. These wonderful creatures are as docile and gentle as any domestic cat.

It took a little over a week to tame Nosey, my seven-foot green mamba. She became gentle and lovely and would lie in my lap for long intervals, as I read or rested in the evening. Occasionally she would crawl around and explore above my head, then back again to rest in my lap. She was not afraid of anyone else and was undisturbed by a strange animal or when placed in strange surrooundings. My presence seemed to satisfy her.

MY ACQUAINTANCE with two large Gaboon vipers stands out as an extraordinary experience. This is one of the most unusual serpents in the world. Its enormous head, stout body, and gorgeous coloration make one gasp in admiration and wonder. The fangs are enormous and the venom of a particularly virulent type.

These beautiful snakes were emaciated and badly in need of food when they arrived. Something had to be done at once. They refused to eat voluntarily and their plight was tragic. I could not let them die of starvation. There was practically no danger in force feeding them, by my method. I was not afraid in the least to attempt this duty, though they were the first Gaboons I had met. I was careful and my trained eye very quickly told me that they trusted me a little, after I petted them awhile with the padded stick. It required a little less than half an hour to get acquainted in my usual way and to give them nourishment. They were so hungry and seemed so satisfied that I felt well repaid for having thus ministered to their needs. They remembered this first incident and I never had any trouble feeding either of these snakes. I cannot find words to explain how understanding and remarkable poisonous snakes really are. One would actually have to witness these unbelievable things.

The king cobra is the largest poisonous snake in the world, attaining a length of 16 feet with at least one authentic record of 18 feet. My two pets were 13 and 14 feet long and weighed about that many pounds. When these magnificent snakes arrived they were wild and ferocious and extreme care had to be taken. They would rear to a height of three and one-half feet to four feet, spreading the body through this length, in characteristic cobra operation. Their eyes were wild and glaring, they hissed, snorted, blew and charged toward the offending object. It was so sudden and startling when this happened that one could not help dodging when on the safe side of the glass front of the cage. They were awe-inspiring and terrific in their splendor.

NOT for long did they act thus. I had much sympathy and understanding for captive wild things and behind me were several years of experience with venomous snakes. I set about winning their friendship, hoping to make them contented in their new home. In just a few days they recognized me and no longer used threatening tactics. Most cautiously their door was opened those first few days after their arrival, just a wee bit at first, then more until there was space enough to do the necessary things they required.

Two three-foot sticks were used, one the regular petting stick, the other stick with a smooth, stout wire fastened at one end and bent in a U shape. This was held in the left hand to be used as a shield to stop the on-

As the NAVAL RACE GATHERS MOMENTUM

Jane's Fighting Ships Shows How the Nations Are Rapidly Getting Back to War Strength—and With All Modern Improvements.

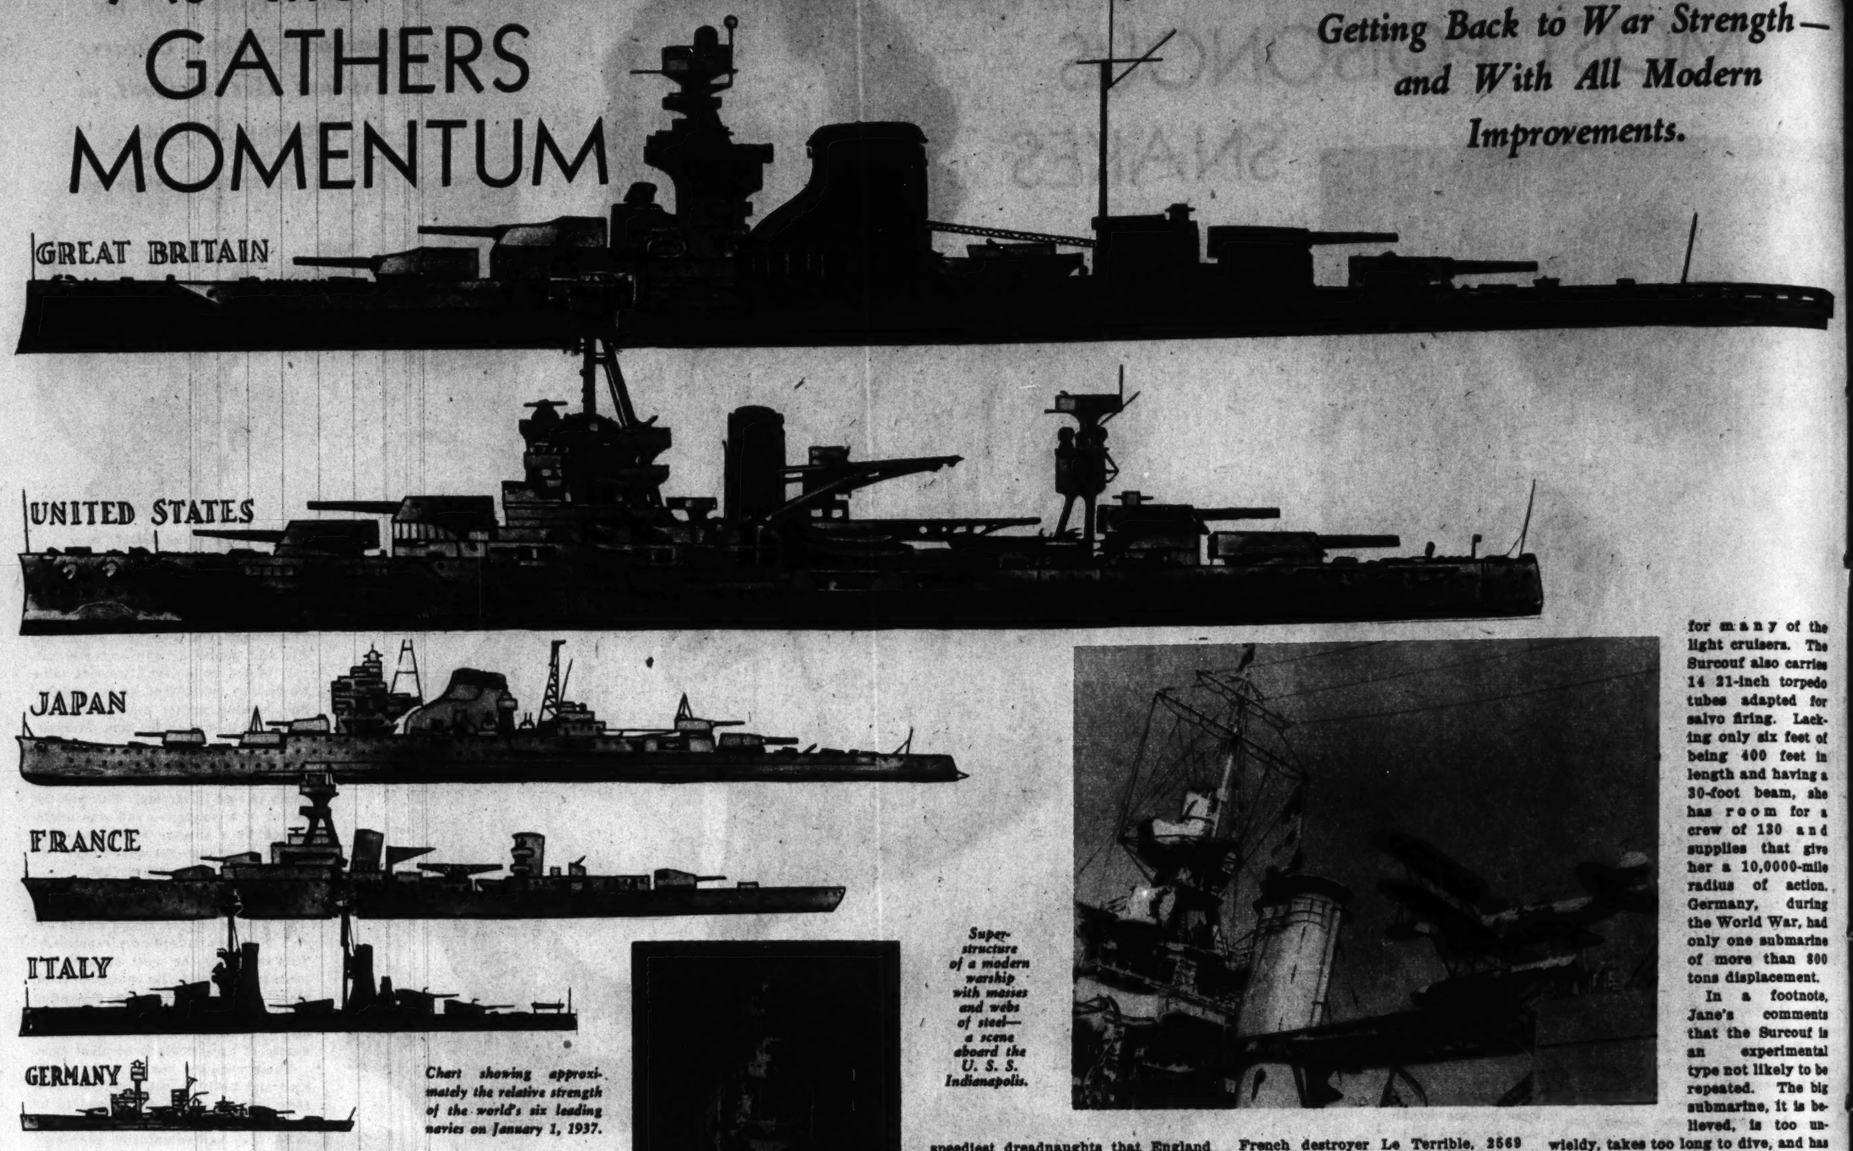

Chart showing approximately the relative strength of the world's six leading navies on January 1, 1937.

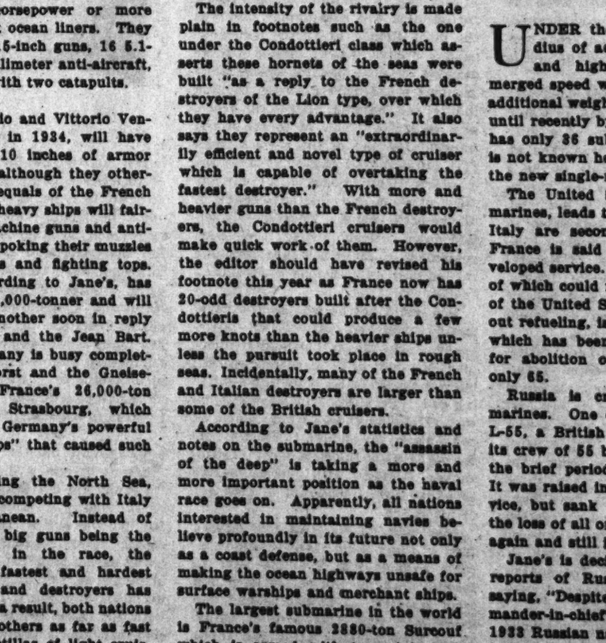

Superstructure of a modern warship with masses and webs of steel—a scene aboard the U. S. S. Indianapolis.

Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

RIVETING guns rattle, welding torches sputter, and great gantries creak overhead as the shipyards of the six naval Powers handle the greatest rush of business since World War days.

The limiting treaties that had their beginning in 1922 at the Washington conference and stopped a reckless competition in shipbuilding are dead. There is only the London pact of last year which promised little and which was riddled with escape clauses.

A glance at the newest edition of Jane's Fighting Ships, authoritative yearbook of the world navies which has been published in London since 1897, shows that the high tide in naval construction has set in strongly. The 400-odd warships of 51 countries are described and illustrated on the 568 pages of the annual and there is scarcely a section wherein the data compiled does not indicate that the fleets of the world are at general quarters. The United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany and Japan are all either building or preparing to build 35,000-ton battleships that will be far more speedy and powerful than any now afloat. Even little Iraq, in the annual for the first time, is credited with building four 100-foot patrol vessels "protected by bulletproof plating."

"Capital ships, the building of which has been a rarity in recent years, are now being ordered freely by the principal Powers," the editor says in his foreword. "There is little doubt that in 1940 the number of new capital ships placed in commission will be greater than at any time since 1916. Everyone of these ships is believed to be designed for a speed of 30 knots or more, evidence of the extent to which the battleship and the battle cruiser have coalesced."

In brief, this unofficial but remarkably reliable annual draws an astounding picture of the way in which naval competition has gone on within the limits set by treaties; asserts that the battleship, the mightiest engine of war ever devised by man, is in its renaissance, recognized as the only warship that can deal heavy blows and also take them; shows that the submarine nearly rivals the battleship in prominence, and that admirals are giving more and more recognition to the part that planes will play in the next war.

On the basis of ships in commission, building or appropriated for, the fleets of the leading Powers compare as follows:

Power.	Ships.	Tonnage.
Great Britain	391	1,721,000
United States	405	1,429,740
Japan	238	883,172
France	219	793,056
Italy	237	521,045
Germany	97	323,750

THE United States, which surrendered naval supremacy in the 1922 disarmament conference, has the second biggest building program. It calls for 95 ships totaling 288,215 tons, exclusive of two projected battleships. Practically all the ships have been started and many are near completion.

Great Britain is first with 88 ships building or appropriated for and totaling 608,000 tons. Like the United States, England had not built up to treaty limits. But just last week, it was announced England would add three more capital ships to the two already begun.

The annual has little specific information on the Japanese plans, merely saying that "four new battleships are projected, two of which are expected to be begun in 1937. It is believed they will be ships of 35,000 tons."

An unusual view of the U. S. S. Maryland, one of the three biggest capital ships of the United States Navy. Appropriations have been made for two ships, which will be larger and more powerful.

The data about the two British capital ships with keels already laid, is more definite. The ships, named King George V and Prince of Wales, will have a main armament of 14-inch guns and a displacement of 35,000 tons. The statement that their design "will include enhanced defense with arrangements to meet air attack, such as an improved distribution of deck and side armor, and an extension of the anti-aircraft armament," recalls the warning last July of Sir Samuel Hoare, First Lord of the Admiralty, that England must have a new fleet capable of resisting the "new and formidable threat of air power."

With a speed of 30 knots, the ships will be five knots faster than the speediest dreadnaughts that England now has.

Still more definite and interesting is the information about France's latest battleships, the Richelieu, already laid down, and the Jean Bart, which soon is to be. As far as now is known, these vessels will be the most heavily armored in the world. Jane's records them as being designed for a speed of 33 knots despite the amazing fact that 15,000 tons of their 35,000-ton displacement will be armor plate. The belt, as the section covering engines, powder magazines and other vitals is called, will be from nine to 16 inches thick and there will be eight inches of armored deck. Their engines will develop 160,000 horsepower or more than that of most ocean liners. They will carry eight 15-inch guns, 16 5.1-inch, eight 37-millimeter anti-aircraft, and four planes with two catapults.

ITALY'S Littorio and Vittorio Veneto laid down in 1934, will have only nine or 10 inches of armor over their vitals although they otherwise will be the equals of the French ships. All these heavy ships will fairly bristle with machine guns and anti-aircraft batteries poking their muzzles from upper decks and fighting tops.

Germany, according to Jane's, has laid down one 35,000-tonner and will lay the keel of another soon in reply to the Richelieu and the Jean Bart. At present, Germany is busy completing the Scharnhorst and the Gneisenau, rivals of France's 26,000-ton Dunkerque and Strasbourg, which were answers to Germany's powerful "pocket battleships" that caused such a stir in 1931.

Besides watching the North Sea, France has been competing with Italy in the Mediterranean. Instead of armor plate and big guns being the principal factors in the race, the building of the fastest and hardest hitting cruisers and destroyers has been the goal. As a result, both nations are ahead of all others as far as fast squadrons and flotillas of light cruisers and destroyers are concerned. The French destroyer Le Terrible, 2569 tons, commissioned last year, is credited with being the fastest warship afloat—except for torpedo-carrying sea sleds. It has made 45.25 knots, which is a little better than 51 miles an hour. Before that, the rakish 1628-ton Italian destroyers of the Navigatori class, which are equipped for mine laying, held the record with a speed of 44 to 45 knots.

Mussolini's navy, however, possesses the fastest cruisers. The four in the Condottieri class have such thin plating and so powerful engines that they can do 40 knots despite their 5069 tons displacement. They carry eight six-inch guns.

The intensity of the rivalry is made plain in footnotes such as the one under the Condottieri class which asserts these hornets of the seas were built "as a reply to the French destroyers of the Lion type, over which they have every advantage." It also says they represent an "extraordinarily efficient and novel type of cruiser which is capable of overtaking the fastest destroyer." With more and heavier guns than the French destroyers, the Condottieri cruisers would make quick work of them. However, the editor should have revised his footnote this year as France now has 20-odd destroyers built after the Condottieris that could produce a few more knots than the heavier ships unless the pursuit took place in rough seas. Incidentally, many of the French and Italian destroyers are larger than some of the British cruisers.

According to Jane's statistics and notes on the submarine, the "assassin of the deep" is taking a more and more important position as the naval race goes on. Apparently, all nations interested in maintaining navies believe profoundly in its future not only as a coast defense, but as a means of making the ocean highways unsafe for surface warships and merchant ships.

The largest submarine in the world is France's famous 2880-ton Surcouf which is armed with two eight-inch guns that make her more than a match for many of the light cruisers. The Surcouf also carries 14 21-inch torpedo tubes adapted for salvo firing. Lacking only six feet of being 400 feet in length and having a 30-foot beam, she has room for a crew of 130 and supplies that give her a 10,0000-mile radius of action. Germany, during the World War, had only one submarine of more than 800 tons displacement.

In a footnote, Jane's comments that the Surcouf is an experimental type not likely to be repeated. The big submarine, it is believed, is too unwieldy, takes too long to dive, and has few advantages over smaller ones.

Along this line, Germany has startled experts with a single-motored submarine which functions with hydrogen and oxygen as under water fuel. Undersea craft of all other navies have Diesel motors for surface and electric for under water. Diesels exhaust the air when used for cruising submerged, thus making electric propulsion necessary. This duplex system takes up a great amount of room because of the size and weight of the electric batteries. Also, the batteries are a source of danger since they develop chlorine gas if sea water comes in contact with them.

UNDER the new system, the radius of action will be increased and higher surface and submerged speed will be possible without additional weight. Germany, restricted until recently by the Versailles treaty, has only 36 submarines thus far. It is not known how many of them have the new single-motor system.

The United States, with 103 submarines, leads the world. France and Italy are second with 93 each, but France is said to have a better developed service. Japan, with 67, some of which could reach the Pacific Coast of the United States and return without refueling, is third. Great Britain, which has been hoping and working for abolition of the submarine, has only 65.

Russia is credited with 60 submarines. One of them is the former L-55, a British submarine sunk with its crew of 55 by the Russians during the brief period of hostility in 1919. It was raised in 1928, and put in service, but sank a few days later with the loss of all on board. It was raised again and still is in service.

Jane's is decidedly skeptical of the reports of Russia's renascent navy, saying, "Despite the Soviet naval commander-in-chief's assertion that the 1933 Russian navy has been increased 715 per cent in the submarine fleet

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

High Lights on Unusual Personalities

MAXWELL ANDERSON · DR. ROSALIE MORTON

Bringing Verse Back to the Stage

THE two most successful playwrights on Broadway this season are William Shakespeare and Maxwell Anderson. Blank verse is the stuff of which Shakespeare wove his timeless dreams. And for Anderson, too, the cadenced phrases have won wealth at the box office and perhaps a nod from posterity as the first American to bring poetry back to the modern drama.

Anderson is a Broadway phenomenon. He is among the first playwrights of our theater, yet he has never been interviewed nor has he ever given out more than a scrap of personal information concerning his career. He who delves into Anderson's background must proceed by routes as devious as those pursued by the playwright in his journey from minister's son to the front rank of American literature.

But he has not been as wary as he might. From a paragraph in San Francisco, a sentence in Kansas City, words dropped here and there the man emerges from his chambered shell. It is a quietly impressive picture of a rare combination—poet and dramatist—of deep learning and a transcendent love of words vivid with imagery.

The story begins, then, in Western Pennsylvania in the winter of 1888 when a son was born to the Rev. and Mrs. William Lincoln Anderson. The elder Anderson was an itinerant Baptist minister following the route of his duties in 17 hamlets in Pennsylvania. His fledgling son studied in schools all over the State and in Ohio, Iowa, Idaho and, finally, North Dakota.

It was during a stop in Northampton, Iowa, that Anderson got his first job — printers' devil. Then the family moved on and the young man entered the University of North Dakota. He drew a job on the copy desk of a newspaper to support himself and in his spare time wrote two senior musical comedies—one when he was a freshman and the other as a junior.

On his graduation he took a position teaching at Stanford University. From there he moved to Whittier College, a Quaker institution from which he was dismissed when he wondered aloud in class what would happen if both sides in a war fervently used the same prayers.

This catapulted him back into the newspaper business and soon he was writing editorials for the San Francisco Bulletin. That was in 1918 at the end of a very noisy war and Anderson took it upon himself to point out that Germany could not possibly pay the war costs of the Allies. The editorial was rejected and he was a free agent.

Off and on Anderson had turned to verse and when he was fired again from a rival paper in San Francisco he got a letter that arrived most fortuitously — there were a wife and two children by this time. It was from Alvin Johnson of New York who wanted Anderson as one of the editors of "The New Republic" solely on the strength of one poem he had seen. Two spinster neighbors chipped in their savings and the Andersons were off.

LATER Anderson joined the New York Globe and just before the paper was sold he got another lucky break—a telephone call. It seemed that the New York World was looking for new editorial blood and had traced the editorials in the Globe to Anderson. Anderson accepted the offer and the playwrighting phase of his career began to form.

His first effort—sometimes he sighs that it was his best—was "White Desert," completed in 1923. It was written in verse and was given a tryout in a small Connecticut summer theater. The audience laughed in the right places in the first scene and Anderson breathed more normally. But when they continued to laugh at what was supposed to be high tragedy the playwright fled.

Lawrence Stallings was the literary editor of "The World" and they used to discuss a play based on Stallings war experiences, without sugar coating. The characters would speak as men in the trenches speak and all the slime, the filth and the horror of war would be bluntly portrayed. For plot they decided to use a tawdry little affair involving two men and a French girl.

The play was "What Price Glory," and it was not only the most successful play of 1924, but it legitimized realism and profanity on the stage. When the royalties poured in Anderson closed his desk at "The World" and made playwrighting his life work.

Maxwell Anderson.

He wrote two more plays with Stallings: "First Night" and "The Buccaneer," both prompt flops. Then he wrote "The Holy Terror" with George Abbott, but this had to be rewritten by another playwright. Also that year, 1925, Anderson wrote "Outside Looking In," which had a social message, and "You Who Have Dreams."

In 1926 came "Saturday's Children" which many critics boomed for the Pulitzer prize, "Gods of the Lightning" was produced in 1927, "Gypsy" in 1928 and "Elizabeth the Queen," in 1930.

"White Desert" was written in blank verse, but not until "Elizabeth the Queen" did Anderson return to that form. In 1933 he went back to prose with "Both Your Houses" which won the Pulitzer prize award of that year as the best American play. It was a satire on Congress.

Someone asked Anderson why he wrote "Elizabeth the Queen" in blank verse.

"BECAUSE," he said, "all the great plays I can remember were in verse. If we are going to have a great theater in this country, somebody has to write verse even if it is written badly. It is at least a beginning."

All this time he was studying Shakespeare intently. With "Winterset" in 1935 Anderson really brought blank verse into its own on the American stage although the play received a mixed greeting. Some critics were jarred by a gangster speaking thus:

Because, look, chief
It's all against science and penology
For you to get out and begin to cuss that way.
Before your prison vittles are out of you. Hell
You're supposed to leave the pen full of high thought,
Kind of noblelike, loving toward all mankind,
Ready to kiss their feet. . . .

But the architecture of the play was generally applauded and although some audiences were confused by measured phrases falling on untutored ears the play was a success. Anderson won honorable mention from "The Nation' magazine and Holly wood leaped in with a sizeable offer which was accepted. Anderson is one playwright with no antipathy to the films as long as checks burdened by ciphers roll toward his bank every week.

"Valley Forge" was also partly in blank verse, but it did not meet the response of "Winterset." Thus emboldened Anderson plunged into a very fury of playwriting as evidenced by this season in which he has brought three works to the stage—"Wingless Victory," "High Tor" and "The Masque of Kings." (Someone asked him whether he were writing a fourth and he replied: "I don't know that I want to. It might get produced.")

Incidentally Shakespeare has had two productions of "Hamlet," one of "Othello" and one of "Richard II."

It was during the production of this season's output that Anderson became better known about Broadway than in all the years past. He likes to go over his plays with the cast and dotes on technical details. Had you been in any of his theaters during rehearsals you would have seen a stocky man, well over 200 pounds, and almost six feet tall, mustached, bespectacled and partial to bow ties.

Anderson wears little jewelry and has no taste for night life. He is particularly fond of his spacious home at New City, New York, which was designed, built and furnished by friends —artists, sculptors, etc.—Anderson, of course, putting up the money

It is in this house that Anderson's plays are written in long hand and in ink. He writes "clean" copy, that is, with few erasures. It is said that he has almost the entire play sketched out in his mind before he starts writing. Another thing the public does not know is that he diverts himself by writing songs; he wrote the words and music for the incidental songs in "Valley Forge."

Anderson's trinity of plays will doubtless have a powerful effect on the course of the drama for the next few years. Some critics hold he is too wordy, his handling of dramatic dialogue too cumbrous, but all praise him for his effort to bring beauty as well as character to the stage.

"High Tor" is a whimsical tale of a young man who refuses to sell a mountain to real estate brokers and of a band of ghosts from one of Henry Hudson's ships waiting for the vessel that is to take them back to Holland. The ghosts have been living on the mountain for centuries and among them is the beautiful "Lise" with whom "Van" falls in love. Finally the ghost ship arrives and the quaint company leaves.

A CHANTEY sounds in the distance and Van tells flesh and blood girl friend, Judith:

Just voices down the wind.
Why, then they were all mist, a fog that hangs along the crevices of the hills, a kind of memory of things you read
In books, things you thought you'd forgotten.
She was here, and she was real, but she was cloud, and gone
And the hill's barren of her.

"The Masque of Kings" is a historical drama based on the tragic romance of Crown Prince Rudolf of Austria and Marie Vetsera, the woman with whom he was found dead in a hunting lodge.

"Wingless Victory" is in some respects the most interesting of Anderson's works this season. Katherine Cornell has given a superb reading of the part of Oparre, proud Princess of the Celebes, brought to a dour New England town by Nathaniel, the American seaman she saved from death. They have children, but Nathaniel's strait-laced family and friends soon make her life unbearable.

She prepares to leave and Nathaniel, suddenly realizing what he is about to lose, goes to her ship to beg forgive-

SHE ROAMED the WORLD as a WOMAN SURGEON

WINTER PARK, Florida.

BUBONIC plague in mud huts and in marble palaces of India, shrapnel wounds in a Serbian field hospital, pleurisy in Labrador where blacksmiths sometimes chiseled off frozen toes, witch doctor cases in South Africa, and obstetrical cases in Fish Head Alley, Philadelphia. Such was the gamut covered by one woman who became a doctor and surgeon 40-odd years ago when a woman had to fight against professional and social prejudice on invading the field of Aesculapius.

With a Virginia Tory for a father and a New Jersey Quaker for a mother, Rosalie Slaughter, now Dr. Rosalie Slaughter Morton, broke from the cherished traditions of Lynchburg, Virginia, and announced her determination to be a doctor.

"I do not want my daughter to earn money," her father declared flatly and sharply. "It is not right that you should go into competition with those who need to support themselves. A gentleman's daughter does not work for money; your field of service is to keep on making us happy, and later to marry a man of your own class. It is essential that society's standards be maintained. . . . Your highest duty is to become a good wife and mother."

"Please understand; do try," Rosalie Slaughter answered. "It isn't that I want money. I just want to be of some real use in this world."

The result was that this daughter of an old Southern family entered the Women's Medical College of Pennsylvania in 1892 with only an annual income of $450 from some bonds her father had given her several years before. Angry and bitterly disappointed in this daughter who adored him, the father gave her no aid.

In winter she lined her thin overcoat with newspapers and debated over and over with herself whether it was more economical to walk five miles and save carfare or spend carfare and save shoe leather. When the heels of her shoes wore down, she cut them off, transforming the remnants into sandals.

In her autobiography, "A Woman Surgeon," just published (by Frederick A. Stokes Company), Dr. Morton stresses the trials and tribulations of getting a medical degree under such circumstances.

As she often has been asked whether she would advise a girl to go through the same struggle, Dr. Morton remarks, "If she is being educated for missionary work, yes. If after proper scholastic education she can borrow enough to see her through four years at medical college, two years of hospital experience and one year of getting established, with the understanding that she will not be expected to pay interest until she has been in practice three years, nor begin to repay capital for five years, yes. Otherwise, no."

DR. MORTON, now living in this city, has no regrets over having deserted a charming, easy social life for one with more hardship and adventure than that of the average man who takes up the practice of medicine. While she has six Yugoslavian decorations and the French Medaille d'Honneur and Palme Academique, Dr. Morton says that the greatest reward lies in knowing that she has been of some service to the well-being of many persons.

Much of this service to humanity was performed while she still was in her twenties and taking postgraduate work in several European cities. In Berlin, Paris, Vienna, London and St. Petersburg, at that time in the heyday of its fascinating society, she made many interesting contacts. She visited Count Tolstoy, the Russian novelist, several times and observed that his mind "was a bridge on which the nation might have crossed from chaos to calm, without fording the disastrous waters." With Hendrik Ibsen, the Norwegian dramatist, she discussed the technique he used in writing his plays.

However, it was one of her postgraduate instructors, Sir Victor Horsley, the famous brain surgeon of London, who sent Dr. Morton on her first real adventure. At his suggestion she went to Bombay, India, in 1906 and aided British physicians for three months in fighting the bubonic plague.

Dr. Rosalie Morton.

The Hindus, because of their religion, stubbornly refused to recognize that "to stamp out an epidemic is social justice." They resorted to deceptions to avoid separation from each other or the marking of their houses with the plague symbol. Dr. Morton often found among the seated figures in a house one or more dead bodies propped up in attitudes of domestic handiwork. The survivors hoped to dispose of the body at night and so keep clear of the doctors.

"Natives, stricken or developing symptoms, were at once removed to hospitals, isolated and possibly cured," Dr. Morton writes. "The families had to be placed in segregation camps. There they were fed and waited on by servants of their own caste. Their huts had to be burned to prevent the spread of pestilence. Yet every step of hygienic procedure desecrated standards sacred to the Hindus. Native fathers cursed with uncomprehending fury when they returned at night and found their families removed to an isolation camp and their homes in ashes. I watched the dramatic human reactions on one side, the methodical, even stolid, scientific progress on the other."

More than once Dr. Morton saw a dying native expending his or her last strength in holding a cow by the tail in hope that the soul might enter the venerated animal. Without this precaution, according to their religion, the soul might enter the body of a rat or even a flea.

In assailing the caste system, Dr. Morton tells of asking a group of men to help her move a man who had fallen from a tree and had been seriously injured. As they merely stood staring stolidly she exclaimed, "Have you no mercy?"

The reply: "He is only a tree climber. We cannot touch him. We must not lose caste."

After practicing in Washington and New York and serving as the first woman professor in the medical school of Columbia University, Dr. Morton spent several months in 1915 as an assistant to Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, famous medical missionary of bleak Labrador. Her cases included a wide variety—a boy who had had tuberculosis of the lungs for 15 years, a man who had had to wait several months for summer to get treatment for an infected knee, a family of seven all suffering from a skin disease, a boy who lost his right hand because of delaying treatment for an infected thumb, a man with a rib-punctured lung, a boy mentally deranged because of a bone pressing on the brain resulting from a fall.

She acquired a nautical vocabulary to understand the simple fishers among whom she worked. A patient with a dislocated joint said it had "slipped its moorings." When inflammation subsided it was said to have "pitched down." Ligaments were "strings" and spines were "keels." A sore throat was a "glutch in kink bone." When Dr. Morton left for New York, the captain of a small steamer, who had been holding it because she was delayed by a last minute emergency operation, bailed to his deck crew, "Cast off! We've hauled the woman aboard!"

She was no sooner back in New York than she set off for the Salonica front as a special commissioner of the Red Cross. In a vast tent hospital on the barren fields of Macedonia, she did her part in caring for 3000 men with never an empty cot. The tents were pitched on a Greek funeral mound where the water drained better than from more level locations.

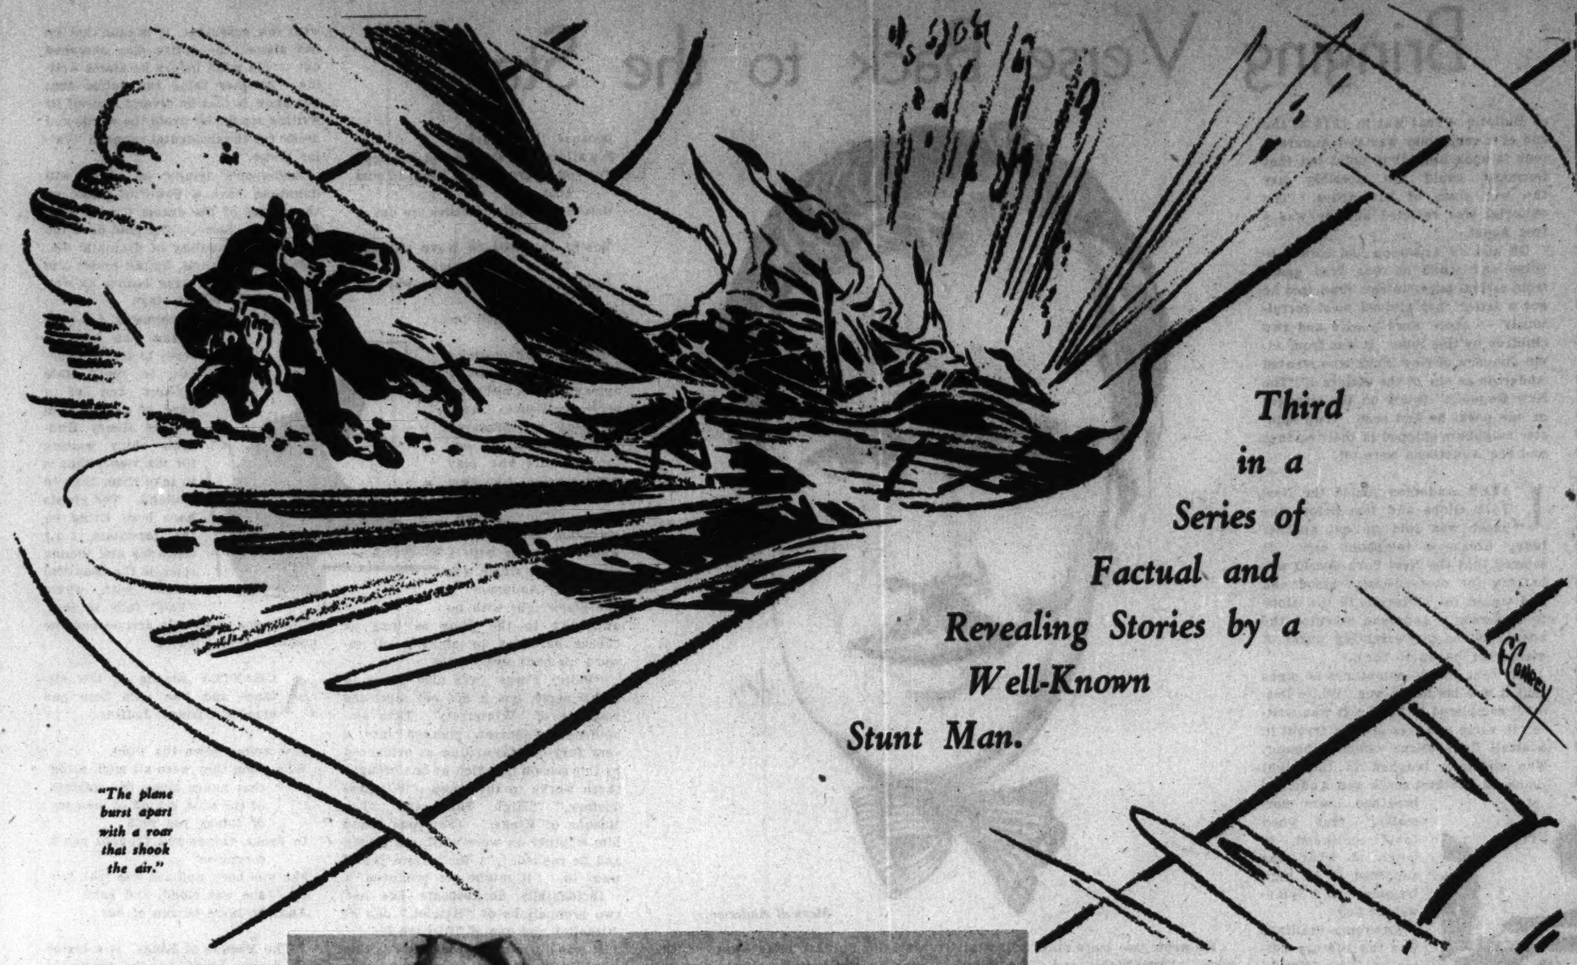
One evening a group of convalescent Serbs came from a neighboring hospital to sing for the wounded French. Some were almost too weak to keep their balance. The French patients lay tensely on their stretchers, hands clenched, knees drawn up, faces white and set with pain. Then the singing began. There were serenades, love songs, gay folk songs, tender and reassuring hymns. The patients relaxed, knees went down, clenched hands unfolded, color came back to cheeks.

"I SAW for the first time," Dr. Morton writes, "two physiological effects of music: the soothing of the nervous system and the stimulation of circulation. The words were all Serbian, and so awoke no reminiscences for the French soldiers. The music alone could account for what I witnessed. The time, the rise and fall of the beat, the depth and sweetness of the voices, made languages unimportant. Nobody died, music turning the tide away from death toward life for many in whom the energy to recover would otherwise have been snuffed out that night."

She found song playing its part at the first line hospital in Dragomancy where exhausted doctors, after a scant meal, would ignore the continued earth-shaking rumble of artillery and sing. . . . "the crash of cannon struck the ear with the sound of doom and the litle songs made one think of things that were soft and tender. . . ."

Dr. Morton returned from these scenes in time to organize the American Women's Hospital units that were sent overseas when the United States entered the war. After the war was over she founded the International Serbian Educational Committee under which 60 Yugoslav students were educated in American universities.

EXPLODING a 'PLANE in the AIR



"The plane burst apart with a roar that shook the air."

Third in a Series of Factual and Revealing Stories by a Well-Known Stunt Man.

By GENE AUSTIN

EVERYTIME my wife hears someone say of movie stunts, "They're done with mirrors," she gets sore. But I don't. I guess it is pretty hard to believe there is someone fool enough to blow up an airplane in mid-air or crash it on its nose or dive through a plate glass window or paddle a canoe over a 70-foot waterfall for the few bucks it takes to pay the hospital bill that results.

I'd just as soon they went on thinking it's done with mirrors because that means they think I'm smart enough to take the buck and pass it, too. But my wife looks at it differently. She was sitting on the ground looking up when I started to explode the airplane in mid-air and she saw the plane burst apart with a roar that shook the air and saw me leave the cockpit like I was in a hurry —like I was taking leave of the business end of a kicking mule's foot.

"Are you alive?" she asked me when I reached earth. "I haven't had time to find out yet," I told her.

So she feels pretty strong about movie stunts and the next time you say, in the middle of a climax scene of a movie, "Aw nuts, it's done with mirrors or something," and a little lady comes along and pushes your face through the back of your head, you'll know that's no little lady, that's my wife.

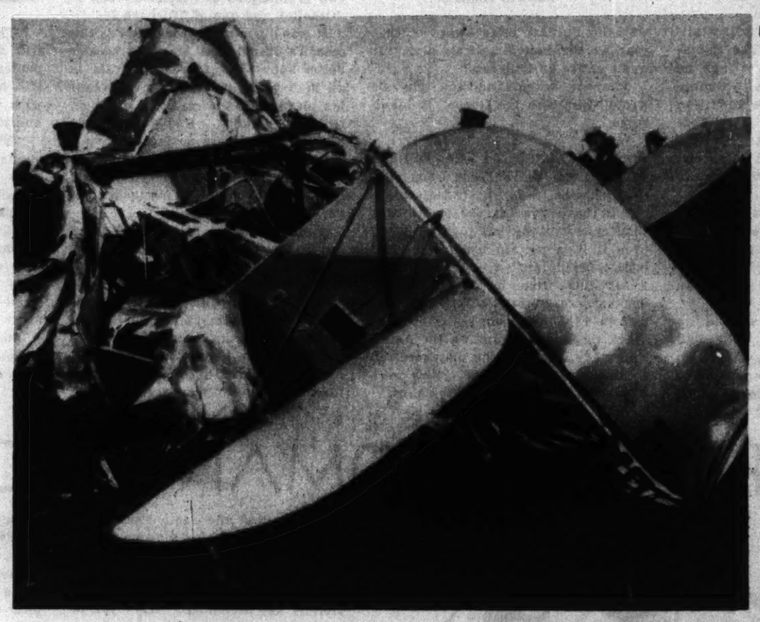
There is one sure thing about pulling any stunt and that is, you never can tell. The owner of "Stunts, Incorporated" came up to me one day and said, "There's $1500 in it for you, if you blow up a plane so's we can take a picture of it. Not burn it," he said, "blow it up. Make it go boom with a bang."

"Man, you're a darling," I said and sat down to figure out a way to do it.

Some of the boys had tried before to blow up planes with a fuse to the gas tank, but it was more blow out than blow up. The fire took too long to work itself up into an explosion and by the time the explosion came the plane was too far off for it to mean anything to the cameras.

Well, I thought I'd be smart. I'd put black powder and gun cotton in the gas tank in front of the forward cockpit and when the fuse reached her she'd go wham! All over the whole blamed Western hemisphere. I had a vent punched into the top of the gas tank to make it split wide open at the first impulse and hung a smoke pot in the motor to give a nice and fancy effect.

I tested fuses till I had everybody sore at me, but I had to have this stunt figured fine. I tested them with a stop watch and found out that I'd have from five to seven seconds to do the job. That is, contact the dry cell battery between my feet to set off the smoke pot, pull the friction cap off the fuse to the gas tank, release my safety belt, pull a dummy that looked (not too much) like me into the seat and set it to sit straight, leap from the cockpit and free-fall 500 feet out of the way of all the pop and fuss and fire up above.



"Four people were killed in this crash. Stunt men duplicate it exactly with minor difficulty."

A couple of rehearsals and I knew I could do it and I went up with an easy conscience and practically a song on my lips. Quite the buckaroo I felt that day because everything was going to be just jim dandy and $1500 was a powerful sum of dough and meant plenty of upsy-daisy days ahead.

AND so everything did go jim dandy—for the boss, because instead of getting a picture of a dummy being blown out of a cockpit he got a picture of a real man being done same to. What happened was, something went wrong with the fuse. The spark shot through it like lightning en route to the family barn and just about the time I had one foot on the cowling and was getting ready to root myself out into space, something did it for me. The whole world waltzed up right under me and smacked me in the seat of the pants and sent me blasting up into the sky all sparks and flame, twisting like a rocket in a shower of plane splinters and embers.

What do I remember of that moment? It was a moment in which death had a hold right on my collar—yet so many things happened at once that I can hardly remember any of them.

I remember whipping the dummy into place and seeing it sag forward and pushing it in the face to get it to rest easy. And I remember giving one last look around—my foot on the cowling —to see that everything was as it should be, the smoke pouring from the pot in the motor and the spark crawling frantically down the fuse, the black of the fuse graying into ash. And I saw suddenly, horribly a flick of ash just over the gas tank and knew the spark was about to hit the gun powder and stood there rooted in terror for one single, short, agonized breath and felt the sweat break all over me in flood tide. That was the last thing before the roar in my ears, the whole world crashing around me, long, jagged streaks of color racing past as I shook and shattered through space. It took a long time. It lasted endlessly. Suddenly the air was clear and the thundering in my head stopped and I pulled the parachute and came down easily.

I didn't know, until after my wife had asked me if I was still alive, that I was hurt, that the explosion had blown me right through the wall of the cockpit and that a sliver from it was sticking in my shin bone. I never did the stunt again. I never wanted to and I never had the chance. We saw a shot of the stunt in "Dawn Patrol" and another of it in "Devil Dogs of the Air" and because that's me—and no dummy—catapulting into the sky, my wife to this day calls me "My Clark Gable."

I never got a chance to do it again because they had the shot from a dozen different angles. Literally, the whole movie stunt business has been shot to pieces. They keep the stuff on file and they've got all they will ever need now—and it's going to take some thinking to think up a way of breaking your neck that hasn't been recorded already.

There are several kinds of crashes a man used to be able to do to make a living before the cameras and the easiest of them all was "ground looping." It gives spectators a great big kick in the heart, but once you learn your way around what it means to you is a yawn. The movie boys found out about that and scaled the price down fast until it hit a low of $300. But what they were doing was reducing grand larceny to petty larceny.

THE movie spectator sees a plane coming in, apparently out of control, sees it hit the ground with a terrific crash, sees it whirl wildly around on its nose, teeter on the edge of a somersault and then right itself. "Whew!" he says and chews his gum faster.

But the stunt man who does it never has to say "whew!" and maintains his gum chewing at a placid rate throughout. He comes in at the regular landing speed—40 or 50 miles an hour. He is strapped in tight in the cockpit. He has to be careful to hit on one wheel and the wing tip. The wing tip pancakes fine and there is a good lot of celluloid feet of canvas shredding, wood splintering and wire tangling into a mess. The pilot gets slewed around somewhat and is likely to get a feeling that his head is going to snap right off his neck, but no one has ever been killed doing a ground loop and if you can't get killed, why that's practically a day off at the races.

Next highest in the scale is the flipflop. You used to get about $500 for this, but the money was hardly earned. The spectator got his package of thrill out of it, but he became a lot more excited than the stunt man. Naturally, too, because he saw more.

What he saw was a plane—probably shot down in a dog fight —come smashing down to earth, land with a body-shaking crash, bounce high into the air, flop over and come shattering down a second time flat on its back. What made it plenty exciting was the motor. The motor always ripped loose from its mount and went bounding down the landscape, flopping like a fish out of water, and ripping divots that would make cannon fire look like a Sunday golfer operating through an afternoon's pleasure.

But, as long as the stunt man did it with a biplane he was pretty safe. The upper wing spread and tail had surface enough to support the plane when it came pancaking down in the final half of the flipflop. So all he had to do was come in for a landing at a little better than safe speed—say 60 miles and hour—jam on the brakes the instant the wheels touched earth and the rest would take care of itself. All he would know is that half a minute later he was hanging head down from the cockpit held nice and cozy by his safety belt. That motor was a worry, however. There wasn't much chance that it would come prancing into the cockpit and take care of you pronto, but whatever slim chance there was worried you —and you charged $200 extra for the worry.

Next in line comes the whole series of crashes that only Dick Grace—that crashing fool—will do. Maybe you never saw Dick Grace's face in the movies, but if you ever saw a plane go smacking deep into the earth and emerge on the bounce to go bounding and sundering all over the landscape —well that was Dick giving vent to his art. He's got a stranglehold on his job. No one else wants it.

Dick once told me the secret of his success—a "crash-proof" cockpit. I don't know quite what it was proof against. Dick has broken his neck, his arms, his legs and every bone in his body. Maybe it gave him moral support. Anyway, it has what are euphoniously termed "crash-proof pads" all over it, but what is particularly special about it is a bulkhead up forward. This is arranged so that if the motor came tearing back towards him, it would hit the bulkhead and knock the cockpit right out of the fuselage and clear of all the mess. It has come in handy more than once. I'd rather fall over a cliff any day than have a motor come up and sit in my lap.

Dick has one other life-saving device. When he hits, he always hits between the nose and the wing tip. That way — if he is thrown out—he will depart from his "crash-proof cockpit" through the side and has a 50-50 chance of flying free of all the singing, stinging red hot pieces of metal that go flying about deadly as bullets every time a plane crashes.

He gets $1500 a crack-up, but I've always thought it was a losing game. You have to pay your own hospital bills when you take a movie job and I'll bet that when Dick started to add up he found out he owed himself money after some of those crashes. But, like most stunt men, he gets a kick out of his work and I don't think he'd want to do anything else. He's a grand pilot and never has had any amateur crack-ups. When that boy crashes, it's in the interests of his art as a stunt man.

The most dangerous of all the crashes you see in the movies is the tail spin. That's death on wheels for anyone who tries it—or practically anyone. I know one—and I think he is unique on earth —who lived through a tail spin.

HE IS George Heindricks. He was 16 then and plane crazy, a kid who hung around Curtiss Field with his mouth open as the aviators went bustling in and out of their ships. Harry Gannon thought one day to give him a thrill and took him up in a Moth biplane. George was in the rear cockpit, Harry sitting forward in the student's seat. At 1000 feet, the ship went suddenly, inexplicably into a tail spin. When we reached the place where it landed, the motor was nine feet down in the swamp with Harry's body under it. George was still sitting in the rear cockpit. He had no teeth left and blood was bubbling and smoking down his face like swamp water, but he was conscious and remained that way throughout.

It is very easy to kick a plane into a tail spin for the movie cameras. You put the nose of your ship down, bank it hard, kick the opposite rudder and there you are —screaming in a vertical spin towards earth. Around and around you go—whoosh!—socking first against one side of the cockpit and the other, lurching, lunging, banging your head sprawling loose on your neck.

The real problem is not how to get into it, but how to get out of it. There is no sure way—not even with a parachute. But the rules are as follows:

The first, and hardest thing to do—hardest because the minute your head starts spinning, you get frantic—is let go all the controls. If that doesn't work after 30 seconds, you head the nose straight for the earth and gun the motor. If that doesn't work, get out and, as they say, walk.

The trouble with trying to work out of a tail spin is by the time you've used up the two available and uncertain remedies you're where nothing at all can help you. You're where it's too late even for prayer. What I've always done is jump.

But even that is no lead pipe cinch. The movie boys think otherwise and see it only as regulation parachute hop for which they are willing to pay not more than $100. That's why you seldom see a real tail spin in the movies.

I FINALLY worked out a pretty safe way to bail out of a tail spinning plane. This was to jump exactly opposite to the direction of the spin. But you get such an all-fired awful shaking up during the spin that I wasn't going to endure it for a mere $100.

Theres one thing that ought to be pointed out about all these movie stunts. You can do them with only one parachute and that means plenty of rise in the old blood pressure when you're letting loose your bag in the midst of a hurtling tangle of sparks and hot metal and burning wood. The 'chute has to be dry to have resiliency and if it catches fire, it is likely to go up in a single puff of smoke and that leaves you right in the middle of the air with nothing to hang on to except a cloud.

The reason you can take only the one parachute is that you have to stick to your plane until the very last second to make sure it keeps in camera range and that means when you do leave the cockpit it's always in a mean kind of hurry. Two 'chutes would make you too bulky. You'd have to squeeze loose from the cockpit and—in movie work—that split second is likely to mean the difference between life and death.

One 'chute makes bailing out of a tail spin just twice as dangerous because what with flopping around, you never know what you're going to catch on. Ben Grew, one of the best test pilots that ever was, found that out in the last minute of his life. He spent it trying to bail out. His rip cord fouled on the side of the cockpit and his parachute, leaping out into the slip stream, fouled on the tail of the ship. Ben, dangling on the cat walk, became panicky, tried to leap, was left clutching air. He succeeded only in pulling the plane into a tail spin and both he and the pilot were killed.

rush of the cobras, and push them back if they tried to come out or strike. Just as soon as I deemed it advisable these snakes were gently touched and patted. It was quite brief at first, as one might guess, for never had anyone taken such liberties. In a remarkably short time they lost their fear of me and expressed no surprise at my appearance or anything I did while caring for them. Carefully and cautiously I continued my friendship. To my great delight they responded beyond my greatest expectations. They were always very alert and showed much intelligence. It was almost uncanny and I was astounded at the ease and speed with which these deadly snakes were tamed.

WHEN it came time for the shedding of their skins, almost a month after their arrival, I naturally pondered the method best to pursue. Cobras rarely shed the eye-covering, or eye-plates, it was said, so I anticipated having to remove these, at least. Sure enough, their tattered skins remained for the most part, clinging to their lithe, graceful bodies. These had to be removed, and it was very evident that the eye covering was also tightly adhering to the skin. The snakes, now quite tame, permitted me to handle them and also to forcibly feed them. I removed the loose skin by wetting it and carefully peeling it off, a piece at a time. I patted them gently, as one would stroke any other animal pet. Then the eye covering was carefully removed without any resentment or concern on the part of the cobras. They were utterly unafraid. These wonderful snakes also permitted me to bathe and weigh them.

These experiments have been prompted by the sincere and conscientious desire to learn scientific facts and make helpless captives comfortable and contented—the least one can do, when an animal has been deprived of its liberty.

At no time have I entertained any thoughts of showing off—I have only tried to show what kindness will accomplish and how remarkable is the behavior of these, our most feared and misunderstood animals, under sympathetic conditions.

As the NAVAL RACE GATHERS MOMENTUM

and 300 per cent in the seagoing surface vessels, there is little evidence of any considerable amount of new construction. Even as regards submarines, on which efforts have been chiefly concentrated, there is ground for suspecting some exaggeration."

ON THE opposite page, attention is called to England's conversion of five over-age cruisers into what might be called anti-aircraft battery ships, a new type of ship. These vessels, 450 feet long and displacing 4290 tons, have been rearmed with 10 four-inch anti-aircraft guns and about as many heavy caliber machine guns as can be squeezed on the decks and fighting tops. Their sole purpose is to resist air raids on fleets or harbors.

Taking up aircraft carriers, the yearbook reveals that the tendency is toward smaller ships in order not to expose a fleet to the danger of losing a large number of its planes through sinking or damaging of one carrier.

While the Japanese navy appears at first to be inferior to the navies of England and the United States, the difference is not as great as tonnage alone indicates. In the first place, the Japanese navy is 75 per cent modern while that of the United States is only 57 per cent and that of England 47 per cent. Furthermore, the Mikado's ships are said by most naval critics to show a greater all round value than any others because habitability is sacrificed ruthlessly in order to cram hulls with turret bases, engines, and torpedo flats. In this way the fighting qualities per ton of displacement are very high.

Occasionally, however, Japan has overdone this, as witnessed in 1934 by the capsizing of the torpedo boat Tomoduru and the drowning of 100 of the crew of 113. Too much top hamper and over gunning, for which Nipponese ships are famous, caused the vessel to overturn.

BRINGING VERSE BACK to the STAGE

ness. Oparre answers:

You've been ashamed to call me
yours — ashamed to say
"she's mine" in any company—and I'm ashamed to say that you were mine, and my dark body remembers you.
I hold you free of blame.
You're but one of a colorless tribe that's said: Those who are black are slaves, to be driven, slept with, beaten, sent on, never loved.
Beyond law, we are reptilian,
to be trodden.
You I forgive, but not your tribe or race — or the white of your hands; the insult I have had the blood in me will not forgive.
I will be no man's slave nor will my daughters.

NATHANIEL swears his repentance, but Oparre, in another of Anderson's magnificent speeches, interrupts:

And though you swear till the night come down in fire to vouch your word, you are not believed, and my blood, my dark blood, richer and prouder than your own, will pour on the ground before I stretch a hand to the race
you drew from.
We are less than you.
You part the earth among you, burdening us with your labor and your lust.
Among yourselves you think to breed and rule, breed up in men a race of kings to climb through the centuries on us who bear you.
But your veins turn pale; your pride is the pride of merchants, crawling; your anger—your very anger's afraid of death, and crawls lest you should die.
You will need us then, your race of kings will breed water-thin in the after-time for what we could lend you — fire at the heart, the word that goes with the hand, a dignity savage, imperial, choosing, rather to die than live unwanted.

There's an ironic touch to Anderson's career that must be mentioned. He has written many beautiful phrases such as the above yet he is most famous for a prose line that wowed the town in "What Price Glory." It is:

"Hey, wait for baby."

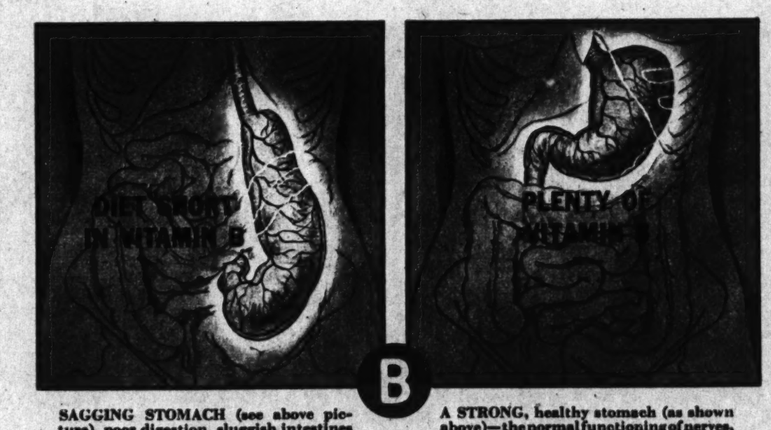
Many Diets Short In Vitamins

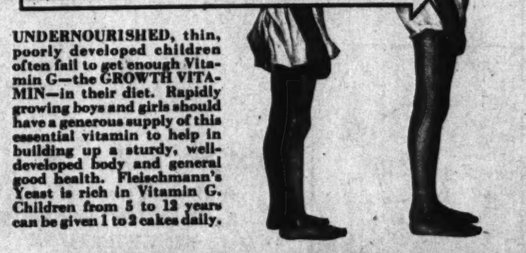
Few People Realize Whether Their Meals Are Undersupplied with Vitamins —Until Ill Health Shows It

But, by Adding ONE FOOD to Your Regular Diet, You Can Be Sure of A REGULAR SUPPLY Of These 4 VITAMINS Every Day



SAGGING STOMACH (see above picture), poor digestion, sluggish intestines and many obscure nervous troubles can result from too little Vitamin B—the NERVE VITAMIN.

A STRONG, healthy stomach (as shown above)—the normal functioning of nerves, intestines and bowels—all require ample Vitamin B—the NERVE VITAMIN—each day. Add Fleischmann's Yeast to your regular diet to increase your supply of Vitamin B. It is one of the richest natural food sources of this NERVE VITAMIN.



UNDERNOURISHED, thin, poorly developed children often fail to get enough Vitamin G—the GROWTH VITAMIN—in their diet. Rapidly growing boys and girls should have a generous supply of this essential vitamin to help in building up a sturdy, well-developed body and general good health. Fleischmann's Yeast is rich in Vitamin G. Children from 5 to 12 years can be given 1 to 2 cakes daily.

HERMAN BRIX

Well-known Shot-Put Champion—has the sturdy body and vigorous strength that show he is well supplied with these 4 essential vitamins—A, B, D and G.

MANY PEOPLE today suffer from some degree of vitamin deficiency, because their meals do not provide enough of these health-building food elements.

A shortage of even one of these important food elements can undermine your vitality and lower your resistance to disease.

The addition of just one food—FLEISCHMANN'S fresh YEAST—helps to increase your supply of these vitamins. It assures you an EXTRA daily quota of 4 important vitamins—A, B, D and G—over and above what your ordinary meals provide.

No other one natural food gives you such a rich supply of these 4 combined vitamins.

Just eat 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast daily—one cake about ½ hour before each meal. Eat it plain, or dissolved in a little water. Start now to build up your vitamin health. Order 2 or 3 days' supply at a time from your grocer. Fleischmann's Yeast keeps perfectly in the icebox.

Undersupplied with Vitamin D — Well supplied with Vitamin D

BADLY FORMED teeth (like those shown in plaster cast on left, above) may result from lack of enough Vitamin D—the BONE VITAMIN. To help develop attractive, strong teeth, children especially, need plenty of Vitamin D. 1 to 2 cakes of Fleischmann's fresh Yeast daily provide a rich supply of this BONE VITAMIN for children from 5 to 12 years old.

A

NOT ENOUGH VITAMIN A

INCREASED SUSCEPTIBILITY to frequent colds—weakened nose and throat linings—and lowered general resistance—may come from an undersupply of Vitamin A. Tests prove large numbers of people do not get enough of this vitamin. Let Fleischmann's Yeast help to increase your daily supply of Vitamin A.

COMIC TOTEM POLE

By WALTER DAHLGREN

Just as modern peoples use symbols (such as the American Eagle, the British Lion, etc.) to represent nations, or armorial bearings to represent individuals—so American Indians used the Totem Pole. A totem stood for a tribe or a clan or even a single warrior. Many totem poles were very tall, always weird in appearance and sometimes grotesquely comic.

DIRECTIONS—Mount everything upon very thin cardboard—then cut out the parts. Be sure to cut out the circles "A-A" and "C-C," also cut the slits "B-B." Fold parts "D, E and F," insert into proper openings, already cut for them, and paste (stars indicate paste) tabs to back. Make main portion of totem pole and paste together as noted. Insert it into circular base and paste the four tabs to underside. Now you are ready for the last step—insert the wings "G" into slits "B-B;" then insert the arms "H and K" into holes "A and B" and your totem pole is completed. BRING ON THE INJUNS!

BUBBLES AND RIPPLE—Two happy, fast-swimming mermaids.

Poor Hipperty Hop and Willie Web-foot—Commodore Shell-Back caught them as they were standing on the beach the other day, and changed them into salt water breathers. Then he made them follow him down into the ocean to the court of King Neptune. Now Neptune is angry at Hipperty and Willie for breaking one of his rules. And we see him scolding the unfortunate Hickory Hollowites as

THE PLAY BEGINS

KING NEPTUNE—So you were foolish enough to cross the equator without paying homage to my court. What have you to say for yourselves? Speak up!!

HIPPERTY HOP—W-w-we d-didn't m-mean any h-harm.

WILLIE WEB-FOOT—W-w-we didn't see any equator — it wasn't there when w-we f-flew h-by. (Neptune is very much amused as what Hipperty and Willie have to say for themselves, and his anger rises only to a strong liking for the two travelers.)

KING NEPTUNE—Very well, then. Be it as you say. And to repay you for the trouble I have caused you, I give you the run of my court. Bubbles and Ripple will show you to your quarters. (And before Hipperty and Willie can thank the King, two beautiful mermaids dart down and take them on their backs and swim swiftly away. Poor Willie—he wonders what King Neptune means by "their quarters," but with Hipperty it is different. He is too surprised and frightened to even wonder.)

Exercise and strengthen the intestinal muscles

This is the story of a young lady who was determined to be healthy. Every morning, she did her setting-up exercises. Over the week-end—tennis and swimming. Yet, she still suffered from habitual constipation.

Then she heard of a new kind of exercise—a laxative with "exercising action."

After breakfast and dinner, she takes a teaspoonful of Sarâka*. Its principal ingredient is bassorit, sap of an East Indian tree. In Sarâka, this comes in tiny granules which are easily swallowed with a glass of water. During the next two hours, these granules undergo an amazing change. Gradually they e-x-p-a-n-d. And turn into soft BULK.

"Get busy and exercise," this extra bulk signals to lazy intestinal muscles. "This is what you've been waiting for during all these sluggish months—something to exercise on—something to make you stronger."

*Bulk Plus Motility

In addition—to make sure that the extra bulk keeps in motion—Sarâka contains a specially prepared frangula, which mildly stimulates the intestines to healthy activity. So you have Bulk Plus Motility—a combination not found in ordinary laxatives.

In fact, laxative is the wrong word for Sarâka. Its results are so natural yet thorough that most users have no sensation of having taken a laxative. They are reminded of healthy childhood when chronic constipation was unknown.

Before changing to a new laxative it is wise to consult your family physician. We suggest that you ask your doctor about Sarâka. We are confident he will tell you that it is safe and non-habit forming. You will find this modern laxative at your druggist's. Save money by buying the new "Hospital Size." SAFEGUARD YOURS BY NEVER GIVING A REMEDY YOUR DOCTOR HAS NOT APPROVED

THERE is one point, it's safe to say, on which practically all doctors and children's specialists, educators and writers on child welfare agree. That is: Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first.

All mothers know this. But not all practice it. For often the instinct to save a few pennies by buying "something just as good" overcomes caution and sound judgment.

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy—"milk of magnesia"—many doctors for over half a century have said "PHILLIPS." For Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is the standard of the world. Safe for children. Made in a laboratory devoted solely to making this important remedy; there is no other quite "like it." For the process for making genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia was originated in the Phillips laboratories.

Keep this in mind, and say "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" when you buy. Comes now, also in tablet form that children take without argument. Tablets that taste like peppermint candy, and that contain the equivalent of the liquid Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Get the form you prefer. READ HOW COLGATE DENTAL CREAM PROTECTS YOU!

TESTS PROVE THAT 76% OF ALL PEOPLE OVER THE AGE OF 17 HAVE BAD BREATH! AND WE DENTISTS KNOW THAT MOST BAD BREATH BEGINS WITH THE TEETH!

TESTS conducted among 2,152 men and women (of all ages and from all walks of life) prove that 76% of all people over the age of 17 have bad breath! And tests also prove that most bad breath comes from improperly cleaned teeth!

Ordinary cleansing methods, which merely polish the exposed surfaces of your teeth, fail to remove the decaying food deposits in hidden crevices between your teeth. And these deposits, tests prove, are the source of most bad breath—of dull, dingy teeth—and of much tooth decay.

But Colgate Dental Cream has a special penetrating foam which gets into all those tiny crevices—emulsifying and washing away those food and acid deposits that cause bad breath.

And at the same time, Colgate's soft, safe polishing agent gently yet thoroughly cleans and brightens the enamel—makes your teeth sparkle—gives new brilliance to your smile.

So brush your teeth, gums, and tongue with Colgate Dental Cream at least twice daily and have cleaner, brighter teeth and a sweeter, purer breath.

For years, Scott's Emulsion has been recognized as a reliable source of Vitamin A. Also of Vitamin D, so important to infants and children in the prevention of rickets, malformed bones and imperfect teeth caused by a Vitamin D deficiency. Get a bottle of this great tonic from your druggist today.

● Pimples often spoil good times after the start of adolescence—from about 13 to 25. Important glands develop at this time. The entire body is disturbed. The skin gets oversensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin—pimples break through!

Fleischmann's Yeast helps correct adolescent pimples by clearing these skin irritants out of the blood. Eat 3 cakes every day. One or two cakes cannot do the work. Eat a cake about ½ hour before each meal—plain, or in a little water. Start today!

Ten toes to wiggle— a doll to cuddle— He's HAPPY!

KEEP HIM THAT WAY. KEEP HIM SAFE AND HEALTHY, TOO. CHOOSE HIS FIRST SOLID FOOD WITH CARE. . . From cuddly dolls to lullabies — there are a thousand different ways to make your baby coo with happiness!

But to keep him thriving at first solid food time . . . that is a different story. There is only one right way to go about it: seek the advice of your doctor: then follow his instructions to the letter.

A wrong choice of the first solid food can easily bring on loss of weight, lowered vitality, and disturbing upsets. On the other hand, it is the well nourished, properly gaining infant who is best equipped to ward off many of the ailments of the first year.

Your doctor will probably advise Cream of Wheat. Ask him to tell you about the ease with which it is digested in inexperienced little systems . . . its purity and safety . . . its remarkable uniformity in texture and taste . . . its freedom from harsh parts of the grain. Learn how readily and how economically it supplies food energy of the kind babies need to help them keep active and gain weight.

Cream of Wheat is not made from just a single wheat. It has all the virtues of a select blend of the best produced by all the growing areas. Millions of mothers through 42 years have raised fine, sturdy babies on delicious Cream of Wheat.

"AH-H-H-H, Cream of Wheat . . . that's my dish! The more I eat, the more I want. It's some builder-upper, isn't it, Mommy?"

"SAY, what is this nonsense anyway? I want on! Of course I'm up to weight . . . I eat my Cream of Wheat every day!"

"SORRY, Teddy, it must be the cave man in me. Or maybe it's just the extra energy that swell Cream of Wheat is giving me!"

- Cream of Wheat is rich in a type of carbohydrate second only to sugar in speed of assimilation.
- Doesn't tax digestions. Even delicate young systems handle Cream of Wheat with ease.
- Is a good source of the food energy needed by every child.
- As part of an adequate diet, it encourages steady weight gains.

ACCEPTED AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSN. Council on Foods

Important: The Council on Foods of the American Medical Association has awarded to Cream of Wheat the "Seal of Acceptance". This officially indicates that this famous hot cereal and the advertising for it are acceptable to the Council.
